ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.
 The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected; and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.
 The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.
 The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits, may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to July 28; Madras, July 29; Bombay, July 31.

Rumour gains strength that early in January the Viceroy will hold chapters of the Orders of the Star of India and the Indian Empire, to which all members of both Orders are to be invited.

It is stated that Sir Charles Pritchard will shortly be elevated to a seat in the Viceregal Council, and that the Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore will succeed him in the Bombay Council.

Sir Charles Crosthwaite's place in the Legislative Council will not be filled till it is known whether the Secretary of State has arranged to reappoint him in January.

Sir James Lyall's term of office as Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab expires on April 3 next, but it is his intention to vacate on March 1, with a view to utilising the best season for the journey home by way of Japan and America.

Colonel Hugh Richard Hope, deputy adjutant-general of the Madras Army, has been selected by Lord Wenlock to succeed General Kenny Herbert as military secretary to the Madras Government.

Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, British Agent at Gilgit, will probably visit Simla shortly in connection with the recent events in the Hunza-Nagar Valley.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Aug. 16:—Owing to the recent religious riots in Calcutta, and the strained relations between the Hindoos and the Mahomedans, some anxiety has been felt lest the Mohurrum Festival, which has been going on for the last ten days, might be marked by fresh outbreaks of disorder. The authorities have, however, taken every possible precaution.

The processions which form the main feature of the festival have been accompanied by large bodies of police, and so far everything has passed off quietly; and, as this is the last day of the festival, it is to be hoped that all the danger is now passed.

It has been calculated that the cost of building new barracks at Hong Kong, to accommodate a battalion of native infantry, which is to be raised in India for service there, will be 80,000*l.*, while the regiment will cost some 40,000*l.* annually. These charges fall upon the English military budget.

On account of the damage occasioned by the locusts and the failure of the rains, the Government of India has wired to the Secretary of State for permission to at once commence the construction and extension of the Sind-Saugor line to Attock as a famine relief work.

The works about to be started do not merely include the extension of the Sind-Saugor Railway northward, but the making of a branch from Attock southwards to the Kushalgarh-Pindi line.

Owing to the heavy rains many breaks had been made in the embankments of the Bombay and Baroda Railway between Billimora and Mehmabad, a distance of about 156 miles, and through traffic was entirely stopped.

Fifteen inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours at Mahuva, in the Bhojnagar State. The town was flooded breast high. Houses were demolished, and 300 lives and much cattle were reported to be lost. The telegraph was interrupted. Relief measures were being taken by the Maharaja.

It has been decided to relay the Bolan Railway as a temporary line, and work will be begun in September. The line will be maintained until the new railway on the Mashkaf route or Zhob Valley line is built.

The Khojak Tunnel is now so far practically finished that it has been decided to take up the rails on the inclines over the Kwaja-Amran Range. These, however, will be kept stored ready for use, so that in case of accidents they can be relaid in a few days.

The promoters of the Simla-Kalka Railway have asked the Government to allow a slight alteration in the terms, and request the substitution of guarantee instead of subsidy of one lac and a half for ten years, and one lac for a further term of ten years before promised.

The extension recently sanctioned of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway is a short line, thirty miles, from Sambulpore Road Station to Sambulpore itself, and not the more ambitious project of linking Sambulpore with Cuttack.

Nearly 12 crores of rupees were coined and issued from the Indian Mints in 1890. This is the largest issue since the year 1877. The total number of rupees issued since 1835 amount to over 310 crores, of which 126 crores have been coined in Calcutta.

There was a remarkable increase in the amount of the Indian salt revenue in June. Omitting miscellaneous salt receipts, the total for the whole of India amounted to nearly 81 lacs of rupees, as against about 64 lacs during June 1890, and less than 62 lacs for June 1889. The totals for the three months, April, May, and June this year, are also greater than any recorded during the last lustrum—241 lacs as against 224 lacs in 1890, 222 in 1889, 220 in 1888, and 170 in 1887. Bengal and Madras are responsible for the largest increases.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times :—

SEDITIONIOUS PUBLICATIONS.

AUG. 13.—In the High Court to-day counsel for the Government moved for a rule calling upon the editor of the Indian Mirror, a native newspaper, to show cause why a writ of attachment for contempt of Court should not issue against him for publishing an article on the Bangabasi case, in which, while leaving it to the judge and jury to decide whether the writings complained of were seditious, he described the prosecution as an attempt to stifle the voice of Indian criticism and to terrorise the native Press. Counsel, while disclaiming any wish on the part of the Government to appear vindictive, said that such an article was calculated seriously to prejudice the prosecution. The editor of the Indian Mirror, who was in court, undertook by his counsel not to write on the case again while it was sub judice. The Crown accepted the undertaking and the matter was dropped.

AUG. 16.—The prosecution of the Bangabasi for seditious libel still attracts much attention. It appears to have caused some alarm among the other native papers, for it is reported that a meeting of their conductors has been held for the purpose of forming a defence association. The case will be tried at the next criminal sessions of the High Court, which begin on Wednesday. Probably the Chief Justice will preside.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

AUG. 14.—The Governor of Madras starts on a tour in the affected districts to-day. There has been some rain in North Arcot, the fall varying from 3 inches to 5 inches. The Government has engaged a sanitary expert of high reputation to report on the schemes connected with the sanitation and drainage of Madras and the improvement of the River Cooum, which have been under consideration for many years.

We have received the following telegrams from the India Office for publication :—

"From Viceroy, Aug. 14.—Agricultural prospects during past week. Reports show good general rainfall in Northern, Western, and Central India. Prospects greatly improved in North-West Provinces, Punjab, Rajpootana; parts of two last provinces in need of more rain; special inquiry is being made as to the North-West Provinces. We are expecting to hear result at the end of the month. Madras reports that prospects continue unfavourable. Want of rain in Mysore. No actual distress requiring interference by State anywhere at present except in Madras, where local Government is doing everything considered desirable to relieve distress. Last report from local Government shows some improvement in condition of affected area, and prices stationary."

"From Governor, Madras, Aug. 14.—During this week good rain has fallen in parts of Ganjam, Nellore, Cuddapah, Chinglepoot, North Arcot, which has improved matters in affected tracts."

G U P.

THE humours of the Home press where India is concerned are as delightful in their way (says the Times of India) as those of the Baboo who takes to English composition. One of the London clerical papers goes into raptures in a recent issue over the "welcome news from India" that "three Bengal regiments have been converted," and adds that Providence "has indeed blessed our work." The news will probably be much more welcome to the Church Times than to the regiments concerned—which, by the way, are Madras, not Bengal, regiments—who by no means relish a "conversion" which, so far as the officers and men are concerned, is only a pleasanter word for abolition. Another home journal descants in a powerfully satirical spirit upon the folly which "induces sympathy with a barbarian like the Manipore Senaputty, whose civilisation is still so rudimentary that he feeds on insects." At a first glance this allusion is somewhat puzzling, but a little patient investigation makes it nearly as clear as mud. The narrative of Signaller Williams, it appears, got slightly mangled in the course of being cabled home, and the last sentence of it came out in some of the London papers as: "Williams describes the Senaputty as a man who eats beetles all day and admires himself every five or ten minutes in a looking-glass." By such simple means is the innocent habit of chewing betel-nut converted into "An Extraordinary Story from Manipore."

The Pioneer correspondent at Simla writes (July 22) :—There are many ways of keeping one's birthday at home and abroad; but Lord William Beresford certainly hit upon the happiest method of all when he issued invitations for a children's fancy-dress ball at the Town Hall. Last Monday afternoon there gathered in the large ball-room, to wish their kindly host many happy returns of the day, over a hundred little ones, some very wee indeed, in that fanciful attire which always sits so well on children who have not the self-consciousness of their elders when masquerading. Friends, parents, and other relatives of these Lilliputians mustered even in greater force for this birthday festival; they were spectators for the nonce, though their enjoyment also was not forgotten. The ball-room was bright with flags; the Viceroy's band was ready with dance-music; the new floor was to be tried for the first time. Under such circumstances that very stony-hearted person the Clerk of the Weather could not do less than furnish a beautiful afternoon for the occasion. So the generation that will succeed us, as time rolls on, came in gay attire:

prince and peasant, fairy and witch, Japanese ladies and stately duchesses—all alive with excitement and expectation. The old "Chelsea Pensioner" who received them was Lord William himself, lord of many little hearts that day, as he led the procession which marked the opening of the ball. It was a very pretty sight, this marshalling of the coming race; and when one and all broke off and engaged in merry romps, dances, and whatnot, we could find fresh beauty in each childish face and new charms in every quaint costume. And lovely faces there were indeed: we have some beauty in Simla this season, but the palm must be given to those still in the schoolroom or even nursery. From the ballroom to the theatre trooped the merry throng, to be delighted with Colonel Dean's magic lantern. There were shouts of delight when the first slide showed the well-known features of "Lord William," and the next one with "many happy returns of the day" was the signal for yet another childish outburst. As the evening wore on the youngest of the children were taken away to the land of dreams, surfeited with the pleasure of the afternoon. Their elders remained to dinner, whereat Sir Frederick Roberts, in a few happy phrases, proposed the health of the host, which was drunk with fitting honours. A brief but humorous acknowledgment on Lord William Beresford's part, and then the ball-room filled again for the cotillon. Mrs. Gordon and Captain Pakenham were the leaders, and the figures were so well chosen that the only regret was that even a cotillon should have to come to an end. When the time came for bidding good-night the universal wish that there might be many happy returns of the day meant a good deal more than the mere conventional utterance.

The policy of Lord Reay, says an up-country paper, in giving the entrée to Government House to all sorts and conditions of men, including bazaar furniture sellers, Commissariat contractors, auctioneers, and the like, out of the Poona bazaar, is reacting on Lord Harris's more refined tastes. It is all very well for such people to come and make their bow once a year at a levée; but it became intolerable when on the occasion of every entertainment at Ganesh Khind these flocked there to the discomfort of the hosts and their friends and acquaintances. Whether it was a Gymkhana, a tennis party, or even a dance at Government House, the tagrag of eligibles were all there. At length the line has had to be drawn, and the following announcement appears in the local Poona paper:—"Government House Engagements.—The Gymkhana meeting at Ganesh Khind on Monday next, and the dance at Government House on Tuesday are, we are requested to state, by invitation."

The "small and early" dance given by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief at Magdala House on July 24 was a very successful and pleasant affair, and was attended by about 130 people. The guests included their Excellencies Lord and Lady Harris, with Miss Croft, Colonel F. Rhodes, D.S.O.; Captain the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, A.D.-C.; Captain E. H. Cox, A.D.-C.; and Captain Butler, of the 18th Hussars. Among the others present were Sir Raymond and the Misses West; the Hon. Mr. J. G. and Mrs. Moore; Brigadier-General W. F. Gatacre, D.S.O.; Brigadier-General and Mrs. Hogg; Lieut.-General, Mrs., and the Misses Pottinger; Mrs. Budgen; Miss Jervois; Colonel, Mrs., and Miss Cunningham; Colonel W. Duperier, R.E., and Mrs. Duperier; Mrs. Breul; Mrs. Rivett-Carnac; Captain and Mrs. Wickham; Captain and Mrs. Beckham; Lieutenant Norris; Lieutenant Elmslie; Captain Newton King; Captain Peacocke; Lieutenant Bell; Mr. E. O. Walker, C.I.E., and Mrs. Walker; Major and Mrs. Curtiss; Mrs. Quill; Major Hepburn, R.A., and Mrs. Hepburn; Major Moller, 18th Hussars, and Mrs. Moller; Lieutenant Gaussen, 18th Hussars; Mrs. Gerald Martin; Captain Welman; Lieutenant Wilson, R.E.; Lieutenant R. Massie, R.A.; Lieutenant Palmes; Lieutenant Hancock, and others. The guests were received on arrival by Major C. J. Blomfield, Acting Military Secretary to his Excellency, and Captain W. J. Peyton, C.M.G., A.D.C. The ball-room was prettily decorated and brightly illuminated, and presented a very cheerful appearance. There was no regular sit-down supper, but a refreshment buffet was arranged in a room off the dancing hall. The sitting-out arrangements were very good, and there was ample accommodation for the guests. The early comers had the advantage of an extra valse. The regular programme was started punctually at 9.30 P.M., by which time the greater part of the guests had arrived, and the programme was carried through with a good swing, the dancing being kept up with unabated vigour till about 12.30, when the guests departed. The dance was voted a great success.

The Committee of the Bombay Gymkhana have issued an exceedingly attractive programme for their twelfth annual athletic and sporting meeting, which they propose holding between the middle of September and October. It is far more comprehensive than anything of the kind they have yet attempted, and the varied tastes of all lovers of out-door sports have been carefully considered. Athletic competitions have not previously been held under the auspices of the Gymkhana at the time of the year suggested, and the Football Tournament is a new departure. During the meeting theatricals, a dance, and a smoking concert will be arranged, and everything will be done to make "The Week" as pleasant as possible.

In a recent case in one of our courts, says an Indian paper, a jury had before them evidence that could not be in any way shaken. When the concluding stage had been reached, the following interchange of conversation took place between the judge and his colleagues in the administration of justice:—

"Gentlemen, are you ready to give your verdict?"

"Yes."

"What is your verdict?"

"Our answer is, sir, you can do as you like with the men that have confessed, but we acquit all the rest."

"But is it possible that you have weighed the evidence?"

"Evidence like this can always be fabricated."

"Do you find that as regards these prisoners it has been fabricated?"

"Evidence can be fabricated."

"So the evidence is untrustworthy?"

"Unless a man confesses, who can tell if he is guilty?"

No one would desire in any way to prevent a jury giving any decision they please, adds our contemporary. The jury system, so we believe, is one of our great safeguards. What more impossible than that six men, good and true, could go wrong? However, these answers may prove interesting to those who watch with interest the gradual clambering of the people of India to those heights of social freedom on which the English nation now rests secure.

A contemporary suggests that for Indian purposes it would be much more practical if, instead of clumsily dividing the year into the "cold" and "hot" seasons, it was scientifically demarcated off into periods by the seasonal features most familiar to us, thus the "pneumonia season," the "dysentery season," the "convalescent season," the "sunstroke season," the "prickly heat season," the "cholera season," and the "fever season," would subdivide the Punjab year into equal periods with easily recognisable characteristics, and the sense of eternal fitness would be satisfied.

The locust appears to have met his match in Afghanistan. According to a correspondent, a bird, called by the Afghans "Sanch," has appeared in vast numbers in the provinces of Jellalabad and Lataband and eaten up the locust swarms that had devastated those regions. Relying upon the presence of the "Sanch," the people are resowing their melon and water-melon fields.

We had a dog to register, number, collar, and muzzle, says a Singapore editor. He is said to be ferocious with strangers. We got the muzzle, and asked an official standing by where the muzzle-fixer was, because we did not care to incur the responsibility of muzzling old "Bowser"—a bull-dog of the most pronounced type, with all the "points." The official haughtily replied that the Municipality did not undertake to fix the muzzles; but he summoned a tamby and delegated the job to him. The tamby approached. B. showed his teeth, and the tamby immediately made one of a large crowd that executed a strategic movement to the upper end of the Concert Room. B. is not muzzled yet.

THE DEATH OF THE BILLIARD MARKER.

I'm going, Billy, I'm going—the long, long game has been played, Death has spotted the red for the final shot and the final shot will be made;
For however you score he is still to the fore, your breaks may come slow or fast,
He has always a shot that you have not, that settles your hash at last.
I'm going, Billy, I'm going—but still I have played on the square,
The game for a man is to play all he can, but always to play straight and fair;
Be straight as your cue—as the balls be true—and if luck sometimes helps you to win, Don't say 'twas a "try," for that sort of lie never yet took a gentleman in.

I'm going, Billy, I'm going—my eyesight is growing dim,
I'm playing with Death, for a minute's breath, and the ball's o'er the pocket for him;
I know he must win, but I'll never give in: I shall play to the last to my best,
'Tis too far for my cue—the half-butt won't do—oh, Billy, give me the long rest.

PERSONAL.

THE Rev. H. N. Midwinter, M.A., chaplain of the Dharwar, will officiate as chaplain of Devlali.

Mr. R. D. Spedding, commissioner, of Agra, is permitted to resign the Civil Service, from July 17.

Major J. W. Wray has been appointed to act as political agent, Kolhapore and Southern Mahratta Country, in addition to his own duties, during the absence of Colonel C. Wodehouse, C.I.E.

Lady St. John, widow of the late Sir Oliver St. John, and her two daughters, were booked as passengers for England, on board the British India Company's steamer Golconda, which was advertised to leave Madras on Aug. 8.

The Government of India having sanctioned the appointment of the fifth judge of the Bombay Small Causes Court, Mr. E. Van der Straeten, the registrar of that court, has been appointed to the post.

We (Madras Times) regret to learn that Mr. H. A. Sim, secretary to the Land Revenue Commissioners, was taken very ill with fever at the Revenue Board Office on July 24. Dr. E. F. Brockman, who was called in, has advised Mr. Sim to apply for leave.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Jardine gave a dinner party on July 23, in honour of his election as Dean of Arts in the Bombay University. It was a semi-public affair, and the guests drank to the Queen and the University. After dinner Mr. Justice Jardine had a large reception of the Pleaders of the High Court.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Colonel Streatfeild.—Deep regret is felt in Aldershot at the sudden death at Canterbury of Colonel Streatfeild, who relinquished the post of chief paymaster recently to assume the duties of senior paymaster of the Home District, London. The deceased officer was severely wounded in the Indian Mutiny, in which he lost a leg.

The death is announced of Captain Charles James Herbert (late Grenadier Guards), which took place at Arcachon, France, on Aug. 5. He was the second son of the late Right Hon. Henry Arthur Herbert, of Muckcross, M.P. Captain Charles Herbert was married twice; first, to Adèle, daughter of Mr. Lemoine, of Montreal, Canada; and secondly, to Helen Jane, only daughter of the late Mr. Andrew Spottiswoode, which lady died in 1882.

Captain Wight-Boycott, of Rudge Hall, near Wolverhampton, is dead. He was a magistrate for Staffordshire and Salop, and sat on the County Council for the Wombourne division. He was a well-known member of the Albrighton Hunt, and for a time officiated as deputy master for Sir Thomas Boughiey before the retirement of the latter gentleman a few years ago. For some time he was connected with the Staffordshire Yeomanry as captain of the Himley troop, but retired three or four years ago. The deceased gentleman was a Conservative in politics, and had rendered good service to the party.

Major Francis Beaufort, R.A., whose death is recorded on Aug. 6, at Lewisham, was born June 22, 1852, and was the eldest son of the Rev. Daniel Augustus Beaufort, formerly rector of Warburton, Cheshire, by Emily Nowell, eldest daughter of the late Sir John Davis, Bart., K.C.B., late Governor of Hong Kong. He was also grandson of the late Rear-Admiral Sir Francis Beaufort, K.C.B., Hydrographer to the Navy. He was educated at Wellington College and the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, obtained his first commission in 1872, his captaincy in 1882, and his majority in 1889. He served in the Royal Horse Artillery during the Afghan War, 1880-81, where he was present at the battle of Ahmed Khel (medal and clasp). In 1883 he passed second on the list into the Staff College. During his two years' study at that college he mastered the Russian language, and was specially mentioned in that subject at his final examination in 1885. He was for a short time employed in the Intelligence Department of the War Office, and held temporary staff appointments in the Gwalior district, India, and afterwards at Mandalay, Burma. In 1888-89 he commanded [No. 1 Bengal Mountain Battery in Brigadier-General Collett's expedition against one of the Burmese tribes (medal and clasp). In 1889 he was appointed to the command of No. 7 Mountain Battery at Quetta, was invalided home from there August 1890, rejoined his battery in April 1891, but had to return almost immediately to England, and succumbed to Bright's disease at the house of his father. The deceased officer had a considerable talent for languages, and was at home in French, German, Russian, and Persian. Before his fatal malady deprived him of eyesight he was engaged to translate Professor Sybel's large work, "The Founding of the German Empire," of which he had only completed one volume. He married, at Umballa, India, in 1882, Adela Hastings, youngest daughter of the late Edward Divett, Esq., of Bystock, Devon, M.P. for Exeter, by whom he leaves two sons, Francis Hugh and Victor Alexandre, and one daughter, Olga Mary Agnes.

The death is announced, on July 23, of Dr. D. Kees, of the 2nd Lancers of H.H. the Nizam's regular troops. The deceased gentleman, who was seventy years of age, was buried in the new cemetery at Chudderghaut next morning, with full military honours. Surgeon Kees was the oldest officer of the Nizam's medical department.

The Singapore Free Press says:—We regret most unfeignedly to have to announce the death, at his residence—Mr. Pryer's bungalow—at Sandakan, on the morning of Sunday, June 14, of Mr. Henry Blaquiere Talbot, acting commissioner of lands. Mr. Talbot attended office as usual on Saturday, June 13, and transacted all routine business, leaving for home at 1 P.M. After dinner, at about 8.15 P.M., he was writing in his study, when he fell forward on the table. His Indian servant, being alarmed, at once called for Dr. Walker, principal medical officer, who came and found that Mr. Talbot had an apoplectic seizure. Dr. Walker attended to the case and went home, coming back later, when he found Mr. Talbot in a second and worse seizure, upon which Father Byron was sent for, and he (Father Byron) remained until 2.15 A.M., when death supervened. We believe Mr. Talbot leaves a widow and grown-up family. He was sixty-two years of age, and his hearty looks and apparently vigorous constitution seemed to promise a much longer life. His loss will be greatly felt not only by his friends and brother officers but by the British North Borneo Government.

The Ven. Pandit Ishwara Chandra Vidyasagar, C.I.E., died, in his seventy-first year, on July 29, of liver complaint and other complications. He was the father of the present Bengali literature and language, the pioneer educationist, and he was successful in diffusing cheap high education through native agency; he was also the prime mover in the cause of widow remarriage in Hindoo society and of female education. He leaves a son and four daughters. Government and private colleges closed as a mark of respect.

MANIPORE.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

A REUTER telegram from Manipore, dated Aug. 13, says:—The Senaputty and the Tongal General were hanged here this afternoon. The execution was witnessed by a large but orderly crowd, consisting chiefly of women.

The following telegrams are from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times :—

AUG. 16.—The execution of the Senaputty and the Tongal General meets with general approval by the Anglo-Indian public and Press, as does also the commutation of the sentences on the remaining prisoners. Some of the native papers express the opinion that the Government should have commuted all the capital sentences; but the general feeling is that such an exercise of clemency would have been equivalent to a direct premium on murder and treachery, and that the result would have been that no British officer's life would be safe in a native State. The Government can hardly be charged with vindictiveness, seeing that only four men have been hanged, while fourteen have been transported. It is understood that the decision of the Indian Government as to the future of Manipore has been sent to the Secretary of State, and is now awaiting his sanction. Probably a native Raj will be re-established, under the guidance of a British Resident, and with the distinct intimation that the State is to be a feudatory one.

AUG. 17.—It is understood that the arrangement which the Indian Government has proposed to the Secretary of State with regard to the future of Manipore is to appoint a political officer with such powers as will remove all possibility of doubt as to Manipore being a portion of the Indian Empire.

The Daily News of Aug. 18 says :—Mr. Janoki Nath Bysak, the legal representative of the Manipore Princes, telegraphs from Calcutta under yesterday's date :—

The publication of counsel's defence of the Manipore Princes has caused a profound sensation throughout India. It clearly shows that the status of Manipore is one of absolute independence, and that it is regarded as such by the British Government; and also that the Princes were denied a fair trial. The entire native Press condemns the hurried orders sent by telegraph for the execution of the Senaputty, on whose behalf Mr. Manomohun Ghose made a powerful defence. The Indian Mirror, a leading native organ, says: "The approval of the English Cabinet before the defence reached England is extremely unfortunate. It leaves the impression on the native mind that the execution was hurried lest English opinion should change after the publication of the defence." The Mirror also remarks, "Unless we are very much mistaken in our estimate of the English people, the mere fact that the sentences have been carried out will not stop the free and full discussion of the justice of the act, and should public opinion in England condemn the Government, that condemnation will be none the less severe because the Viceroy's decrees have been rendered irrevocable by the hurrying of the execution." Native feeling is greatly shocked by the manner of the Tongal General's execution. The old man was too ill to sit up, and had to be lifted up on a stool before the drop fell.

Commenting on the above the Daily News says :—The legal representative of the Manipore Princes states, in the telegram we publish elsewhere, that the publication of counsel's defence has excited the natives, and that the Indian Government is denounced by the vernacular Press. His extracts from the Indian Mirror to some extent confirm what he says. But we must point out that the alleged independence of Manipore has nothing to do with the justice of the sentence upon the Senaputty. The Senaputty was not hanged for rebellion, but for aiding and abetting in the murder of British subjects. His crime was one of cold-blooded cruelty and ferocity, for which there could be no possible excuse. As to the Tongal General, we have already deplored his execution, and if it be true that "the old man was too ill to sit up," we deplore it the more. To postpone the punishment of the Senaputty until Mr. Ghose's defence had arrived in England would have been pure torture unless there was some reasonable probability of Lord Cross overruling Lord Lansdowne. The intervention of the paramount Power in the affairs of Manipore was ill-conceived, ill-advised, and ill-carried out. But the Senaputty deserved his fate, and mercy to him would have been cruelty to those who may at any time be placed in the position of his victims.

THE MANIPORE FIELD FORCE DESPATCHES.

The London Gazette of Aug. 14 contains the general order and despatches received from India describing the operations of the Manipore Field Force. An abstract of these documents was transcribed from the Simla Gazette into the Homeward Mail of July 15 (page 870). We may however here give in detail the papers relating to the operations under Major Grant, V.C., excepting his own despatch, the substance of which has already been given in our columns at great length.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

GENERAL ORDER.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—MANIPORE.

Simla, the 19th June, 1891.

With reference to G.G.O. No. 581, dated the 12th June, 1891, notifying the rewards which the Governor-General in Council had been pleased to bestow upon the Native officers, soldiers, and followers of the detachment under the command of Lieutenant (now Major) C. J. W. Grant, 12th Regiment (2nd Burma Battalion) of Madras Infantry, in recognition of the conspicuous bravery and devotion displayed by them at Thobal, in Manipore, in March and April last, and to G.G.O. No. 597 of this date, republishing the London Gazette of the 26th May, 1891, in which it is notified that the Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross upon that officer for his conduct on the same occasion, His Excellency in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the subjoined letter from the Adjutant-General in India, with which is submitted a report from Lieutenant Grant describing the operations of the detachment under his command from the 28th of March to the 10th April, 1891.

No. 359-M—"Field Operations—Manipore."

Dated Simla, the 5th June, 1891.

From Major-General W. Galbraith, C.B., Adjutant-General in India.

To Major-General E. H. H. Collen, C.I.E., Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department.

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to forward a letter from his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, enclosing a report from Lieutenant C. J. W. Grant, 12th Regiment (2nd Burma Battalion) of Madras Infantry, describing the operations of the detachment under his command from the 28th March to the 10th April, 1891.

2. The Commander-in-Chief has already noted in this office letter No. 236-M, dated 24th April, 1891, his high opinion of Lieutenant Grant's conspicuous personal daring and unfailing resource, and of the endurance and heroism displayed by all ranks under his leading, and this estimate is fully borne out by the enclosed report, which, in his Excellency's opinion, may be published as an example of what it is possible for one British officer with a handful of devoted Native soldiers to accomplish by prompt initiative, resolute courage, and soldier-like skill.

3. Sir Frederick Roberts trusts that the rewards already recommended for the native officers, rank and file, and followers in this office letter above quoted may, as a special case, be granted, and notified at an early date.

No. 2,132-W—"Field Operations—Burma."

Dated Ootacamund, the 26th May, 1891.

From his Excellency Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir J. C. Dornier, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief, Madras Army, to the Adjutant-General in India.

In forwarding Lieutenant Grant's report of his operations, as called for in your telegram No. 303-M of the 11th instant, I beg to enclose copy of letter No. 2,079-W, dated the 7th April last, to the Secretary to Government, Military Department, and to say that I cordially agree with the remarks of the brigadier-general commanding the Tammoo Field Force and of the general officer commanding the Burma district recorded on the report.

2. I consider that the admirable conduct of the expedition by Lieutenant Grant marks that young officer out as a soldier of rare military requirements, and I strongly recommend him for the rewards specified in my letter to the Government of Madras referred to above.

3. I trust, moreover, that the promotions and rewards recommended by Lieutenant Grant for all the native officers and non-commissioned officers mentioned in his despatch may be approved, and that every man of the small force under his command who fought so splendidly may be given some signal reward.

Forwarded.

No. 141-M.

I consider that Lieutenant Grant and the men under his command have done such excellent service as will, I trust, be recognised by the Government of India. I would specially bring to notice Lieutenant Grant's own services, which show that he is an officer far above the average and deserving of reward.

I trust that the major-general will also be able to submit the names of some of the men mentioned for Order of Merit for the favourable consideration of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

I have called upon Lieutenant Grant to submit the names of such men as in his opinion particularly distinguished themselves.

(Signed) T. GRAHAM, Brigadier-General, commanding Tammoo Column,
Manipore Field Force.

Camp Tammoo, the 21st April, 1891.

No. 2250-B—"Field Operations—Manipore."

I most cordially endorse every word General Graham has said in praise of Lieutenant Grant and his detachment.

I think his resolution to advance against all opposition to what he then considered was the relief or the assistance of the prisoners, his gallantry in action, and his fortitude in holding on to his position is only equalled by the modesty with which he relates his story. I think him worthy of the Victoria Cross, or of any reward the Government choose to give him.

I trust some mark of the approbation of Government may be given to every man who was with Lieutenant Grant.

(Signed) R. C. STEWART, Major-General, commanding Burma District.

Rangoon, the 15th May, 1891.

The St. James's Gazette says :—The papers published in the Gazette correct the impression that when the Senaputty was hanged we had heard the last of the Manipore business. The shouting had still to come; and this ceremony has been performed with even more than the usual flourishes. The military authorities in India could hardly have said more about the achievements of the troops if General Collett had conquered China or annexed Burma. The punitive expedition, we are quite aware, was not a pleasure-party, and the force had to contend against considerable difficulties in the way of wretched weather and a difficult country. But, with an enemy like the Manipuris, it was impossible that the march to Imphail could be a very glorious undertaking; and while admitting that the duty was carried out in a satisfactory way, we cannot see any particular reason for jubilation. With the large force under General Collett's command, and with the ample time allowed for preparation, a mishap would have been inexcusable. There was no mishap; but this need not be taken as a pretext for conferring a peerage on the general in command and V.C.'s and K.C.B.'s on all his officers.

By rights the triumphant Gazette of victory should be followed by the publication of the Commander-in-Chief's orders on the report of the Commission appointed to inquire into the military blunders which helped to bring about the disaster. The indomitable energy and heroism of those who avenged it may be a subject for general congratulation; but it is no less important that the blame for the original breakdown should be fairly apportioned, and those who paid the penalty with their lives are not the only ones who deserve censure. Although the prime responsibility for the mistakes made may rest on the officer in command of Mr. Quinton's escort, officers in posts of higher authority may also be to blame for the shortness of ammunition, and still more for the fact that the machine-guns were not taken. Again, the retreat from Manipore, when Mr. Quinton and those with him were in the hands of the enemy, may have been justifiable in the circumstances; but the circumstances have still to be fully made known, and we have to learn what view Sir Frederick Roberts takes of the matter. Last of all, it is still far from clear why Major Grant was not backed up, and the disaster averted in a way which would have rendered the arduous operations undertaken by General Collett unnecessary.

ENGLAND, FRANCE, AND SIAM.

THE MISSION OF M. PAVIE.

A REUTER telegram from Paris, dated Sunday, Aug. 16, says:—M. Pavie, the French traveller, who lately returned to Paris after completing some important explorations in the little-known country bordering upon Tonquin and Annam, is being received with much honour both in political and scientific circles. As to the ulterior object of his travels in that region little precise information is forthcoming; but the well-known deputy, M. François Deloncle, who both as a high official in the diplomatic service and a geographer has a wide knowledge of the questions involved, has made a statement on the subject which goes far to explain the view taken by the French Colonial School of matters interesting nearly all Great Britain and France. The mission of M. Pavie, he said, was undertaken two years ago with the object of surveying the Laos region, especially the country between French Tonquin and the Mekong River. The Mission was a complete success, for without firing one shot it pacified those extensive regions and was never in conflict with the Siamese authorities. M. Pavie personally is a true friend to Siam.

The territories which he traversed were invaded and occupied by Siam in 1882—namely, during the time that France was at war with Tonquin. With regard to this point it is to be observed that all the official Siamese papers, notably the Siamese Directory of 1884, and the printed laws of Siam issued in 1849, give the whole list of Siamese provinces; and that none of the provinces comprised between Tonquin, Annam, and Mekong appear in that list. France does not want to take anything belonging to Siam, but desires the Siamese to return to Annam the provinces which they occupied during the war in 1882. This is a question between Siam and France alone, and it is necessary to emphasise the fact that it does not concern any Foreign Power. The delimitation of the frontier between Annam and Siam is making fair progress. France does not attempt to interfere in the boundary arrangements between British Burma and Siam; and if Great Britain chooses to take what are called the Siamese Shan States that is no affair of ours. What interests both France and England is the boundary line between the Burmese Shan States and the Tonquinese Laos.

That boundary is the Mekong River, from the point where that stream leaves China to the point where it enters Siamese territory. The left side belongs to Annam and the right to Burma. The towns of Kieng-Hong and Kieng-Heng are considered by me as belonging to Burma, but I do not admit that Burmese territory extends beyond the Mekong. The best proof in support of this line of demarcation is to be gathered from the following official declaration, which the Burmese Government sent to me at Mandalay on May 21, 1884, and which was solemnly handed to M. Jules Ferry, then Minister of Foreign Affairs in Paris, by the Burmese Embassy. The declaration runs as follows:—

Thus, even at that time, before the British occupation, the Burmese acknowledged the Mekong as the eastern limit of their States.

I have no doubt that the British Government has realised the firm resolve of France never to allow British influence to go beyond the right bank of the Mekong. That river is a national and political boundary, and I feel sure that France and Great Britain will be good neighbours—firstly, because our interests in that part of the world are identical; and, secondly, because the British Burmese Shan States will form a sort of buffer between Burma proper and the French Laos States.

The Siam Independent writes on July 15:—

If there is any feature of the status quo in the Indo-Chinese Peninsula that Britain is interested in seeing duly maintained, it is the integrity and the independence of the friendly Kingdom of Siam, and the continuance of the control of that Power over its outlying provinces and dependencies to the respective frontiers of the Shan and

Laos states of Burma, China and the French possessions in Tonquin, Annam and Cambodia. Siam has of late given many signs that her Government is on the point of setting earnestly about those large measures of internal development that are chiefly exemplified in the execution of well-considered schemes of railway construction. A series of such schemes have been from time to time mooted, all designed to contribute to the opening up of the country, and some of them of so obviously practical utility that their taking material form is merely an affair of the immediate future, the preliminary financial arrangements in one case at least being completed and construction about to begin, while in others the detailed survey by railway experts is approaching completion, although their execution may not be at once entered upon. Though the beginning has been delayed too long, still it is about to be made, and in the right direction for the sake of the welfare of the people and the advancement of the country's prosperity. But the essential condition of progress is that the country shall be at peace, and that it shall be free from disorder within and embarrassment from without. This condition, however, there are too significant signs, will not be secured in full, for although there are tokens of internal dissension, the territorial integrity of Siam is, if there is truth in what has been recently announced, exposed to violation at the hands of a neighbouring European Power, ostensibly friendly up till now. It was the other day briefly announced in a telegram from Bangkok to a London daily that “Luang Phrabang had been occupied by French troops.” Immediately thereafter it was announced in Paris that there was no foundation for such a report. As the matter is of the gravest importance to Siam, and therefore cannot be viewed with indifference by neighbouring States that find their interest in Siam's integrity, it becomes imperative to examine the report in question, and its contradiction, in the light of ascertained facts. By way of preface, it may be said that this method of proceeding to a desired object, by previously announcing its accomplishment as a fact, then denying it, and afterwards—after weighing the amount of opposition the original announcement has evoked, and gauging how far that may be ignored with safety—carrying the design out either in whole or by stages at a time, is a very common method in politics and in political aggression. It has been put into practice repeatedly in Russia's progress Indiawards, a diplomatic denial of designs that were found even at that moment to be completed facts—being by no means unknown. From a consideration of the probabilities, we should say that the same game is now being played at the expense of Siam. The French troops may have invaded the upper valley of the Mekong and occupied Luang Phrabang, or not. In the former case the official dementi is not in accordance with facts; in the latter, it would appear to be a mere prelude to the actual military violation of Siamese territory. As to the probabilities it is enough to make the briefest references to the admitted activity of various French emissaries up the valley of the Mekong beyond the Cambodian (or French) frontier. This frontier, according to Siamese maps, cuts the Mekong, the great river of Eastern Indo-China, at the thirteenth parallel of latitude; according to French maps, midway between the thirteenth and fourteenth. The important point about this divergence is that the Siamese map includes the rapids that form a considerable obstruction to the navigation of the Mekong, while the French map gives the French a small margin, some forty miles or so, above the rapids. This point is by no means trivial in these days when it has become a favourite doctrine, in the occupying of lands not under the jurisdiction of any recognised State, that possession of the lower waters of a river gives a claim to the possession of the upper waters and the region drained by the affluents of the main stream. Now when it is considered that Luang Phrabang is a most important trade centre on the Mekong 1,250 miles or more above the recognised frontier, and that the whole intervening stretch of river has been the object of close attention of many French officials, it may be imagined what a huge alienation of Siamese territory would be implied in the event of a French military occupation of Luang Phrabang. In fact, accepting the doctrine that domination over the main stream gives domination over the whole river basin, it would signify that this step would be equivalent to the transfer of two-thirds of the area of Siam to the control of France, and the pushing of the French frontier up to those Shan and Laos States over which Burma has always exercised a suzerainty. That this would affect us directly even apart from our stake in the integrity of Siam, may be inferred from the fact that it has been stated in a Hong Kong contemporary that “the Meingoon Prince, a claimant to the Burmese throne, now a refugee at Saigon, will accompany the French Expedition to the Haut Laos, and it is averred that in the event of his services proving beneficial to French interests, the French Government will assist him to gain the Burmese frontier.”

Now this statement distinctly alludes to a military expedition to the Upper Mekong as an acknowledged fact, and so far furnishes an anticipatory corroboration of the truth of the Bangkok telegram announcing the occupation. But the press of Indo-China has for a long while past bristled with accounts of the doings of M. Pavie, the French Consular Agent in Eastern Siam, and his energetic coadjutors. So impressed with this activity, in contra-distinction to the apathy of the Siamese officials, has been one of our Bangkok contemporaries, that he positively resigns himself to looking on, in hopeless acquiescence, at the absorption of the Mekong Valley by the French, on the ground that Siam is too late to make any effective assertion of her rights, and that, rather than Siamese misgovernment should continue, it is better for the tribes of the region concerned that they should fall under the administration of French officials. That this view should find public expression in the capital of Siam is in itself a sign that French occupation is looked upon as so imminent that it is rather the probable results of that occupation than the fact itself, that call for editorial comment.

It is of course for the Siamese Government to protest and to assert itself against any unfriendly action on the part of France. And if it be shown that there is truth in the story that the most dangerous pretender to the late Burmese throne is to be associated in any French military demonstration in the upper Mekong, with the intelligible object of disturbing Upper Burma, and effecting a counter-move in revenge for the exclusion of the French influence once existing at Mandalay, then it can hardly be expected that the Government of India will look on placidly at the operations which France appears now to be engaged in, primarily to the detriment of Siam.

FRANCE IN THE BASIN OF THE MEKONG.

After speaking in the most flattering terms of the zeal, energy and enterprise of the members composing the Pavie mission and of the geographical, ethnological, and historical information obtained at the cost of great privations, and in spite of the obstacles raised by the ill will of the Siamese officials, our contemporary Le Courier d'Haiphong continues:—

"It is not at all likely that the King of Siam will willingly consent to restore to us the immense region over which, since 1885, he has imposed his authority and which his officials are busily extending, proclaiming that all the territory watered by the tributaries of Mekong belongs to Siam."

The prosperity of Bangkok depends entirely on its trade with the Laos States, and every year the royal treasury draws by far the greatest portion of its resources from the region of the Upper and Middle Mekong. A European financial syndicate has obtained a concession to construct a railway, which, if rapidly carried out, will secure for the capital of Siam all the traffic of these fertile regions. The English and Germans, all-powerful at Bangkok, and who are our worst colonial enemies, would be only too glad, apart from the commercial question, to create for us political difficulties. They will use all their influence in opposing any restitution of territory which would be the ruin of their trading houses in Bangkok.

The Siamese Government will continue to temporise: apparently anxious to yield to our just claims they will address, as in the past, severe orders to their officials, enjoining them to cease from all forward movements, all new usurpation of territory, and to await the delimitation of the frontier. This communication will be forwarded to us, but will not prevent their officials, strong in the complicity of their government, from extending their frontier posts every day, and plundering without shame the newly acquired inhabitants.

If, moved by our protests, which at last have become energetic, the King of Siam decides to recall his officials and troops, he will do it only when he is certain that the region, which we claim in the name of Annam, is of no further utility. The railway from Bangkok to Korat will be in full working order, the commercial current towards the Gulf of Siam will be definitely established, the ceded territory will be impoverished by the enormous imposts and innumerable taxes, and the population thinned by misery, and slavery, and the transportation en masse to districts, deserted and unhealthy, on the right bank of the Mekong.

It will be no longer a question for us to construct a railway, to establish regular navigation on the river, we shall find nothing there of value, we shall be no longer able to dream of turning to our profit the trade of this region. In place of creating for ourselves a new opening for our industries, a fresh market for our commerce, this newly acquired territory after useless negotiations, will be a wound on the flank of our colony, a source of unproductive expense, a proof of our weakness.

It is far from our thoughts to wish to push France into a rash venture and to compromise the security and the future of our protectorate. We are convinced that the smallest energetic demonstrations would have more effect than the many negotiations which threaten to end in nothing, and for that it would neither be necessary to demand fresh troops from France nor to put in motion any great portion of our effective forces.

The Siamese authority in all the vast regions occupied by them, rests but on terror, and on a reputation for power which is carefully fostered. The inhabitants of these regions, who are quiet and peaceable, are imposed upon by adventurers who give evidence of the most astonishing audacity not hesitating to occupy immense tracts of country with a handful of men. The Siamese troops, stationed on the left bank of the Mekong are almost entirely composed of Laotians from the Siamese districts on the left bank of the river. They are armed with old fashioned weapons of very little use, and in some parts they have but lances. These feeble forces nevertheless, suffice to keep in order a considerable population.

The Siamese officials have organised a system of espionage throughout their new possessions. To each post, in most of them there is a garrison of soldiers, are attached a number of notable Laotians (kromakan) whose duty consists in obtaining information. These men led from the districts on the right bank of the river which have been long submissive to Siam, speak the language of the country in middle of which they are transported, and soon obtain an accurate knowledge of all that is passing.

The few attempts at resistance that the Siamese have met with in their invasions have been suppressed with the greatest cruelty. Entire districts have had their inhabitants led away into captivity and transported, without hope of return, to great distances on the other side of the Mekong. Their villages have been razed, and their crops destroyed. Terrorised and ruined, constantly menaced, always in fear, these unfortunate people call to us for succour.

If we reorganise the 4th Tonkinois and utilise many resources already existing, by a method which would cost nothing to the protectorate and which we shall indicate in another article; if we entrust to the military authorities the task of assuring in Annam the tranquillity of the provinces of Than-hoa, of Nge-an, and of Ha-Tink; if we transport to these three provinces and that of Son-la towards the Mekong a few detachments well equipped, we shall see the Siamese rapidly retreat before us, and abandon the districts without dissension. Convinced of our weakness by the deplorable spectacle of anarchy which for eighteen months has desolated the three northern provinces of Annam, they hope to see us abandon the country for the possession of which we have already made so many sacrifices. Their officials have already begun to be arrogant and secretly hostile.

If, at the same time, thanks to the intelligent and clever policy of our Consul, who is very influential at Luang Phrabang, we were to obtain from the Government of that principality the acceptance of our protection, there remains but to assure it by a number of military posts arranged along the river, and with a few rapid and light gunboats, the integrity of our frontier on the west.

A few consular agents installed at the most important centres along the right bank of Mekong ought to insure protection for our countrymen as well as for our new protégés. We should not need to fear aggression from without, nor trouble among the people subjected to our authority, and among which we could recruit a small army that would assure, at a small cost, the perfect security and tranquillity of the country.

We should thus become the undisputed masters of all that vast region on the left bank of the Mekong, which comprises the principality of Luang Phrabang, the old kingdom of Tran-Ninh, long subject to Annam, and Pou-thai, administratively dependant on the Annamite province of Quang-tri, of which the southern boundary is the 18 deg. of latitude.

As for the territories beyond that limit, we could organise numerous exploring parties of a character essentially pacific. The population of this region, unlike that of the north, are brave and warlike, and hold strongly to their independence, and we could only win them over to our side by teaching them to know us better, and persuading them that it is to their interests to obtain our merchandise and French products.

It will be necessary to conclude treaties with their chiefs which shall guarantee the security of our countrymen and protection for their property.

FRENCH ARROGANCE IN CHINA.

THE North China Herald of July 6 says:—An inquiry of the very gravest importance in the present unsettled condition of affairs in this part of China is to take place this morning at the French Consulate-General, and we give in another column some copies of correspondence relating to the matter. It is the conduct of the French police here that is in question. It is generally known that there has been much dissatisfaction among the Chinese at the abortive result of the inquiry into the alleged death some little while since of a native at the hands of a French policeman, who was smuggled away from China soon afterwards. Since that event we have been asked to publish correspondence from thoroughly responsible residents protesting against the brutality with which the natives are often treated by the police on the French Concession, but we have suppressed the correspondence, as we have thought it most inadvisable to publish anything that could increase the anti-French feeling that exists among many of the Chinese. The present matter, however, is far too grave to be passed over. We justly base much of our feeling of security here in the event of an outbreak on the knowledge that all the respectable Chinese, and those who have anything to lose, would support us in putting down disturbances; but for this it is necessary that we should conciliate them by treating them always with fairness and justice; and this is so fully the case, that on the so-called English and American concessions, the Chinese have as much confidence as foreigners themselves in the Municipal Council and its police. Things are not the same, however, on the French side. The Chinese there have full confidence, indeed, in the Municipal Council, which consists half of French citizens and half of British subjects; but they have no confidence in the French police, which is, unfortunately, not under the orders of the Council, but of the French Consul-General. In Mr. R. Wagner, the present French Consul-General, the French Republic has a representative of whom nothing but good can be said; but it is impossible that a functionary whose term of office in one place is comparatively brief, and who is fully occupied with his diplomatic and consular duties, and who is at the same time the doyen of the Consular body, can have the time to direct the police force of the concession; or can appreciate the care and delicacy with which the Chinese should be treated, as can a body of merchants who have been living beside the Chinese for years, and are in intimate daily communication with them.

The facts of the case as represented are almost incredible. There are regulations on both sides of the Yangkingpang against oil being carried through the streets in baskets. The oil merchants on either side, we understand, admit the propriety of the regulation, and cheerfully pay a small fine when their employés infringe it. On June 20 last the French police arrested a man named Wong on the Fungyü jettty on the English side—a perfectly indefensible violation of territory—on the charge of having taken a basket of oil to the Tuk Tahong, which is on the French side, and with which Wong at the time had nothing whatever to do. The boatman went to the Tuk Tahong and related what had occurred, and Mr. Han, the managing partner of the Tuk Tahong, one of the large wholesale dealers in kerosene oil, went at once to the French police-station to explain that the oil belonged to him and that Wong was perfectly innocent. When he got there—according to his own statement—he saw Wong being so badly treated by the police, that he was afraid to go in alone, and returned to ask his friend the compradore of the China and Japan Trading Co. to go with him. On their way they met some French-Chinese detectives going to arrest the boatman. Mr. Han explained that the oil was his, so the detectives seized Mr. Han by the queue and took him to the station. Here, notwithstanding his endeavours to explain that he was well known as a merchant, and could get leading foreign or native merchants to go bail for him, he was thrust into a cell with Wong, the boatman, three other accused, and two well-known thieves; was subsequently led handcuffed and with his queue tied up with those of the thieves and others to the French Mixed Court, where he was made to kneel like a thief before the magistrate, and was ultimately fined 20 dollars and dismissed.

For some days the kerosene oil trade was stopped altogether in consequence of this outrage, but to-day the French Consul-General is to hear the charge against the police, and it is to be hoped that he will appreciate the gravity of it, and will punish his subordinates as they deserve, if the facts stated in the petition of Mr. Han are proved. Instances like this are fresh proofs of the disadvantage of the French concession being administered independently of the rest of Shanghai. It is almost an absurdity. Only a small part of the land in the concession is owned by French citizens, and the trade done there by foreigners is nearly all done by English and Germans, who, though they are allowed seats on the Municipal Council, have no voice in the control of the police, one of the most important of the municipal departments. Of late a more distinctly Gallicising tendency has been shown south of the Yangkingpang, for the Secretary of the French Council has taken lately to addressing the English Council in French, and the Senior Consul followed suit, although English has been recognised for years as the official foreign language of China. Would Mr. Wagner consider it convenient if, as might easily happen, a Russian Consul-General should become Senior-Consul, that he should communicate with the Municipal Councils in Russian?

RECRUITING FOR THE INDIAN ARMY.

THE PRIZE ESSAY.

THE prize essay of the United Service Institution of India has been published. The subject given was "Our recruiting grounds of the future for the Indian Army, in view of obtaining the best material available for soldiers, the pax Britannica having reduced the warlike spirit of some races, which have hitherto supplied our native armies, by inducing their youth to lay aside the sword for the ploughshare." Lieutenant Cardew, 10th Bengal Lancers, now employed in the Adjutant-General's Department, was the winner of the gold medal. His essay sets forth the claims of the various races to consideration as furnishing or being capable of furnishing brave, trustworthy soldiers. Taking the Bengal Army first, he deals with the classes already enlisted. Hindustani Brahmans are, he says, clean smart soldiers, singularly well behaved and free from crime, of soldierly appearance and generally good physique. Against these good qualities must be put their unbending caste prejudices, their want of stamina, their abstinence from sustaining food, and especially their love of intrigue. The Brahman may be advantageously employed in local wars and on lines of communication, but is scarcely equal to the requirements of modern warfare. The 3,000 now in the ranks might be reduced by one-third, and yet leave too many. As to Rajpoots, an inferior article is now obtained in the ranks, but true Rajpoots from Rajpootana furnish excellent material for soldiers. Hindustani Mahomedans should be reduced in numbers, as in their case also inferior men have been enlisted. Of Goorkhas Lieutenant Cardew speaks in the highest terms. The difficulty is to obtain a sufficient number, and the enlistment, therefore, of other classes than Gurungs, Magurs, and Thakurs is advocated. Khas and Newars of the Sirish caste might be tried, and a separate regiment of Limbus be raised. Garwhalis and Kumaonis are now being given fair trial. If they prove good soldiers the supply is plentiful. Jats have the fault of not getting on with any other class. They should be formed into caste regiments. Recruits should be sought from Bikanir and Rohtak in preference to Aligarh and Saidapore. This field of recruiting is almost untried. It would give soldiers whose bravery is assured. There is no need to speak of the value of the Sikh as a fighting man. The question to be asked is whether the numbers now required can be increased or even kept up to the present standard. The answer must unfortunately be in the negative. Recruits can be got for regiments entirely composed of Sikhs, but corps where there are isolated companies, troops, or squadrons feel where the shoe pinches. The supply generally may be kept up for a few years by improved rules of recruiting, and especially by collecting the class into a smaller number of regiments. Punjabi Mussulmans number 7,700 in the army at present. There is good material lying neglected which should be utilised at once. Multanis especially should be enlisted more freely. Dogras have not deteriorated under the pax Britannica. They have served many masters, and always proved themselves docile, trustworthy, loyal soldiers, possessed with steady, quiet courage. Brahman Dogras should never be enlisted owing to caste difficulties. Cashmere offers a good field for recruiting. Lieutenant Cardew then returns to the quarter whence more than any other the future supply of soldiers for the Indian Army must be looked for. In the 215,000 fighting men of the tribes on the north-west border he sees thousands of future recruits. Born soldiers from their youth, nurtured in an atmosphere of wild mountain strife, a race of men pre-eminent in India for physique, courage, and intelligence, the Khattaks, Bangushes, Orakzais, Yusufzais, Afridis are all instanced as being good fighting races. But of the 30,000 Orakzais only 800 or 900 are in our ranks. The Shinwaris 12,000, Bonerwals 12,000, Bajauris 30,000, form good material, the Bajauris especially so, who are famous not only for their manly qualities, but for their peaceful character. The Mohmands, numbering 17,000, though recommended by some authorities, have a bad reputation for treachery, nor is their bravery above suspicion. The Yusufzais, of whom there are 25,000, represent Pathans whose only fault is their aptness to deteriorate among the enervating influences of a life in the plains. Finally, the Waziris, numbering 40,000, are described as a splendid race, brave, truthful, hardy, but deterred from enlistment by their traditions, which strengthen their family ties and bind them much to their kin and their houses, while they are viewed with dislike by the other Pathans. If enlisted in class companies like the Afridis, there could be no question as to their value as soldiers. In regard to Baloochis, those resident in the Punjab are in physique thin and wiry, and are frugal, hardy, and brave. At present they enlist only in small numbers, but by care and attention they might be increased with advantage to the army. True Baloochis of Baloochistan have an aversion to service. They have great dislike to the petty restraints of military discipline, but are an extremely hardy race, of good physique, free from fanaticism, and of exceptional fidelity and straightforwardness. The experiment of a local regiment at Quetta may be successful enough to warrant further attempts in the same direction. An intelligent effort by specially selected officers who are prepared to take the Balooch tribesman as they find him, and not be too eager to polish his buttons, or pipeclay his belts, may open a supply of valuable material which has long been coveted, and which once rendered accessible will not be quickly exhausted. Other sources of supply are the Brahuis, the Ghilzais, and the Duranis. If the opposition of the Cabul authorities were removed the number of the last two classes would be practically unlimited. A distinctly local corps if raised with company or troop commands bestowed on men of good family, would probably be a success. For irregular cavalry Duranis would be particularly valuable.

Dealing with the Madras Army, Lieutenant Cardew considers the Mussulman infantry might be reduced with advantage. He considers Teliga or Telugu are not the best material available, and advocates a quarter enlistment of Tamil, Mappilabs or Moplahs, and Mairs. If enlisted in special regiments, these would prove good soldiers; while Karens are obtainable in Burma.

In the Bombay army the difficulties of enlistment are admittedly great. There is only one class, the Mahrattas, belonging exclusively to the Presidency. They furnish good material, and their numbers are not likely to fall short of the demand. There is no new material which promises well, except that from Baloochistan and Southern Afghanistan. Class regiments should be formed in Bombay, and one or more Bhil battalions be raised.

In connection with recruiting in general, the employment of British officers is suggested. Recruiting centres should also be formed, which should be as numerous as possible, and each be in charge of an officer specially selected for his knowledge of the language and the characteristics of the people.

Essays are also published by Lieutenant-Colonel King-Harman, 4th Goorkhas, and Major E. G. Barrow, Staff Corps.

EXPORTS AND FOOD SUPPLIES IN THE N.-W. P.

NOTE BY MR. T. W. HOLDERNESS.

A MEMORANDUM of great interest has been written by Mr. T. W. Holderness, Director of Agriculture, on the food supplies of these provinces, in special reference to the ruling high prices, and the extent to which these have been affected by the export trade in grain. After referring to surplus food production and the wheat trade, Mr. Holderness turns to the Famine Commission's estimate of the relative sufficiency of the food produced in these provinces to the requirements of the population. Summarising the figures he finds:—

The Famine Commission, dealing with the agricultural condition of the province as they found it between the years 1871 and 1876, put the total cultivated area of the province at 33,643,000 acres, of which 3,364,000 acres were under two crops a year. This gave a total cropped area of 37,007,000 acres, of which 31,453,000 acres were under food crops and 5,554,000 under non-food crops. The Commission dealt with a population of 41,000,000, and they placed the average yield of the food crop area at '357 of a ton per acre, and the average food consumption at '205 of a ton per head of the population. On this basis every additional million of persons to the population would require 700,000 acres for their food supply, besides a considerable further area for their requirements under sugar, cotton, opium, tobacco, indigo, oil-seeds, and fodder, all of which are included in the non-food crop area. An increase of 5,000,000 to the population would thus require an addition of 3,500,000 acres to the cropped area for food alone, if the surplus of 660,000 tons which the Famine Commission thought the province secured in good years is to be maintained. This surplus, it is necessary to remember, was really of the nature of a reserve, as on the Famine Commission's own figures it disappeared in an indifferent year, and was converted into a deficit in a bad year.

PERILOUSLY NEAR EQUILIBRIUM.

Applying these data to the conditions of to-day, the memorandum arrives at the following result:—

The population of 41,000,000, on which the Famine Commission based their calculations, has now risen to 46,000,000. I have carefully examined the crop statistics of these provinces for past years, and I find that, owing to a succession of bad harvests and resulting agricultural depression, there has been a considerable falling off in production during the last four years. I also find that if a comparison be made between the average acreage of the last four years and that of the period to which the Famine Commission refer, the increase in the food crop area cannot be safely put at more than 2½ million acres. Two-thirds of this increase is due to the extension of the detrimental practice—agriculturally speaking—of double-cropping, and the remaining third to the breaking up of fresh land and to the contraction of the non-food crop area. But 2½ million acres will only provide the food of 3½ millions, and the population is now five millions in excess of that assumed in the Famine Commission's estimate. The food of 1½ million persons must therefore come out of the surplus of 660,000 tons shown in the estimate, and this, at '205 of a ton per head, would reduce the surplus to less than 300,000 tons in even good years. As this represents only ten days' food for the province, production and consumption according to these figures are perilously near equilibrium.

In conclusion Mr. Holderness says:—The last criticism I have to offer is that neither Mr. O'Connor's paper nor the official memorandum of the Revenue and Agricultural Department notice the new element introduced into the problem by the return of wheat prices in England to something like the level of ten years ago without the return of silver to the ratio (1s. 8d.) at which it then stood to gold. I have already discussed this point and endeavoured to show that unless the situation thus created is temporary only, we are on the eve of a great economic change in the purchasing power of silver. If the situation is temporary, and English prices drop to the level to which we have been accustomed of recent years, we are still exposed at any moment to have our local prices for food violently disturbed by a sudden further fall in silver, and a considerable portion of the food supply swept out of the country in one of the spasms of a "falling exchange." The fact that the political or financial movements of America or Europe may at any time effect this result, causing serious privation to millions of bread-winners in this country and embarrassing its responsible administrators in the always possible event of a scarcity, is one of the many inconveniences incidental to our present monetary system. To discuss this aspect of the question is foreign to the present paper, but its importance is such as to justify its mention.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Great Battle of Minden and the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers.—The 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers (the old 20th), one of the six regiments of the British line which took part in the now famous battle of Minden—one of the greatest battles fought during the seven years' war—in Europe, will (says the Poona correspondent of the Times of India on July 24), for the one hundred and thirty-first time, celebrate Minden Day on Saturday, Aug. 1, 1891, in a fitting manner. The ceremony of "trooping the colours" will be performed at eight o'clock that morning, and a programme of sports of various kinds will be gone through in the afternoon. It will be a great gala day with the regiment, which has every reason to be proud of the noble deeds done on that day, and of the great and prominent part it took in that "Beautiful Feat of War" as Carlyle calls it. A graphic and full description of the battle will be found in Carlyle's "History of Frederick the Great," vol. v. pp. 445-454. The "Minden Regiments" are the 12th, the 20th, the 23rd, the 25th, the 37th, and the 51st. The 20th (now 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers) was then known as "Kingsley's Regiment." The list of casualties among these battalions was a terrible one—1,394 officers and men being killed and wounded. Of these the 20th lost six officers, one sergeant, and seventy-nine men killed, and eleven officers, twelve sergeants, and 212 rank and file wounded. This severe loss caused the following order to be issued by Prince Ferdinand:—"Minden, Aug. 2, 1759—Kingsley's Regiment of the British Line, from its severe loss, will cease to do duty." But the zeal and esprit de corps of the survivors is shown in the following order, dated Minden Aug. 4:—"Kingsley's Regiment, at its own request, will resume its position of duty in the line." On Minden Day every officer and man of the regiment wears a rose, and there is a tradition, believed to be well founded, that the 20th marched through some flower gardens on the morning of the battle, and that many of the men plucked roses and stuck them in their coats. This circumstance has united the rose with the memory of the great battle. The band of the regiment will play the "Minden March" as the first piece on their programme for Minden Day.

The 4th Madras Cavalry, which is to be broken up in order that the remaining three regiments may be raised to a strength of four squadrons each, is known as the 4th "Prince of Wales's Own" Regiment of Light Cavalry, the Heir-Apparent being its honorary colonel. It was raised in May, 1785, as the 3rd Regiment, and became the 4th in February, 1788. It has Mysore, Seringapatam, Assaye, and Mahdipore on its records of service. Its present commandant in Brevet-Major Fenton, who was fortunate enough to get the regiment with only seventeen years' service. He will presumably be provided for, says a contemporary, in the 2nd Madras Lancers, the command of which will fall vacant on April 19 next, when Col. Galloway has to leave on attaining fifty-two years of age. The permanent officers with the 4th are, with two exceptions, subalterns, who will doubtless be drafted into the other three regiments consequent on the increase in strength of the latter. As two out of these three are Lancers, it would be well if the 3rd Light Cavalry were given lances also, now that changes are being made.

The Cold Weather Cavalry Manœuvres.—Sanction has now been accorded to the concentration of the following regiments at Mainpuri for the cavalry manœuvres next cold weather:—The 7th Dragoon Guards from Umballa; the 5th Lancers from Meerut; the 16th Lancers from Lucknow; the 18th Hussars from Mhow; the 2nd Bengal Lancers from Allahabad; the 3rd Bengal Cavalry from Cawnpore; the 4th Bengal Cavalry from Fyzabad; the 6th Bengal Cavalry from Meerut; the 7th Bengal Cavalry from Bareilly; the 8th Bengal Cavalry from Nowgong; the 10th Bengal Lancers from Umballa; and the 2nd Regt. Central India Horse from Poona. A battery of Royal Horse Artillery from Meerut, E Battery from Umballa, and C or K Batteries will join the camp. Some changes may, perhaps, be made hereafter, in case it be found impossible on the score of expense to concentrate twelve cavalry regiments. The 18th Hussars, now at Mhow, relieve the King's Dragoon Guards at Muthra, and will take over their horses before proceeding to Mainpuri. K Battery Royal Horse Artillery will only be employed if it arrives from England in time. The date on which the camp will open has not yet been settled. It will be either December or January.

Records of the Bengal Army.—A publication, of which it may be said that it is almost a necessity, will shortly see the light. Lieut. Cardew, 10th Bengal Lancers, and the recent gold medallist of the United Service Institution, Simla, has been busy overhauling the records of the Adjutant-General's Office, Simla, and compiling from them a work to be entitled, "Records of the Bengal Army." The work will be in five volumes, the first containing a general outline of the history of the Bengal Army, while the remaining four will be entirely taken up with the records of individual corps. As matters stand now, says the Times of India, only a very few regiments possess their histories, and these in manuscript form. Consequently it has been difficult for officers to attain that familiarity with the achievements of their regiments which is so conducive to esprit de corps. We should like to see the same thing done in the Bombay Army. The materials have to a great extent already been prepared, and we could without a moment's hesitation suggest the name of the right man for the work.

Lanoline Vaccination.—Sanction has been accorded to Surg.-Major King's new system of Lanoline Vaccination being tried as an experimental measure for six months in the Madras Army, where the percentage of failures under the old system of vaccination was 71·8 last year. The report is to be submitted by Surg.-Major King at the end of six months.

Cordite.—In regard to some remarks on the subject which were made at Major Scott's recent lecture at Simla on smokeless powders, it is understood, says an Indian contemporary, it is intended to indent for one million rounds of cordite cartridges for the Martini-Henry rifles. With this quantity very valuable experiments should be carried out; while in case of war they would prove of the highest value. The Government of India may be congratulated on their go-ahead policy in this matter. The latest reports, by the way, of the experimental exposure of cordite in gun limber boxes to the full power of the sun at Meean Meer show that no apparent deterioration had taken place in the explosive. Its ballistic powers will, of course, be tested hereafter.

Authoritative denial is given to the statement that the 2nd Madras Lancers are to be disbanded.

Orders will shortly be issued simplifying the returns in the Transport Department with a view of lessening clerical work devolving upon officers.

The attention of officers in the Poona Division of the Army has been called to the gymnastic regulations by which officers should attend single-stick drill once a month.

It is probable that the cavalry of the Corps of Guides will be augmented to four squadrons, thus placing it on an equality with ordinary regiments of Bengal Cavalry.

Under the revised mobilisation scheme for India, concentration will be by strong divisions, numbering in the case of infantry from 12,000 to 15,000 men, instead of the old arrangements of divisions formed by two weak brigades of three regiments each.

Sixteen horse and field batteries in the Bengal Presidency have now been re-armed with the 12-pounder breech-loading gun, and the re-arming of the other batteries will be completed at the rate of two monthly.

The Council of the United Service Institution, Simla, has chosen as the subject for their gold medal essay next year, "The most effective tactical use which can be made on modern battle-field, (a) of the light entrenching tool, (b) of signalling." The essays must be sent in by March 1, 1892.

The gun lascars sanctioned for employment at Hong Kong, Singapore, and Mauritius are now being enlisted in India, and will be shipped off in batches of fifty. They are to be under the orders of the officers commanding permanent batteries at the above places.

Major-Gen. East, C.B., has returned from England and resumed command of the Secunderabad district.

Major-Gen. Macleod, late inspector-general of Ordnance, Madras, has been appointed British Consul, Pondicherry.

The Brigadiers at the Manipuri Cavalry Camp will probably be Cols. Gough, 18th Hussars, Jennings, 6th Bengal Cavalry, and Macpherson, 4th Bengal Cavalry. Brig.-Gen. Luck, inspector-general of cavalry, will be in command of the whole of the troops.

Lieut.-Col. S. Jackson, C.I.E., late commandant, G.I.P. Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps, has been granted, on retiring, the honorary rank of colonel.

Major H. P. Young, Indian Staff Corps, has been permitted to retire from the Service from July 21, subject to her Majesty's approval.

Major Le Gallais, 8th Hussars, is to assume charge of the duties as aide-de-camp to Sir George Greaves in place of Major Clowes, who has rejoined his regiment.

The last issue of the Indian Army List shows that Major Grant, V.C., has not only been appointed aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, but also interpreter.

Major H. D. Rossiter, 2nd Durham Light Inf., Chief Instructor, and Capt. Thatcher, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry, had returned to Deolali. The latter was to proceed on leave to Cashmere on Aug. 1.

Capt. R. A. Wahab, R.E., will have charge of the party which is to make a survey of the country round Aden during the cold weather.

Lieut. P. M. Sykes, Queen's Bays, was lying seriously ill at the Ripon Hospital, Simla, when the mail left, from the effects of sun-stroke and overwork.

Lieut. C. B. Baldock, Merwara Battalion, passed the High Proficiency examination in Urdu on July 6, and Lieuts. D. M. Babington, Royal Art., and J. C. C. Perkins, 43rd Goorkhas, the higher standard in Hindoostani.

The following promotions have been made in the G.I.P. Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps:—Lieut. R. C. H. Barnard to be captain, vice Capt. S. Gore-Browne, resigned; and Lieutenant E. H. Hart to be captain, vice Capt. R. L. Trevithick, promoted.

In recently mentioning the brigade-surgeons of the Indian Medical Service likely to be promoted to the rank of deputy surgeon-general, we (Pioneer) inadvertently omitted the name of Dr. L. D. Spencer, in charge of the Rajpootana Political Agency. He entered the Service on the same day, March 31, 1865, as Drs. Cleghorn and Harvey, and is therefore senior to Brig.-Surg. Center, Lahore, who will have to wait for some time for his promotion to deputy surgeon-general, especially as Deputy Surg.-Gen. Morice at Calcutta has, we are assured, no intention of retiring. Dr. Harvey will be posted to the medical charge of the Punjab Frontier Force.

Col. A. C. B. Hall, of the 1st batt. Loyal North Lancashire Rgt., stationed at Kamptee, having, on July 1, completed four years as commandant of that corps, has vacated his command, and comes home on half-pay. Major Frank Ryley, the senior major, succeeds to the command, his place as second in command being filled by Major A. G. Tidy, deputy-assistant adjutant-general for instruction, Poona. Major Tidy will therefore rejoin his regiment at Kamptee when the garrison class of which he is now in charge finishes its present course.

BENGAL.

OUR advices from Calcutta are to July 28.

A Scotch Company of Volunteers.—A largely attended meeting of Scotchmen was held at the headquarters of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifle Battalion on July 23, under the presidency of Lieutenant-Colonel Sterndale, to consider the proposal for the formation of a purely Scotch Company of Volunteers. The proposal commended itself to most of those present, and at the close of the meeting no less than thirty gentlemen enrolled themselves as members of the new Scottish Company, which will be attached to the Rifle Battalion. The dress of the company will be distinctively Scotch, and will follow the lines of the "Black Watch" uniform in preference to that of any other Highland regiment, with this exception—there will be no feather bonnet. Among those present at the meeting were one or two who in former days had seen considerable service in the Cameron Highlanders.

The Late Maharaj Kumar Neel Krishna Bahadoor.—A well-attended representative meeting was held in Calcutta on July 25 at Shovobazar Rajbati, under the presidency of Mr. A. Smith, officiating member of the Board of Revenue, to record the community's loss at the death of Maharaj Kumar Neel Krishna Bahadoor. Telegrams and letters sympathising with the object of the meeting were received from Maharani Surnomoyee, Rani Arnahali Dabi, Rajas Hurrinath Roy and Surjokant Acharjee, Rana Dit Sing, Nawab Abdul Lutef, Mr. Monomohun Ghose, and others. Among the speakers were Justice Gurudas Banerjee, Babus Surendranath Banerjee, Kali Charan Banerjee, Protap Chunder Mozoomdar, and Kalinath Mitter. An influential committee was appointed to carry out arrangements to perpetuate the deceased's memory.

The Benares Riot case is at last concluded, five of the accused being convicted and the remainder acquitted.

A native of the North-West Provinces, said to be eight feet in height, was being exhibited in Bow Bazaar Street, Calcutta, when the mail left, and was attracting crowds of people.

MADRAS.

OUR advices from Madras are to July 29.

Gallant Conduct by an Officer.—Lieutenant C. H. B. Clark, probationer for the Staff Corps, and attached to the 26th Regiment, Madras Infantry, has been recommended for the Royal Humane Society's medal for gallantly rescuing a native woman from drowning in a well at Secunderabad on the night of April 13 last. Lieutenant Clark happened to be passing by the well at the time, and, being informed of the woman's danger, at once took off his coat, and by the aid of a rope descended to the rescue, tied the woman to the rope round the waist, and had her hauled up.

A "Fancy" Officer.—Gloominess is the word in connection with the prospect in Coimbatore, says the Madras Times, and not any amount of "fancy" will enable us to think otherwise. Writing on May 30 regarding the condition of Udampalpet, the acting head assistant collector reports:—"I know nothing except that the tahsildar insists on sending in favourable reports. In the red soils of Udampalpet the people got no outturn to speak of all the year, and I fancy there must be distress there." And, again, speaking of the whole division, the same officer writes:—"I am calling for weekly reports from tahsildars as to the necessity for relief works and kitchens, for the car rains have failed everywhere almost, and I fancy distress is general all over the division." "Fancy" again, while the duty of the officer, it appears to us, is to know. The Board of Revenue seems not to relish this "fancy" of one of its officers, and have administered a quiet rebuke in "It seems to the Board unsatisfactory that this officer should report so late as May 30, that he 'knows nothing' of the Udampalpet Taluk except what the tahsildar reports, and that he 'fancies there must be distress there.'"

The Distress in Madras.—During the past fortnight there has been a visible increase of begging and destitute persons in our city, says a Madras paper, which may be expected to go on for some time to come. The increase of which we speak consists of country people who have been driven hither by scarcity. On Saturday nine starving women came from a village beyond Conjeevaram in the hope of finding work and food in Madras, knowing nothing of the relief works provided not many miles from their home. This is an illustration of the well-known fact that village munsiffs and Conicopillays cannot be trusted to keep the starving poor in their neighbourhoods fully informed concerning the Government measures of relief, a fact that was impressively established during the famine of 1876-77. The announcement that village munsiffs will be held responsible for cases of starvation which may occur within their village limits has been made, and nothing more can be done by collectors to make the ordinary official machinery do its duty; but we feel certain that unless the special staff of agents who assist our collectors and assistant-collectors in dealing with the present suffering be sufficiently large to cover the whole of the distressed areas, and be constantly subjected to vigorous oversight, lives will be lost, and the unsparing work of our officials be but imperfectly rewarded. Among the poorer classes in Madras there are many now unemployed, and, owing to the high prices of food grains, these are insufficiently fed. We think it is time for the Collector of Madras to consider whether some relief works should not be provided in or near the city, so that those who are in sore want and unemployed may be able to obtain food by their labour, and to which able-bodied persons now begging, who may in reality have come to Madras seeking work, may be drafted.

It is practically settled to fill the moat and raze the walls around Fort St. George, Madras, and level the glacis.

The sea, which is encroaching rapidly at St. Thomé, has washed away about fifty feet of the foreshore, and the old Church of St. Thomas is threatened, as it is only about thirty feet from the water. Many gold and copper coins have been washed up.

BOMBAY.

OUR advices from Bombay are to July 31.

Bombay University and Medical Study.—A meeting of the Faculty of Medicine of the Bombay University was held on July 28 to consider a proposition of Dr. R. N. Khory, that the Faculty should now consider in detail the draft scheme of medical study which had been printed and circulated. Surgeon-Major R. Manser moved an amendment that the alternative draft scheme of regulation for the degree of Bachelor of Medicine and Surgery, which was simply Dr. Gray's scheme with some modifications, be now considered. After some discussion the Faculty adjourned.

The Clock Tower Tragedy.—It is melancholy to see, remarks the Fioneer, that the agitation over the Clock Tower Tragedy case is surviving the result of the trial, and that the Parsee community seem bent upon making this an occasion to sacrifice their reputation for sobriety and good sense. The European community has cause, adds our contemporary, to be proud of the officers of the police whose sagacity and fairness to the person accused have so greatly aided justice. The initial proceedings, so weighty for or against the accused, were in their hands, and they acted with a sort of judicial fearlessness and impartiality. They had to keep at bay the frenzy and excitement of the Parsee community; and it is singular as well as creditable to find the police, for once in a way, accused of want of zeal to secure a conviction. In time to come, the Parsees will have leisure to reflect that this striking vindication of justice is really due to such English institutions as trial by jury, the right of challenge, the English barrister, and the power of the High Court to punish for contempt those who inflame the public mind in a pending trial. When that time comes, they will cease likewise to regret that the English law prohibits the fresh trial of an acquitted man that they are now so unreasonably clamouring for.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

A REUTER telegram, dated Rangoon, Aug. 12, says:—The crop prospects in the Katha district have slightly improved, but the outlook in all the other districts of Upper Burma is worse. The plants in the paddy nurseries are withering in the Kyowski and Yemethin districts, where prices have in consequence risen to a high point. The standing crops throughout the country are more or less damaged by the protracted drought, and the cotton crop has completely failed in certain districts.

The correspondent of the Times writes from Rangoon on Aug. 16:—The severe drought in Upper Burma still continues. From nearly every district gloomy reports have been received of crops withering and ploughing stopped by the want of rain. From Sagaing the Deputy-Commissioner reports that a large number of peasants are expected to leave Myinmu for Lower Burma if rain does not fall by Aug. 26, that being the latest date on which the people of that district believe that the rains can save this year's cultivation. The Local Government has called on the district officers to send telegraphic bulletins every three days. The prices of rice and paddy have already risen considerably in the local markets, and they still have a strong upward tendency.

The health of the troops in Wuntho and Mansi is still bad, but is improving.

Sir A. Mackenzie, accompanied by Mr. Symes, C.I.E., his chief secretary, is now at Bhamo.

Sir A. Mackenzie has completed the scheme for the reorganisation of the military police. The force will be reduced by sixteen companies, which will go to form two more local regiments, vice the Madrasees, who have been disbanded. Four companies of Karens will also be transferred from Upper to Lower Burma, making a total reduction of twenty companies in Upper Burma. This will result in an annual saving of five lacs of rupees. Notwithstanding the general reduction of the force, the frontier battalions in Upper Burma are to be reinforced. The Bhamo and Mogoung levy, which has charge of the Chinese frontier, the Jade Mines, and other troublesome districts, is to be raised from sixteen to twenty-two companies; the Ruby Mines Battalion from four to eight companies; and the Katha levy, which will hold Wuntho, from ten to twelve companies. A reserve of eight companies is to be formed at Yemethin.

A Reuter despatch dated Rangoon, Aug. 15, says:—The notorious dacoit Bo Panza has surrendered to the British officials at Kyaukse, making the condition that his life be spared.

THE Rangoon Times, July 20, says—The Court of Enquiry of which Major Welsh, 23rd M.L., is president, and which was constituted to enquire into the evidence regarding the accusation against an officer in a native regiment of cheating at cards, was reassembled last week at Mandalay, since, on its first sitting, the accused was not present, having left for Secunderabad. Mr. Swinhoe, a member of the Mandalay Bar, who, we believe, had undertaken the case for the defence, was present at the investigation, the events of which, however, have not as yet transpired. We shall refrain from making any comments on the case. In the meantime, let us trust that a satisfactory explanation will be given of the whole affair, and that matters will end by going no further.

IT IS CURRENTLY rumoured among the Chinese community (according to the Mandalay Herald) that the Chinese Government has claimed some portions of the Jade Mines at Mogoung as belonging to China, and that our Minister at Peking and the Chinese authorities are now in correspondence about this tract of country. Our contemporary the Rangoon Gazette some few issues back hinted at China wishing the boundaries of the two countries to be delimited, and possibly there may be more truth in the rumour than lies on the surface. We (Herald) however give the rumour for what it is worth.

HYDERABAD.

THE SERVICES of Mr. Meer Mahomed Hoosain, Assistant Director of Agriculture, North-West Provinces and Oude, have been applied for by the Nizam's Government, and he is expected to arrive at Hyderabad about November. This, says the Pioneer correspondent, is a step in the right direction, especially when the new settlement has been introduced into the Pelingana country.

MR. A. J. DUNLOP, Inspector-General of Revenue and Settlement Commissioner, returned on July 21 from leave at home, and has resumed charge of his office from Mr. Faridonjee Jamsedji.

WITH THE setting in of the rains the annual gaieties have begun, and dances and paper chases are the order of the day.

THE NIZAM held his Bakri Eed durbar on July 17. It was attended by the Minister and other high officials.

THE Deccan Times, a paper which has been in existence for the last twenty-two years at Secunderabad, was to cease to appear at the end of July.

THE Indian Daily News has announced that one of the princes of the royal family of Oude and the Nawab Abdul Latif, of Calcutta, have been appointed to two of the highest offices in the Hyderabad State. The statement was on the face of it absurd, but, says an Indian journal, we have the highest authority for contradicting the announcement as untrue, and simply a hoax.

BHUJAN SINGH, and Shiruk Singh, two notorious Sikh dacoits who were run to earth a few years ago and imprisoned for life, were brought down to Hyderabad the other day from Nandair Gaol to give evidence in a criminal case. On the return journey to the gaol they slipped through the fingers of a strong escort of Hyderabad police, who have since been dismissed by Colonel Ludlow, Inspector-General, for lack of vigilance. Being loose, the dacoits looted the mail bags being conveyed to Nandair. In one bag was a medicine chest, from which one man took up a phial and swallowed the contents. He died shortly after. The other man was set upon by a number of Sikhs from a village near by, and a hand-to-hand scuffle ensued. One of the Sikhs during his efforts to capture the dacoit lost an arm. The dacoit was still in custody when the mail left.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

THE CHIEF REASON for starting relief works in the north-western parts of the Punjab is the havoc done by the locusts, although the short rainfall has also been a factor in inducing the Local Government to provide the people with means of subsistence. The opportunity thus offered of proceeding with certain strategic railways is too favourable a one to be lost. The Sind-Sagar line ends at Mari on the left bank of the Indus opposite Kalabagh, where the best site for a new bridge over the Indus is to be found. Forty-five miles further to the north is the terminus of the Rawul-pindi-Kushalgarh branch of the North-Western system; and again, some forty miles to the north the main line from Lahore to Peshawur crosses the Indus at Attock. The river from Attock to Mari thus forms the base of a triangle of which the sides are the two lines of railway, the apex being at Golra junction, nine miles west of Rawul Pindi. The necessity of lateral communication between Attock and Mari has been clearly demonstrated. It can easily be secured, explains an up-country paper, by linking the Sind-Sagar line with the Kushalgarh branch, and by joining on the latter to the main line at Attock. This is the project which is to furnish relief works for the distressed population east of the Indus. The line on the south will not take off at Mari itself and follow the left bank of the river, as was first intended, since it would be commanded from the opposite bank. Dand Khel, four miles south of Mari, will be the starting-point, and the alignment thence will be through the Juba Pass to the Sohan river, which will have to be bridged. From the Sohan a north-easterly course will be taken to Kahal on the Kushalgarh branch, 25 miles east of the Indus. The length of this new section will be about 60 miles. The line from the north will start a mile or two east of Attock, and go through the Sakr Dara pass: it will be about 40 miles in length. The whole project thus includes only 100 miles of rails to be laid. There is a good deal of difficult country to be crossed, but only two rivers of any size to be bridged. The earthwork can be begun on certain sections with famine labour, which should now be available in abundance. It is high time that activity should be shown in completing the system of strategical railways on the North-West frontier, for during the past two years but 300 miles have been built, all the energies of our engineers having been concentrated upon the Khojak Tunnel, or in surveying the route through the Gomal Pass and the Zhob Valley. When the Indus is bridged at Kalabagh, Attock linked with Mari, and Bannu put into direct communication with Rawul Pindi, the Lahore-Peshin project may be taken up in earnest. Until then, it should be kept in the background.

A REGULATION has been published for the better administration of the Agror Valley on the borders of the Black Mountain. In 1870 a settlement was made under which the Khan of Agror undertook, in return for the record of rights granted him, to do all in his power to promote and preserve the peace of the border. As he has been guilty of disturbing the peace of the frontier, his estates and lands have been attached under section 9 of Regulation 3 of 1818. The regulation now enacts that all the recognised rights of Khan Ali Gauhar are forfeited to the Government, who will appoint an officer to deal with them. He will inquire and determine, subject to any instructions he may receive from the Punjab Government, how far the lands forfeited shall be retained by the Government; how far and on what conditions they shall be transferred to persons now in possession of land, or any interest in land in the Agror Valley, or to kinsmen or relatives of the Khan; and how far and on what conditions they shall be restored to the Khan. The final decisions on matters determined by the officer appointed will rest with the Local Government, the right of appeal to the Governor-General in Council by any approved person other than the Khan himself being granted. The right of appointing a successor to any Khan hereafter created will be vested in the Punjab Government. Ali Gauhar Khan, whose rights have now been forfeited, was a prime mover in the disturbances on the Black Mountain frontier, which have led to two expeditions in the last three years. He fomented intrigues in spite of repeated warnings, playing much the same part as the Hangu Chief on the Kohat border.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A ST. PETERSBURG telegram to the Times (Aug. 14) says:—The successor of the late General Prjevalsky in Central Asian exploration, Colonel Pevtsoff, has been promoted to the rank of general. General Pevtsoff is at present preparing his report of the expedition which he lately made in the region of Tibet, and will read part of it at a special meeting of the Geographical Society in the autumn.

A despatch from Samarcand announces that Captain Barchewsky has returned from his explorations in Eastern Bokhara. He reports having discovered deposits of gold and large deposits of lead and iron. The region visited is likewise rich in petroleum springs.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs from Teheran (Aug. 18):—The rumour that Russia had obtained a cession of Persian territory between Astara and Ardebil, upon the Caspian Sea, as compensation for the grant of the tobacco monopoly to Englishmen, is declared, upon the highest authority, to be absolutely unfounded.

Reuter telegraphs from Bombay (Aug. 18):—A Russian exploring party, six hundred strong, has entered the Pamir country. The force is said to be composed of Cossacks and infantry and two mountain guns.

According to an Allahabad telegram (July 28), Sirdar Mihrab Khan, who was surety for 5,000 rs. for Sirdar Shahdad Khan, who attempted to assassinate Major Muir, political officer at Khej, South-Western Beloochistan, has surrendered to Mr. Tate, the officer now engaged in collecting revenue in Panjgour and Khej for the Khan of Khelat. Mihrab Khan fled after his attack on Major Muir. Shahdad Khan is a fugitive in Persia, and it is reported that the people of Panjgour and Khej are keeping up their evil reputation by showing signs of restlessness again. They are an ill-conditioned lot, and the Khan of Khelat has a difficult task to manage his Sirdars.

With regard to the supposed intention of the Ameer to take an active part in the hostilities now in progress in Bajaur, the only news received this week (the Civil and Military Gazette says) is to the effect that stores of grain and other supplies are being collected at Kunar in the Jellalabad province for the use of the troops which, it is said, are shortly to be despatched to Nawaghi, to assist the Khan of that place—who is connected by marriage with the Ameer—against Umra Khan of Jandol. These preparations are being carried on by the Assistant-Governor of Kunar, who is acting in the place of the Governor, lately summoned to explain certain matters to Cabul.

Without the least inclination to sound a note of alarm, we may predict that at a very early period there will be indications of renewed activity on the part of Russia in Central Asia. The threat so openly expressed by the Moscow Gazette is but a sign of the times. It is, of course, to the changing phases of European politics that we must look for the reasons which will influence the Russians to renew their aggressive policy on the borders of Afghanistan and the adjacent countries. The visit of the German Emperor to England, following hard upon the Fiume incident, in which the Austrian feeling was so clearly demonstrated, has unduly excited the anti-English Party in Russia. Of late years their programme has been rejected by the Czar, and the Czarewitsch's tour in India seemed to give the death-blow to their designs for a long time to come. But Russia is peculiarly sensitive in the matter of European coalitions. She cannot venture to challenge the Triple Alliance and to plunge into a war with only one doubtful ally; but she has agencies at her command which can excite trouble in a quarter in which Germany, Austria, and Italy have no direct concern. The irritation at St. Petersburg, at the present moment, is rather against England than any of the three Continental Powers; and it is against English interests outside Europe that action is likely to be taken. The Russian menace against India became a reality in 1885. Up to that time it had been vague and indeterminate: the conquest of the Turkoman Steppes had only excited alarm in the minds of far-seeing Indian officers whose opinions carried no weight either in the English Foreign Office or at Army Headquarters. But with the first collision between Cossacks and Afghans—with Indian troops, it should be remembered, remaining neutral in the fight—the new danger to India was vividly realised by English statesmen. The "raw" was established in the side of India, and the last six years have proved how susceptible this country is to the least irritation caused by Russian agency.

It has always been the opinion of experts in the Central Asian question that the Czar will hold his hand on the borders of Afghanistan so long as England keeps aloof from European alliances that checkmate Russia in her designs upon Constantinople; but that in case of English influence being excited against Russia on the Continent he will not hesitate to bring pressure, more or less direct, to bear upon India. There is nothing new in this. As Mr. Curzon put the case two years ago:—"Though neither Russian statesmen nor Russian guards are foolish enough to dream of the conquest of India, they do most seriously contemplate the invasion of India, and that with a very definite purpose which many of them are candid enough to avow. . . . His (the Russian's) object is not Calcutta, but Constantinople; not the Ganges, but the Golden Horn. He believes that the keys of the Bosphorus are more likely to be won on the banks of the Helmund than on the heights of Plevna. To keep England quiet in Europe by keeping her employed in Asia, that, briefly put, is the sum and substance of Russian policy. Sooner than that England should intervene to thwart another San Stephano, or again protect with her guns a vanquished Stamboul, Herat must be seized by a coup de main, and General Annenkoff's cars must be loaded with armed men." We do not go so far as to say that Russia will venture upon the coup here indicated; the time is not ripe for such a stroke; but in all probability the next few months will witness some developments of the position in Central Asia which may lead to troublesome complications. It is on the Upper Oxus and the Pamir that we must look for the next signs of Russian activity. There is a No Man's Land in that direction which affords peculiar scope for the talent of men who accept Skobelev's dictum that the Asiatic hide is not worth the tanning unless that process leads to important results in Europe. It is difficult in India to form opinions as to the effect of this or that diplomatic coup in Europe; whether achieved by the Triple Alliance or by Russia and France in combination. But we can at least keep our eyes closely fixed upon the Russian frontier line in Central Asia, and note there the indications of danger to English interests. Nothing may come of the impertinent threat held out by the Moscow Gazette, but no great harm will be done if extra vigilance is exercised for some little time to come upon the movements of those whom Russophiles have so foolishly called "our friendly rivals in Asia."

Referring to the report which reached London lately that the Russians are forming a military post at "Khusk, near Herat," the Bombay Gazette says it would, if true, point to an act of aggression which would make the Afghans—and the British Government as well—forget Panjdeh, and would mean war; for "Khusk, near Herat," is a town little more than thirty miles north-east of that place, and is an equal distance on the Afghan side of the frontier. Apart from the difficulty of getting there, it would have much to recommend it to a Russian commander of the Alikhanoff stamp, for it commands a mountain pass, the Khazret-i-Baba, at a height of 6,000 feet above sea level, and has no obstacle intervening between it and Herat. The population is composed of Jemshidis, not Afghans. But there are no obvious advantages which a Russian commander, wishing to place himself in a position advantageous for a sudden attack upon Herat, could derive by posting a force at Khusk that are not already within reach on the Russian side of the frontier. The Russian post nearest to Herat is Chil Dukhtaran, which is only fifty miles north of that town, on the direct road from Merv. Khusk, on the other hand, appears from the Russian staff map to be on the road to Mainena, and to be therefore much too wide of the Russian lines of communication to be a possible, or at all events a suitable, place of arms. The probability is that the report refers to preparations which are being made at some point on the river Khusk, a tributary of the Murghab, which runs north and south about ten miles from the town of the same name. This would locate the depot quite near enough to Herat to be disquieting to the Ameer. It might be as near as Chil Dukhtaran—that is to say, fifty miles; it could not be farther off than Chaman-i-Beid, the point of bifurcation between the rivers Khusk and Murghab, which is only another fifty miles away. The report modified in that sense is credible enough. The particular kind of activity which would take form in the establishment of military posts upon the Afghan frontier is just what we should expect by way of answer from Russia to recent manifestations of sympathy in England with the Triple Alliance. Measures of this kind cost little, but they have a very distinct diplomatic value, and, little as we may like them, they are marvellously well adapted to dissuade English statesmen from a too active interference with the designs of Russia in South Eastern Europe, where much more than on the Afghan frontier, her interests really lie.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

The following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14 (Dalziel).—Yokohama advices referring to the threatened complications in Corea, state that Russia has already made overtures to both the Korean factions looking toward annexation. The Minn faction are anxious to accept Russia's offer. The Chinese Government organ editorially says:—"The Chinese Minister resident in Corea is not likely to allow intrigues to go on under his very nose, to transfer Corea to Russian protection, without his taking some steps to prevent it. It may be noted that the Chinese fleet is under orders to leave here for Corea, and its arrival there may prove to the Russian agents that China's representative is not asleep. Neither China nor Japan can afford to see Corea become a portion of Russia, for this is what would come of it. Corea under Russian protection would be as free as Turkestan or Khiva is now. Corea should be formally annexed to China, and the sooner this is done the better. If the solution of this difficulty is postponed till the Siberian railway is completed, Russia will then be in a position to openly take a hand in the affair."

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—Advices from Hongkong, dated July 15, state that discontent still smoulders in North China. Occasional riots are reported, and the mission stations near Canton are said to have been attacked, but no particulars have been received. Two of the Wusueh rioters on trial voluntarily confessed that they had murdered two foreigners during the outbreak at that place. The two men were sent to the Kuang-chi district, and executed on July 5, their heads being hung up at Wusueh as a warning.

A correspondent at Tien-tsin writes as follows, under date June 29:—"All is quiet here, and no trouble is anticipated. Comparative tranquillity seems to have been restored in the Yangtse-Kiang valley, and several of the foreign gunboats have gone to other stations."

A letter from Tsen-Kiang of June 27 states that the Viceroy wrote to the officials there that the residences of foreigners should be searched, to see if they had any babies' or dead people's bones. The Presbyterian Mission was searched by the official while a crowd of excited natives waited outside. The mob broke into the Roman Catholic Mission building, but were ejected by the occupants, Mr. Cholfont holding the rioters at bay with a revolver. The authorities finally sent the military to the scene of the disturbance, and the soldiers guarded the compound all night. News of serious rioting was received by telegraph on July 4 from the southern part of the province. In this section the Roman Catholics hold large property interests, and have many fine churches and a large orphanage. Several of these were destroyed by the mob. At Fu-chau-fu the rioters wrecked the out-houses and entered the churches and the priest's house and sacked everything, but did not burn the buildings. The amount of damage done is not known. The orphanage was not touched. The soldiers were ordered to patrol the streets during the night and to guard the property of the Roman Catholic Mission. The town was left without a gunboat, which caused much uneasiness among the foreign residents.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 13 (Standard).—The negotiations between the Ministers of the European Powers at Peking and the Chinese Government, in reference to the recent riots, in which a number of Europeans were brutally murdered by the Chinese mob, have not yet led to any satisfactory result, and the relations between the foreign Legations and the Government continue strained. The former insist that the recent Imperial Decree, issued on the subject, shall be strictly enforced, and that, in accordance with its directions, the guilty officials shall be punished.

In spite of the denials that have been published, the charge against the son of an eminent Chinese diplomatist in Europe, of being concerned in issuing incendiary placards against foreigners, is absolutely true.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 16 (Standard).—There is great excitement here owing to the increasing tension between the Chinese Government and the Diplomatic Representatives of the European Powers. The Peking Authorities continue obstinately to refuse the redress demanded by the Foreign Ministers on account of the barbarous murders of European subjects and the destruction of the property of foreign residents by the native mob during the recent riots. If the Chinese Government persists in this unyielding attitude, the result cannot fail to be the resort to concerted hostile action on the part of the Powers. Indeed, the Foreign Ministers threaten a joint naval demonstration, in which the British, French, American, and German Asiatic squadrons would take part, unless their demands for reparation are speedily acceded to.

TIENSIN, August 17 (Reuter).—The Foreign Ministers continue to exercise pressure upon the Chinese Government with a view to obtaining the due punishment of the persons engaged in the late riots at Wuhu Wusueh and elsewhere, and of the officials who neglected to give proper protection to the foreigners and their property. The question of a pecuniary indemnity is a separate one, and has not formed the subject of the notes presented to the Tsung-li-Yamen. The payment of compensation on account of the outrages on missionaries in Mid-China was, in fact, arranged between Her Majesty's representatives and the local authorities before the presentation by the Foreign Ministers of the collective Note to the Tsung-li-Yamen.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17 (Dalziel).—China mail advices, dated Shanghai, July 21, state that the rising of the Yangtse-Kiang continues, and that much suffering has been caused to the peasants in the valley, where the rice fields are completely covered and thousands of acres submerged. The water rushes over the low-lying ground, carrying with it the grain stores of past harvests, and unless the flood recedes rapidly, which is scarcely probable, a widespread famine may be expected. In addition to the upland rice having been much damaged by the recent rains, such soil as is not submerged cannot be prepared to receive new seed for several weeks to come, so that it is almost certain that the second rice crop, which is usually planted at this season, will not be harvested. At Foochoo the river rose so rapidly and unexpectedly in the night time that the loss of life and property was greater than that caused by the severe floods of last winter. Floods do not usually occur after June 12, and the riverside population had some reason to think the season of danger past; everybody consequently was unprepared for the torrent when it came. Houses on the river's edge were torn from their foundations, and men, women, and children, and live stock were swept away. Several hundred junks which were at anchor in the river were carried down the stream and dashed to pieces against the stone bridge below the city, and their crews were mostly drowned. Eighty bodies, including nine women and fourteen children, have been washed ashore. The suffering in these districts is expected to be very severe, as the crops were a failure, and there is not likely to be any work whereby the coolies can replenish their meagre store.

The following telegram was received last night (Aug. 18) at the London office of the New York Herald from that journal's correspondent at Shanghai:—

The situation in Peking is grave. The Ministers of England, France, and Germany, on behalf of the Powers, have daily interviews with the Tsung-li-Yamen. The Imperial edict is a dead letter. Hunan is the centre of the trouble. The bulk of the army, which consists of Hunan men, defies the authority of Peking. The Ministers insist that secret societies shall be suppressed; that Hunan shall be opened to commerce; that the Mandarins implicated in the riots shall be degraded; and that full amends for the outrages shall be made and assurances given for the future, or the Powers will take immediate concerted action. The Government recognises that its old tactics of playing the Powers off against each other are futile in face of their unanimity. The Emperor is anxious to avoid war, but dreads attempting to coerce the provinces, doubting their loyalty. The high Chinese officials openly favour a pure Chinaman Emperor, and advocate expelling the dynasty. The attitude of many Viceroyals is suspicious. Li-Hung-Chang is sitting still keeping the fleet away from the scene of trouble. The cost of twenty foreign warships in the Yangtse is heavy, but if they are moved the outrages will be repeated. To-day, Mr. Grey, an English missionary, was nearly murdered by soldiers in Kirin. Unless active steps are taken all the missions will cease. The central Government has adopted its usual tactics of temporising and referring the matter to the local officials, but the Ministers decline to change the venue from Peking. They have gone too far to retreat without total loss of prestige. The Government is utterly paralysed, and is afraid to display its rottenness by attempting action. The English, Russian, and French fleets are awaiting orders within easy distance. China's dilemma is that a movement against her rebellious subjects may imperil the dynasty, while a refusal renders foreign intervention inevitable. It is believed, however, that at the first sign of force the present mulish obstinacy will give way. China is unable to resist, and must yield to just demands.

PARIS, Aug. 18 (Reuter).—According to despatches received here, the opinion prevails in diplomatic circles in Peking that, in presence of the existing situation in China, and in view of the indisposition of the Chinese Government to accede to the Foreign Minister's demands, it is necessary that the European Powers should concert measures to bring stronger pressure to bear on the Tsung-li-Yamen.

Sir Halliday Macartney writes to the papers to deny the report that the son of a Chinese diplomatist now in Europe had been a leader in the riots. He says:—There is absolutely no foundation whatever for saying that the son of any Chinaman answering to the description was concerned either in the initiating or the carrying on of the reprehensible movement. The vagueness of the telegram as regards the personality of the accused party makes it necessary that I should explain why the Chinese Minister in London, rather than any other Chinese official in Europe, should feel himself called on to give such a denial. There are only two Chinese diplomats in Europe who could, with any propriety, be characterised as distinguished. Indeed, there are only two Chinese Ministers in Europe—the Chinese Minister in London, and his colleague in Berlin. But as the son of the latter is merely a child, whilst that of the former has attained his majority, the statement of your correspondent could only have reference to him. Though unable for a moment to conceive the very possibility of his son's being implicated in the movement, or his having any sympathy with its object, the Minister telegraphed to China, asking whether there was anything whatever which could have given colour to the statement that his son had compromised himself. The reply was what had been expected. The son of the Minister had had neither act nor part in the anti-foreign demonstrations.

IN the course of a series of notes on the position of the Japanese in America, the Japan Mail says:—It is evident from all this that a result long feared is now in sight. The Americans are beginning to agitate against Japanese immigration as they have already agitated with success against Chinese. Without considering the rights and wrongs of such action, we can easily foresee its issue, namely, that the very exceptional popularity now enjoyed by the United States in Japan, will be changed into dislike and indignation. The Japanese will be bitterly and justly hurt to find themselves treated as uncivilised Orientals, whose ingress into a Western State tends to demoralise its people and disturb its good order. It has never been charged against them that they are prone to any of the vices which are supposed to render the Chinese undesirable acquisitions, and if America adopts an exclusionary attitude towards them, there will be difficulty in discovering any tangible reasons for it. We cannot conceive, however, that the agitation now seemingly imminent is likely to extend beyond a limited section of the people of the Pacific slope, or to be seriously regarded by American Legislators. At all events, the contingency opens up a new phase of Japan's foreign relations, and will certainly not help to smooth the ruffled feelings of Japanese conservatives.

A correspondent at Tientsin writes, under date June 29, that all was quiet there, everybody laughing at the ridiculous panic that (it is supposed there) has seized Shanghai, with its men-of-war, volunteers, steamers, &c., while Tientsin has no gunboat within hundreds of miles, and steamers only occasionally at the bund. It is a mistake, we are told, to suppose that Li is remaining passive, as he is much alarmed, and is using all his influence to maintain order. There is a report, we learn, which remarkably corroborates Mr. Drummond's theory that Li is trying to push Anhui men to the front in preference to Hunan men. It is, that Liu Ming-chuan is to be appointed to assist the Viceroy Liu Kun-yi at Nanking, as a sort of special commissioner, should his health permit of it when he returns from Formosa. Liu Ming-chuan, as is well known, is an Anhui man and a special protégé of Li Hung-chang, and if this appointment is made, it will be a very significant one.

French interests are expanding gradually in the fair "Land of Elephants," says the Bangkok Times. The latest development is in connection with monetary matters, which will, we understand, soon be carefully looked into by the officers of a French financial institution, to wit, Le Banque de l'Indo-Chine, whose special agent, M. L. Michelot, arrived in Bangkok a few days ago from Saigon.

The Indian Sepoys for Zanzibar.—A private letter from Zanzibar to the Times of India reports the arrival of a little force of Indian sepoy, under Capt. Maguire, which has been sent to join Mr. H. Johnstone, her Majesty's Commissioner for Central Africa. The voyage was a long and rough one, but the men landed at Zanzibar in good health. A detachment of them left immediately in the British India steamer Yuba for the Zambesi, while the remainder will be taken up later on. This force will be joined at the Commissioner's camp by a body of specially enlisted Soudanese and Zanzibaris, who are to form the police force for the Central African Administration, but the Indian sepoy will be the backbone of the force. The whole will be under the command of Capt. Maguire, who has been lent for that purpose by the Government of India. Capt. Stairs, late of Stanley's Expedition, was just leaving Zanzibar for Katanga when the Indian contingent arrived. He is now serving in a Belgian company, had no Englishman, and only two or three Frenchmen and Belgians with him.

DEATH-TRAPS AT INDIAN STATIONS.

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

DEAR SIR,—Once again the cry reaches us from India regarding the prevalence of typhoid fever among our European troops stationed there. I think it has been clearly proved that typhoid fever is the result of an impure supply of water. This year some dozen stations have been named as typhoid centres, Meerut among the rest. Perhaps I can throw some light upon the subject as far as Meerut is concerned. I can remember distinctly that just immediately before the Mutiny of 1857, a system of cesspools was introduced for the disposal of the faecal and other matter from the soldiers' latrines. Each latrine was connected by a drain to one of these cesspools, and the contents of the latrines were swept into it by sweepers and bheesties kept for the purpose. A cesspool consisted of a hole dug to water-level and lined with open brickwork steining, the mouth being roofed over with a dome of masonry. Now, seeing that the wells from which the water supply was taken were always near these cesspools, is it to be wondered at that our troops have always, and are still, suffering from cholera and typhoid in Meerut. I do not speak without a perfect knowledge of my facts, and, if Government care to do so, they can verify my statements by referring to the drawings and records of the old 11th or Meerut Division P.W.D. (now the Meerut Division, Military Works), for the years 1855-60. Apart from this I can name a gentleman now in India, who was at that time in the Meerut Division, and who constructed more than one of these cesspools.*—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully, FACT.

[* The least punishment this gentleman deserves for his stupidity or criminal negligence is hanging.—ED. O.M.]

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

SIR,—On or about July 9 some remarks on Indian Staff Corps promotion appeared in the Pioneer to which officers of that branch of the Service may attach too much importance. What the Secretary of State for India said to Mr. Gourley was, "The Secretary of State is not aware that there is any grave discontent and, as at present advised, has no intention of taking the initiative in the matter." This reply indicates nothing either for or against. It is the firm intention of the officers of the Indian Staff Corps to persevere in their efforts to obtain what they consider is their due. No one attempts to deny that their promotion is far slower than that of the British Service, and that they lose heavily in point of pay and in chances of holding commands and gaining brevets and distinctions. The contention that promotion in the British Service is slowing down again is not borne out by facts. Quite recently Line officers have received their majorities in 13 years' service, and even the Royal Engineer officers, whose promotion is slowest of all, get their captaincies and majorities in 8½ and 18½ years. It has been urged that officers cannot claim alterations to rules which they once accepted. The answer to this is that Government alters these rules whenever it chooses, and that the officers themselves have an equal right to ask for their modification. Within the last fifteen years loss by exchange, by income tax, by reduction of officiating allowances, and by charges levied on remittances has been imposed upon us, and has been accepted by us. We have also accepted the enormous increase of work and duty that now falls on us. These we accept in most cases (except the officiating allowances and to some extent the stress of work) in company with our brother officers of the British Service. But we do demur when we find ourselves deprived of the chances of promotion, pay, and preferment that the officers of the British Service enjoy. In conclusion, I can now assure you that it is the intention of the officers of the Indian Staff Corps to bring this to the notice of the House of Commons in conformity with constitutional methods, and that they hope to find that House more sympathetic than the authorities more nearly concerned appear to be. If we fail, we shall have done our best, and possibly public sympathy with us may find its expression in a falling off of applicants for the Indian Staff Corps. If that is the case we shall have a still better chance of success. The soldier who enters the Indian Staff Corps under existing conditions is shortsighted. Let him bide his time. He and we will both gain then.

F. A. D.

The Portuguese in India.—The Chronicle asks Lord Salisbury whether the time has not come to put an end to an anomalous state of things, which is a chronic source of vexation and irritation to Her Majesty's Catholic subjects in India? Is it becoming to the imperial dignity of England in the East that in one of her chief cities 100,000 of her subjects should be for two years deprived of an Archbishop because, forsooth, they must wait till the King of Portugal nominates one for them? Just now Lord Salisbury has a golden opportunity for doing the Catholic community of India a signal service. Of all the Portuguese colonies, either in Asia or Africa, Goa is the only one without a bankrupt treasury, and why? Because most of the administration of the colony was by treaty taken over by the Government of Bombay, who pay the Portuguese a yearly subsidy for it. It is this, and this alone, that enables the Portuguese Government to pay their way in India. This treaty, however, lapsed quite recently, and the negotiations for its renewal, the journal contends, give us an ample opportunity for delivering our Catholic fellow-subjects in India from the yoke of Portuguese prelates and priests.

European Civil Service Association.—At a meeting of the members of the European Civil Service Association, held at the Poona Gymkhana Club, a discussion took place regarding the extension to the services generally of the more favourable retirement rules now enjoyed by the Public Works and some other departments, and the maximum limit of pension being raised in the case of officers holding high appointments in various branches of the service. It was decided to take up these points and obtain the co-operation of the Calcutta and London Committees in bringing them to the notice of the Secretary of State. A drawing of a testimonial which it is proposed to present to Mr. King, M.P., in token of his valuable services last year to Indian officers, was exhibited.

Typhoid in Cantonments.—The Pioneer says:—In our cantonments at the present moment typhoid is extremely prevalent, the death-rate among British soldiers being alarmingly high in such places as Rawul Pindi and Lucknow. This is no uncommon experience, for of late years the disease has frequently broken out. No really effectual steps have been found to check its ravages, and it might have been thought that the State would welcome the opportunity of sending some representative medical officers to the coming Congress to learn the opinions of the highest scientific authorities collected in council together. Native chiefs who are sending delegates to London are being loudly praised in the English Press for their public spirit, and it certainly appears strange that the Indian Government cannot spare a few thousand rupees from the military budget for the same purpose.

AGENCY AT PORT SAID.

Messrs. HENRY S. KING & CO. have opened an Office at PORT SAID, and their Representative will go on board all Steamers when they arrive, to furnish Passengers with any Information or Assistance they may require, and to receive their Instructions for transmission to the London Firm or Branches.

LONDON: WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1891.

SCHWANNERIES.

A LETTER in the 'delightful SCHWANN manner, printed in minion—elzevir would not have been too small—appears in the Daily News, in which the member for North Manchester poses as a critic of SIR JOHN GORST's answer the other night to MR. MACLAREN, M.P., during the discussion on the Indian Budget. The Under-Secretary's irony is of too fine a temper to be appreciated by such a mind as that of MR. SCHWANN, M.P. What SIR JOHN GORST said in effect was that so long as fussy politicians on the Opposition side chose to raise, on so modest a measure as the Councils Bill, which has been before the House for three Sessions, a series of "great constitutional questions," he did not see how time could be found for their discussion, and "the people of India would have to wait some time longer before they enjoyed those modest reforms which had been promised by the VICEROY." This is harmless enough, and in our opinion, neatly to the point, but MR. SCHWANN does not see it. "I ask," he writes, "is this a dignified way for a great nation to deal with 285 millions of its fellow-subjects in India?" Is India to be denied the "modest reforms" because certain members of Parliament wish to discuss wider questions? SIR JOHN GORST, of course, meant to insinuate as delicately as possible that the Government could not find time for a discussion of the entire political system of India by the MORTONS, KEAYS, SCHWANNs, et id genus omne, day after day simply to pass a small amendment of the constitution of Indian Councils. To MR. SCHWANN, M.P., this is "ridiculous and exasperating." With what he thinks a clever, sly hit at the author of the reference to Tarquinius Superbus, he exclaims—"It is the policy of 'mediocrity' with a vengeance!" We can imagine the fine contempt of a genius like MR. SCHWANN for a policy of "mediocrity." Poor LORD CROSS has no chance in the hands of a master of sarcasm so refined as MR. SCHWANN. SIR J. GORST said moreover, that the Bill had been withdrawn this Session "at the special request of the leaders of the Party opposite." Pooh! remarks MR. SCHWANN—Leaders quotha? Why I don't call them "leaders." "They are as timorous and nearly as Conservative as the ordinary official Tory." Why, he wants to know, should not the elective principle be discussed? "The Indian National Congress (he says) expresses the opinion of enlightened India, and the higher officials in India are laudably anxious to ascertain the opinion of the best educated Indians, whether Hindoos or Mahomedans, on Indian questions, and are by no means hostile to the Congress." Readers in India will appreciate the—well we will call it the Schwannery of this declaration, which is intended to convey to the mind of the British elector, who does not know any better, that the higher official opinion in India is in favour of the demands of the Congress as to the "elective principle." Here is the SCHWANN proof:—

Sir Charles Elliott, as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, in January last, on receiving a deputation of Indian gentlemen, said "he deemed it right, at the outset of his administration, to declare his views in regard to popular movements in India. He wished to correct the mistaken impression that the Government was hostile to the Congress. The Government had no bias for or against the Congress. They considered it a movement which private persons were perfectly free to follow and encourage."

It is characteristic of the SCHWANN M.P. intellect to quote these cautious words as an evidence of the laudable anxiety of the higher officials to ascertain the opinion of the best educated Indians—by the "elective principle." If not in that way where is the relevancy of the quotation? SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT said that the "Government had no bias for or against the Congress." Even MR. SCHWANN, M.P., must have wit enough to note the "for" as well as the "against," but it suits his purpose to overlook it. SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT, however, is, it appears after all, but as sounding brass, for, as MR. SCHWANN, M.P., goes on to explain in his candid manner—"here, every old-fashioned Anglo-Indian officer, with some noble exceptions, fancies he will curry favour (an acute local allusion) with the powers that be by decrying the Congress and all its works." This is throwing a new and quite surprising light on recent promotions to the Secretary of State's Council. Hence the noble body of men, who prove that they are not agitators, but truly loyal men, by travelling thousands of miles to attend the Congress—this is where the conceit of the Globe-trotter comes in—are scouted by old-fogy officialdom, though, according to MR. SCHWANN, M.P., they read "ADAM SMITH and STUART MILL," and "are beginning to be moved by the same political aspirations which made England what she is." The ardour of their noble aspirations, however, is "damped by the very infantine and transparent diplomacy of LORD CROSS and his cynical, pushing, but totally unsympathetic representative in the Commons, qualities which in my opinion"—says MR. SCHWANN, M.P.—"unfit him for the duties he is called upon to fill towards our progressive but sensitive fellow-subjects in India." Having thus relieved himself, MR. SCHWANN, M.P., shuts up and signs his name. It is doubtless a depressing fact to ardent Radicals like MR. SCHWANN that our "progressive but sensitive fellow-subjects in India" should have to put up with a hard-headed, unhysterical Under-Secretary like SIR JOHN GORST. But MR. SCHWANN and his friends think they see daylight. A new era is dawning. When a Gladstone Government comes in, the recreant official leaders will not "be allowed much show if the Radical element is to count for anything." SIR JOHN KAY SHUTTLEWORTH, who thinks himself marked out for the post of Minister for India, will have to take a back seat. Then, perhaps, who knows?—for it is the unexpected that happens—"progressive but sensitive" India may find a fit representative of its delicate and ingenuous aspirations in MR. SCHWANN, M.P., as Secretary of State for India.

THE INDIAN FACTORY ACTS.

"AN INDIAN MILL MANAGER" writes a sensible and temperate letter to the Times in which he takes up the statements of MR. PROVAND in the House—evidently adopted from MR. HALLETT—and declares from his own experience that the labour imposed on women and children in Indian factories is not so severe as the quotations from official reports with which MR. HALLETT sprinkles his papers and letters would imply. We must accept the Manager's statements as candid, though he withholds his name, which we think in a controversy of this kind, especially when a man is virtually pledging his own authority against allegations founded on official reports, is a mistake. If the Indian mill-owners wish to be listened to, they must fight in the open. "A Mill Manager" writes very well, and there seems to be no legitimate reason for abstaining from giving the authority of his proper signature to his assertions. He explains away, by a description of the somewhat perfunctory manner in which, it seems, the discipline of the mills is enforced, the charge that the long hours, which are reported by the Commissioners to be exacted, bear too heavily on the work-people, whether women, children or adult males, but he still has to meet such statements as MR. HALLETT in another letter to the Times, and yesterday in his violent paper at the Hygienic Congress, extracts from the Commissioner's report, as to the employment of hundreds of children between the ages of nine and twelve as full-timers in contravention of the law, and as to the beating of children by overseers.

These statements, to satisfy English feeling, will have to be met, and it should be proved that, if any such grievances have really existed, the Indian Government has taken effective means to stop them. The Manager closes his letter with some reflections which are well worth pondering—

If motives of humanity, not professedly, but really, actuate Mr. Provand and men like him, and if our great English nation would work to prevent a grievous wrong being done a subject nation, they should not only refrain from tampering with the Indian factory laws, but should promptly repeal the one recently introduced. There is no free education in India; indeed, for the working classes there is no education at all; so the results of the recent factory legislation will be these—the children of the working man and woman who formerly contributed to the family earnings, and who were brought under wholesome and civilising influences, will in future be debarred from entering any mill premises, and will thus be forced by the British nation to roam the bazaars in idleness and grow in nothing but vice; the family will be thrown into poverty, and the more children there are the greater will be the poverty. And this legislation will not only affect Hindoos and Mahomedans; it will also vitally affect native Christians and the societies whose work is the spread of Christianity. The native children brought up by these societies have hitherto in many cases, on attaining a certain age, been sent into a mill, and their earnings have been paid to the society. I have many native Christian boys and women in my mill, and by obtaining fixed employment they have enriched the funds of their society and have been kept out of vice. But in future they cannot be employed, so that the society will be burdened with their maintenance to an extreme age, or they will relapse to heathenism and vice.

MANIPORE.

It is a satisfaction to learn that the two men chiefly responsible for the Manipore massacres have met with their deserts. The decision of the VICEROY in Council in the case of these malefactors seems to meet with approval in this country, though the Daily News put in a plea for the Tongal General on the ground of his extreme age. If, however, the Tongal General is admitted to be guilty of the charges which the Court found to be proved against him, and was, as must be taken for granted, responsible for his actions, it is carrying sentiment to the verge of absurdity to urge that he ought to have escaped the supreme punishment he has so richly deserved. To be logical the Daily News should argue that every man over a certain age may commit capital crimes without incurring the penalty which the law attaches to them. The SENAPUTTY is cheerfully handed over to the executioner by the Daily News—which so far shows a gleam of manly sense. Considering the part the Tongal General played in the horrible business, to have mitigated his punishment would have been misplaced mercy, and, in point of policy a blunder. The lesser punishment of the REGENT and PRINCE ANGAO SENA will show that the India Government, while meting out justice with a stern hand, is not vindictive. Every one regrets that so long a delay should have been allowed to elapse between the trial and sentence, but the responsibility for that rests not with the VICEROY in Council, but with the authorities at Home, who were altogether too nervous of public opinion. If it objected to entrapping men at Durbars, the public never seriously wavered in its view that the crimes of Manipore called for exemplary punishment, and recognised moreover the political necessity of it. The further announcement by telegraph that the idea of annexation has been abandoned seems also to be generally accepted as the most satisfactory solution of a difficult problem.—Overland Mail.

REORGANISATION OF THE FOREST DEPARTMENT.

A SIMLA telegram of July 30 says:—An important resolution on the reorganisation of the superior staff of the Forest Department is now being issued. At an extra yearly cost of 3 lacs the Imperial and Provincial Services are to be separated. The Imperial is to be recruited solely under covenant with the Secretary of State, and the average pay raised 6 per cent. The Provincial Service gives 126 appointments, up to 600 per mensem, to natives of India. The Forest Department is the first to introduce a complete scheme under the Public Service Commission. The recommendations, which were forestalled by the proposals of the Inspector-General of Forests, with supplementary resolutions, secured all the appointments of the Provincial Branch to competition and meritorious services.

Mr. F. C. Danvers, Registrar and Superintendent of Records at the India Office, having obtained permission from the Portuguese authorities to examine their State archives relating to the Portuguese ascendancy and possessions in India, has been deputed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to visit Lisbon for the purpose of searching the records there relating to the early years of British Indian trade, with the view of collecting information that may help to fill some of the gaps that at present occur in the oldest records of the late East India Company.

Correction.—In the abstract of the Miranzai Expedition despatches published in the Homeward Mail of July 27, among the names mentioned in the second Expedition "O. Dunne, Telegraph Department," should have been "Mr. Oldbury Burne, Telegraph Department."

The correspondent of the Glasgow Herald in London writes:—Sir Frederick Roberts will in November 1892 complete seven years in the Indian command-in-chief, and a rumour has reached me, which I believe to be authentic, to the effect that he will then be succeeded by the Duke of Connaught. The post is worth 100,000 rupees, and is second in dignity only to that held by the Duke of Cambridge. The Duke is now only forty-one, but rapid as has been his advancement it appears slow beside that of the Duke of Cambridge, who was a colonel at eighteen, lieutenant-general at thirty-three, field-marshal at forty-three, and general-commanding-in-chief at fifty-seven. It is not improbable that upon the decease or retirement of the Duke of Cambridge army government may be revolutionised. Many of the recommendations of Lord Hartington's Commission—among them one which would reduce the importance of the head of the Horse Guards, making him a kind of chief-of-staff to the Secretary for War—have been hung up for the present, on account mainly of the Duke of Cambridge's opposition, but when he retires they are very likely to be adopted.

We are informed that the statement in the above paragraph—if not improbable—is premature. No successor to Sir F. Roberts has yet been fixed upon.

A telegram from Paris (Aug. 10) states:—M. Ribot to-day received M. Pavie, French Consul at Luang Prabang, and the other members of the exploring expedition recently conducted by him on the borders of Tonquin, and, after congratulating them on the magnificent results they had obtained, expressed the hope that, after a well-earned rest, they would return and render fresh services to France and Indo-China.

Prince Damrong, brother of the King of Siam, is expected in Paris on Saturday or Sunday next.

A Bangkok correspondent writes that on the occasion of the birthday of the Crown Prince of Siam, the German Minister to the Court of Siam invested him with the Order of the Red Eagle of the first class. This is the first foreign Order the heir to the Crown of Siam has received. The German Minister has received the Grand Cross of the Crown of Siam.

Among the passengers who arrived in Liverpool on Aug. 15 by the Cunard steamer Etruria, from New York, was Viscount Nomura, the newly-appointed Japanese Ambassador to France. His Excellency, accompanied by his secretary, was on landing met by Mr. Bowes, the Japanese Consul in Liverpool, and was driven to the Consulate. In the afternoon he left for London.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, July 27.

THE Money Market remains in the same position of remarkable ease. In the bazaar first-class hundies can be discounted at 2 per cent., and the banks are discounting good bills at 1½ per cent. At their meeting on July 23 the directors of the Bank of Bengal made no change in the bank's official minimum rate of interest and discount, which continues, therefore, to be 3 per cent. From the statement of the affairs of the Bank of Bengal for the week ended on July 21, it appears that there was an increase of over 22½ lacs in the public demand for money. The treasury balance at the head office is increased by 20 lacs, and reduced at the branches by 9 lacs, while the bank's investments were realised to the extent of over 2½ lacs. The actual result of the various changes shown by the statement is an increase of about 9 lacs in the cash at the branches, the exact total being 7,38,78,147 rs., equal to 69.4 per cent. of the current liabilities of the bank, as compared with 69 per cent. last week, and a proportion of 64.7 per cent. the previous week.

Although the exchange market has been fairly steady, quotations close slightly below the former current rates. Government Paper has continued very steady, the price of Fours having slowly risen from 107 rs. 9 a. to 107 rs. 14 a. The amount of business passing even in the Four per Cent. Loan is not large, and in Four-and-a-Half per Cents. there has been absolutely nothing doing.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' SHARES.—The market, with the single exception of jute shares, which continue strong and in fair inquiry, continues dull, and the amount of business passing is small. There is still a good deal of money on the look-out for investment, but the high prices ruling for all jute stock, which at the moment appears to many almost the only desirable class of investment in the market, rather deter investors, and the number of shares that have changed hands during the week is not large. There has been a smart rise in the shares of the Indian Imperial Marine Insurance Company from 7½ to 12½. Tea Scrip generally continues dull and difficult of sale; Burkolahs have sold at 32; Jetinga Valley, 71; and Jokai, ex-dividend, at 185. At the eleventh sale of the tea season, out of 15,253 packages offered for sale, only 13,834 found buyers. The report states that prices for ordinary and common descriptions were irregular and fractionally lower.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, July 30.

Business has become contracted into very small dimensions, little having been done on any of the leading lines of exports; while the more favourable weather and crop reports from the cotton-growing districts have relieved the anxiety with regard to the principal staple, which had been felt in the absence of timely rain over a portion of the area. With little doing either in Bank remittance or in mercantile bills, exchange had, upon the whole, advanced somewhat; but afterwards rates receded slightly, and close on about the level of former quotations. Money is superabundant, and the Bank of Bombay rate is now 2 per cent. Government Paper is 3-16 per cent. lower in Fours. There has latterly been a steadier feeling in freights, and holders of tonnage have been asking higher rates, but demand has been restricted. The tone at closing, however, is firmer, with more inquiry. The improved tenor of the weather reports from the interior have given a better tone to the ready import market, and have imparted more life to the arrival branch.

MONEY.—Following an increase of 42½ lacs shown by the Presidency Bank's previous statement of affairs, the cash balance at the close of last week had been further augmented by some 55½ lacs, bringing the balance up to 352½ lacs. The figures issued by the Bank on July 27 disclosed little movement on the whole in Government Deposits, and the result attained was due almost entirely to the falling-off in trade requirements. There had been some small additions to loans in the week covered by the return, but private deposits had increased by 45½ lacs, while bills discounted had diminished considerably more than in the two weeks preceding, the net decrease in the demand being represented by 54½ lacs, which fitly illustrate the present dulness of trade, deepened as it has been by a tardy rainfall and uncertain (though now improved) harvest prospects. In presence of this state of things, and with the probability of a plethora of cash in the immediate future, the Bank of Bombay has reduced its rates by 1 per cent., so that the minimum now stands at 2 per cent.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The accounts from the districts regarding the progress of the monsoon having been favourable, the feeling at the close is quiet but steady. Previous prices for staple grey goods have been maintained, but holders are willing sellers in presence of increasing supplies, meeting, however, with few buyers. In bleached, Turkey red, dyed, and printed goods, there has been no change since the date of last report. Supplies of locally-made goods are increasing every week, and prices are ruling in buyers' favour. The week's clearances of imported goods from the bazaar is estimated at 2,000 packages; those of local goods at about 1,000 bales.

YARNS.—Only a small business has transpired in imported twist in a quiet market, and with prices quite unchanged. Advices from China make the sales of Bombay spinners for the week ending July 27 only 2,500 to 3,000 bales, with Exchange at 221 rs., or one dollar lower as compared with last week's quotation. Spinners here are willing to sell in any quantity at easier rates, but they meet with only a few up-country buyers. China buyers are quite out of the market now. Latterly a better demand has sprung up for the interior, but there are still no buyers for China. The week's sales are put down at 3,500 bales.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done in copper in a quiet market and prices are unchanged, the decline on the other side notwithstanding. Yellow metal has been steady at previous rates, but with not much doing. Iron has been quiet at last quotations for all descriptions. Coal sales have been reported during the week of Powell's Duffryn on the bunker at 15½ rs. per ton; and of some ready lots of Tylor Merthyr Cardiff, at 14 rs. per ton alongside.

Exports.—COTTON.—A steady feeling prevailed in this market to the close of last week, and prices were unchanged; but business continued on a very small scale, both for export and local consumption. On the market reopening on July 27 there was no demand whatever from local spinners, and only a slight inquiry from shippers; and thereafter the tone remained quiet, with very little doing in either direction, but with rates generally quoted as before. The week's purchases by the mills sum up about 3,500 bales, chiefly of Oomra and Dhollera descriptions, Broach, Dharwar, and Bengals; while exporters have taken about 1,000 bales less, consisting of Mowaa and Bhownggur, Oomra kinds, Dharwar, and Ginned Camptee. The market closed steady, with prices on the same level as they were.

WHEAT remained very quiet in tone after the departure of last mail, with only a small business passing for export, but with prices unaltered until July 27, when prices were put down half an anna per cwt. for all descriptions, the market thereafter continuing inactive, though latterly with a steadier feeling.

SEEDS have also been neglected to a great extent by shippers, and at the beginning of the week a decline of an anna per cwt. was established in the price of rapeseed of all descriptions, other kinds remaining unaltered in a quiet market.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE

ONLY GENUINE.

SPECIFIC
CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C.
BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff)
DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORO-DYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE IN-VENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances deying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.
This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.
—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states, "2 DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical
Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,

TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-

ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,

PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The

IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY

has given rise to many UNSCRU-

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Aug. 4; Madras, Aug. 5; Bombay, Aug. 7.

The Allahabad paper says on Aug. 6:—The Viceroy will reach Calcutta this winter rather earlier than usual, as his Excellency will in all probability pay a visit to Burma during the cold weather. The autumn tour has not yet been finally settled, but Lord Lansdowne will most likely leave Simla early in the third week of October. This would enable him to arrive at Calcutta before the end of November.

The vacancy in the Legislative Council, caused by Sir Charles Crosthwaite's taking furlough, is to be treated as a permanent one, so a new appointment will have to be made forthwith.

The Secretary of State has refused the request of the Civilian Judges of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts that the 4 per cent. deductions from their salaries for the Civil Pension Code may be abolished.

The Civil and Military Gazette understands that Messrs. Flashman and Co., Jehangir and Co., J. Burke, and other well-known firms, together with the Commissariat purchasing agents, have filed a suit against the Secretary of State for India, claiming damages for not having been mentioned at all in despatches on recent frontier expeditions. This seems all the harder, as it is a matter of common report that, but for the strenuous efforts of these gentlemen, the frontier expeditions would not have terminated at all.

There will be shortly commenced the line from Bhatinda to Bahawalpore, and the line connecting Ferozepore with the main line of the North-Western system between Amritsar and Ludhiana. Both extensions will be on the broad gauge.

The Chenab river is to be bunded at Khanki, and the canal made through the Rechna Doab. The Government, in view of this development of the country between Chenab and Ravi rivers, are about to take up land for the new railway from Wazirabad to Mooltan by way of Chiniot and Jhang.

Unreliable rumours are afloat of impending frontier disturbances. This time it is on the Kohat frontier, where it is pretended that the Afridis of Tirah are preparing to attack the posts on the Samana. These rumours are of value, says the Times of India, not as indicating the intentions of the tribes, but as showing that their spirit is not all that it should be.

Trade between India and Cabul is decreasing. The returns show a difference of 42 per cent. on exports and 39 per cent. on imports, less than last year.

Rather exaggerated accounts must have been reaching England about the agricultural outlook in these Provinces, says the Allahabad paper, or "even Lord Cross" would have hardly indulged himself in the wholly superfluous exertion of telegraphing to the Viceroy a warning to be prepared for relief measures. On the other hand, "even Lord Cross" might have been expected to know that as the autumn crops would not in any case come into the market before November, there was no reason to apprehend a sudden outbreak of famine in July. To ask people to imagine that famine, that standing dread of the Indian administration, with all its hideous premonitory symptoms, might creep upon the Governments out here unawares, if its approach were not detected by the watchful eye of Lord Cross, is as good a specimen of the attitude of the India Office as has been forthcoming for some time.

It will hardly be believed, says the North China Herald of July 17, though we are assured that it is the fact, that up to the 1st of this month Sir John Walsham has never notified the British Consul at Tainan of the removal of the camphor monopoly in Formosa, and the British Consul had to get his information from the German Consul. Mr. von Brandt notified his Consul at Tainan, Dr. Merz, that the monopoly was to cease to exist on a certain day. The German Consul, who was no doubt quite right to look after his own nationals, gave them the information under the seal of secrecy, whereby they got a start, and British merchants were severely handicapped; in fact, up to the present it has kept them out of the trade. As soon as his nationals had made all their arrangements, Dr. Merz told Mr. Warren the facts. It is easy to see how humiliating such an incident is for the English Consul, as well as how discouraging it is for British merchants.

We (Standard) are informed that the Government of his Highness the Nizam has officially sanctioned the appointment of Lord Herschell as arbitrator to decide certain disputes pending between the Government and the Hyderabad (Deccan) Company.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE Times correspondent at Calcutta telegraphs as follows:—

AUG. 20.—The Governor of Madras, speaking at Hospet, urged the desirability of investing in agricultural banks, and also impressed upon the people the supreme importance of digging wells, to which he promised the Government would give every encouragement.

AUG. 23.—The Governor of Madras, who has been visiting Bellary, found no evidence of the present distress there. He proceeded to Cuddapah yesterday. The Madras Press considers that the recent decision of the Government as to the wages of labourers on the relief works is a proof of the humane and considerate manner in which all questions connected with the distress are dealt with.

The Madras public appears to be strongly opposed to the Bill for extending the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Courts. A meeting to protest against the Bill has been called and a requisition has been signed by the leading members of the community, both European and native.

We have received from the India Office the following copy of a telegram from the Governor of Madras, dated Ootacamund, Aug. 21 :—
 "There has not been much rain during this week. The good rain referred to in my telegram of August 14 last effected improvement in condition of Ganjam, Nellore, Cuddapah, Chingleput, and North Arcot, but more rain urgently required for these districts and also for Bellary, South Arcot, Salem, and Coimbatore. Ample work is provided for all requiring it, nine kitchens being started in Coimbatore. Number of persons employed on relief works—6,507 in Chingleput; 9,115 in North Arcot; 3,747 in Coimbatore; 2,505 in Nellore. Number on gratuitous relief—1,859 in Chingleput; 3,181 in North Arcot. Prices still rising."

G U P.

ON Thursday, Aug. 20, was celebrated the marriage between Mr. Arthur Edward Ash, son of Mr. George Claudius Ash, and Miss Gertrude Mary Burne, daughter of Major-General Sir Owen Burne, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., of the Indian Council. The ceremony took place at the Harrow Road Church, Paddington, and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Among those present we noticed Lord and Lady Kilmaine, Lord and Lady Congleton, Major-General and Hon. Mrs. Montgomery Moore, Mr. and Mrs. William Ash, General Burne, Mr. and Hon. Mrs. Newdigate Burne, Lieutenant-General Sir Martin Dillon, Sir Joseph and Lady Fayer, Hon. Mrs. Abel Smith, Hon. Mrs. Jones-Loyd, Lady Brind, Major and Miss Childs, Canon and Lady Ellen Gordon, Hon. Henry and Lady Mary Douglas, Admiral Hon. George Douglas, Rev. Cyril Mayhew, Hon. Misses Douglas Pennant, Colonel St. Quinton, Sir George and Lady Birdwood, Mr. S. Digby, Mr. M. M. Bhowaggree, Mr. Holland Burne, Miss du Pre, Colonel and Lady Alice FitzGerald, Major-General and Mrs. Goldsworthy, Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Murphy, Colonel Martindale, Surg.-Major and Mrs. Hendley, and many others. The interior of the church was adorned with a number of magnificent tropical plants. The bride's dress was of rich ivory satin duchesse, with long train, trimmed with fine old Brussels lace and orange blossom, the veil being fastened by clusters of diamond stars and brooches. The bridesmaids were Miss Evelyn Burne, sister of the bride, Miss Ellen Ash, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Christabel Burne, Miss Isabel Maynard, and Miss Kathleen Burtchael. Their dresses were of white sprigged muslin, made over cornflower-blue silk, festooned with flounce of deep lace. The service was choral, being beautifully rendered by an efficient choir of male and female voices. The organ was ably presided over by Dr. E. H. Turpin, Mus.Doc. Outside the crowded church was a large assembly of the neighbouring poor, who had been visited for some years past by Lady Agnes and Miss Burne, and who came specially to wish happiness to the newly-married couple. After the register had been signed, the bridal party adjourned to the residence of Sir Owen and Lady Agnes Burne, where the wedding breakfast was served. The bride and bridegroom left shortly afterwards for West Cliffe, Isle of Wight, to spend the honeymoon. The numerous and costly presents were greatly admired. They included diamond ornaments and a service of silver plate from the parents of the bride and bridegroom, and others from Lord and Lady Kilmaine, General Burne, Mr. and Mrs. William Ash, Capt. and Mrs. George Burne, the Dowager Lady Mayo, the Earl and Countess of Lytton, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sassoon, Hon. Mark and Lady Gertrude Rolle, Rev. Hon. Henry and Lady Mary Douglas, Sir Martin Dillon, Sir Joseph and Lady Fayer, Sir Albert Sassoon, Mr. Bhowaggree, Mr. S. Digby, Mr. and Mrs. George Allen, Lady Lurgan, Dowager Lady Beaumont, Sir Robert and Lady Abercromby, Sir Thomas and Lady Sutherland, Colonel and Mrs. Francis, Canon Hon. Douglas and Lady Ellen Gordon, Mr. Holland Burne, Mr. and Miss Woodhouse, the servant of both households, Colonel St. Quinton and Lady Sheffield, Hon. Lady Abercromby, and many others.

The Pioneer correspondent wrote from Simla on July 29 :—The one great subject of interest in Simla for weeks past has certainly been the unhealthiness of the season. We were not so much concerned when merely influenza was abroad, though its effects were serious enough, as the Viceroy and many others found to their cost. But the absence of heavy rain during the first twenty days of the month resulted in an outbreak of typhoid of a virulent type. The cases were numerous enough to tax the full powers of Drs. Lewtas and Coates, the spur on the old road to Annandale on which "Wheatfield" stands being the worst part of the station. The small bazaar above the gaol is always an evil-smelling locality, and the houses upon the neighbouring slopes are so closely packed that it is not matter for surprise that the disease should have appeared on them in such an abnormal season. But the rain which has fallen in the last few days has had a most beneficial effect. No new case of typhoid has appeared since last Thursday, and the patients already under treatment have distinctly improved. There is no sign of a break so far, and we shall welcome a further downpour if it will only come quickly.

Some of the typhoid cases have probably been imported. Mr. Thomas, of the Telegraph Department, for example, had only just returned from the Black Mountain expedition when he was taken ill. The disease, in his instance, must have been contracted on his way to Simla, if indeed the seeds of it were not sown during the campaign. Another officer who had come up on leave at the close of the operations under General Elles died. Captain Chenevix Trench, of the 5th Goorkhas, arrived here in apparently good health, but abscess of the liver suddenly developed itself, and after a short illness of ten days the disease took a fatal turn. It was a sorrowful cortège which marched slowly down to the cemetery on Sunday afternoon to pay all military honours to the fine young officer who had been strong and well in our midst less than a fortnight before. The volleys which rolled across the valley, echoing from hill to hill, told the old sad story: yet another soldier laid at rest under the pines, after a brief career in this Land of Regrets.

From Poona the correspondent of the Allahabad paper writes :—Of local "gup" I have but little to give you. An officer of one of the British regiments, whom no one except his own corps seems ever to have heard of before, vented his dissatisfaction at dropping his money over a footrace by invading the printing office of a local paper in the dead of night, and sitting over the proof-reader until he had secured the publication of an utterly baseless slander against Mr. LeMesurier, who acted as judge and time-keeper, and was so unfortunate as to have a bet of ten rupees on the losing man. The editor, under pressure, gave up the sportsman's name, and the latter's case is now in the hands of the military powers—that be for disposal. The report that Mr. Teacher was the offender is quite baseless. His being suddenly ordered to Kemptee is due to his having been appointed second-in-command of his regiment by the Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards, and not to local pressure. If he works his men there as hard as he does his boys here the good old 47th are not likely to suffer from want of exercise when their colonel takes leave of absence.

A rifle-shooting competition took place at Ganeshkhind on Aug. 5, in which five couples competed for prizes. The conditions were five shots each at 50 and 100 yards, the competition being called the Affinity Stakes. Colonel Rhodes and Miss Croft were the successful couple, making 46 at 50 and 41 at 100 yards. Lord and Lady Harris took second place with 48 and 35 points. The scores were :—Dr. Martin and Miss Cunningham, 43 and 30; Major and Mrs. Von Donop, 43 and 37; Captain Peyton and Mrs. Quill, 40 and 37. In another match the competing teams being six ladies against six gentlemen, the latter won by only 2 points, the individual scores being Lady Harris 24, Miss Cunningham 21, Mrs. Quill 21, Mrs. Moller 20, Miss Croft 22, Mrs. Von Donop 22; total 130. Lord Harris 20, Dr. Martin 19, Captain Jervis 20, Captain Peyton 25, Major Von Donop 23, Colonel Rhodes 25; total 132.

The correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, writing from Poona on August 1, says :—To-day is the anniversary of the famous battle of Minden, and those who represent the old 20th Regiment, now the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers, have celebrated the brave deeds done by those who in that battle then made up the regiment. At eight o'clock this morning the whole battalion turned out on its parade-ground at Ghorpuri for the ceremony of trooping the colours. The weather was perfection—a bright fresh morning, a cool breeze blowing, and the glare and heat of the sun toned down by masses of fleecy clouds. The regiment was in full dress, and each officer and man wore roses in his helmet, in commemoration of an incident which is said to have occurred before the battle of Minden, when the troops passing through gardens plucked a rose and entered the fight with that Joral decoration. To-day the colours of the regiment, bearing the legends "Dettingen, Minden, Egmont-op-Zee, Egypt, Maida, Vimiera, Corunna, Vittoria, Pyrenees, Orthes, Toulouse, Peninsula, Alma, Inkermann, Sevastopol, and Lucknow," were wreathed with the emblematic floral trophy of the grand old regiment, and its drums were covered with roses. The visitors who turned out to see this gay and patriotic display were numerous, and H.E. the Governor and Lady Harris were also present. Among the other visitors were H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by Captain Peyton, A.D.C., General Blundell, accompanied by Captain Upperton, A.D.C., General and Mrs. Pottinger, Colonel Merriman, officers of the different regiments in the station, and Royal Artillery officers from Kirkee. The officers on parade were Colonel Goldsmith, commanding; Major Birch, Major Blomfield, Captain Tallents, Captain Wallington, Lieutenant Elmorlie, Lieutenant Norris, Lieutenant Maxwell, Lieutenant Lyons, Lieutenant Lane, Lieutenant Moore, Lieutenant Bryce, and Lieutenant Cameron. The regiment never looked brighter or in better trim, and the "Ladies' parade" was executed with a precision of drill which was splendid to witness. At the conclusion of the parade preparations were made for a merry day of sport, in which officers and men joined heartily. The parade-ground was laid out for the different events in the programme, the centre being occupied by a flower-decked flagstaff, from which the Union Jack and the regimental colours floated. Extensive accommodation was made for the visitors, enclosures being set apart and marquees erected. The sport commenced at two o'clock. The weather was delightful, and the ropes were encircled by hundreds of spectators. The programme contained twenty-one events, considerable money prizes being given to the winners in each. Lady Harris distributed the prizes.

The Belgaum correspondent of the Madras Times writes on July 31:—The great event of the week has been the visit of his Excellency Sir James Dormer, the Commander-in-Chief of Madras. His Excellency and Staff arrived by the afternoon train yesterday, and were met at the railway station by Brigadier-General Faunce and Staff, and heads of the military departments here. To lay-minds it seems not a little surprising that his Excellency should choose the wettest season of the year for the inspection of the troops under his command at this station. Some suggest that the Commander-in-Chief is anxious to satisfy himself that the cloaks and capes issued to the troops are sufficiently waterproof, Belgaum being well known for its heavy rain; while others, better informed as regards military matters, understand that the Arsenal in the fort, which has been lying vacant and open to the winds for some years past, is going to be carefully inspected with a view to its being re-established on its former footing. The re-opening of the Arsenal would, indeed, be a great boon to the fort of Belgaum, which, although one of those selected by Government to be kept in repair against another contingency like that of 1857, has been steadily falling into ruins. Last evening his Excellency visited the Gymnasium of the Cheshire Regiment, to witness a grand assault-at-arms and military tournament, the several events being gone through in a highly creditable manner, especially the last and most interesting of all. His Excellency presented the prizes to the successful competitors.

General Faunce, whose guest the Commander-in-Chief is, gave a dinner-party in the evening, which was followed by a ball at the Club, given by Mrs. Nugent, the wife of our distinguished Revenue Commissioner. This morning there was a parade of all the troops in the station, to be followed by a levée and inspection-dinner at the Cheshire Mess, and last, though not least, a grand performance at the Theatre Royal. Two performances, which have already taken place, have fully satisfied the expectations of the public.

The following paragraph from the Civil and Military Gazette should act as a warning to careless correspondents:—It is a standing notice to correspondents that all communications intended for publication should be authenticated with the sender's name and address. If, therefore, the gentleman who has addressed to us a letter covering four sides of notepaper, commencing "My darling pet," and ending "Your own loving hubble," will send his name and address, we will be happy, if he wishes, to publish it. People should always be careful to put the right letters into the right envelopes, because domestic complications may so easily arise if a wife should receive by accident a "Letter to the Editor," indicating her husband's views that, say, "marriage is a failure."

PERSONAL.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT had left Rampore Bauleah on his way to Pubna, where he was to spend Aug. 2 and 3. After a flying visit to Goalundo, his honour would return to Calcutta for the Council meeting on the 5th, and then resume his tour, visiting Faridpore, Dacca, Maimensingh, Narainganj, Dandkhandi, Madaripore, Barisal, Ferozepore, Gopalganj, Khulna, and Jessore. He was to reach Calcutta on Aug. 23.

Lieutenant-Colonel Coaker is confirmed as consulting engineer for railways in Madras.

The Hon. J. F. Price, Chief Secretary to the Madras Government, who had to submit to a surgical operation, was favourably progressing when the mail left, though still confined to his room.

Dr. Rake, of the Leprosy Commission, has left India for a short visit to Cashmere.

The funeral of Dr. Barclay on Aug. 3, at Simla, was largely attended. The Commander-in-Chief was present, and Lord William Beresford and Colonel Ardagh represented the Viceroy.

Dr. Wilson, Registrar of the Madras University, has left on furlough for England for fifteen months. Mr. Rungachariar will act as registrar.

Mr. C. A. Bull, on his return from furlough, is to be superintendent of ways and works, Burma State Railway.

Mr. T. H. Wickes has been confirmed as joint secretary to the N.W.P. Government in the Public Works Department.

Mr. E. B. Carroll has been elected chairman of the Bombay Municipal Standing Committee, in succession to the late Sir Henry Morland.

Mr. R. A. English officiates for Mr. G. H. D. Walker, as Under-Secretary to the Government of India, P.W.D., on the latter going on three months' privilege leave.

Mr. Tucker, first assistant agent to the Governor-General in Central India, will officiate as Under-Secretary in the Foreign Department on return from leave, Mr. Irwin going on three months' leave.

Mr. C. P. Cooper, chief presidency magistrate of Bombay, proceeded to England by the mail steamer on July 31 on three months' privilege leave. Mr. J. Sanders Slater, barrister-at-law, acts for him during his absence.

Mr. Robert Logan, Finance Department, has been appointed to inquire into the finances of Cashmere, and leaves for Srinagar shortly. His deputation is only for a period sufficient to enable him to report on the chronic embarrassment of the State, and to suggest remedies.

We (Indian Engineering) learn from the Amrita Basar Patricia that Babu Bhobany Prosad Neogy, B.A., Presidency College, Calcutta, who has been elected the Gilchrist scholar this year, leaves India by the end of August for England to study in the Cooper's Hill College.

Mr. Lane, Deputy Director-General, Indian Telegraphs, has proceeded home on three months' medical certificate. Mr. Pitman, in the absence of Mr. Melbush from duty owing to illness, has been appointed to act for Mr. Lane, Mr. Bevan officiating for Mr. Melbush as Director of Traffic.

There has been a good deal of sickness lately among the officers of the Telegraph Department. Mr. Hare, who was officiating as chief superintendent, Burma, has been invalided home on long leave, Mr. Hill, who has just returned from leave on medical certificate, taking up his old post at Rangoon. Mr. Pinhey and Mr. Mercer, who did good work on the Kohima-Tamboo routes, respectively, during the Manipore Expedition, have both had to take sick leave. Officers in Upper Burma, Chin Country, Lushailand, and Manipore have had exceptionally heavy duties to perform, and the casualties from illness have consequently been numerous.

Rumour continues to have it that Colonel MacNeile vacates his present appointment as chief engineer of irrigation and secretary to the Government of Bengal in the P.W.D. Mr. F. J. Johnstone, who has obtained the substantive post of joint-secretary, due to Mr. Martin's retirement, will then become secretary, and Mr. C. W. Odling will fill the post of joint secretary. Owing to Mr. Buckley being away on long leave, the superintending engineership, Sone circle, will probably fall to Mr. W. H. King, who is next on the list, and has already officiated in an irrigation circle.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

We have to record the death of Admiral Sir George St. Vincent Duckworth-King, Bart., K.C.B., which occurred at Wear House, his residence at Exeter, on Aug. 18. The late baronet was the second son of the late Admiral Sir Richard King, Bart., G.C.B., by his first wife, Anne, daughter of Admiral Sir John T. Duckworth, Bart., and was born in 1809. He was educated at the Royal Naval College, Portsmouth, and entered the navy in 1824. He served as captain of the Leander at the defence of Eupatoria in 1854, also of the Rodney at the blockade of Sebastopol, and was second in command of the Naval Brigade, and for his services in the Crimea had received the Crimean and Turkish medals, the clasp for Sebastopol, was made an officer of the Legion of Honour, and received the Third Class of the Order of the Medjidieh. He became Rear-Admiral of the White in 1863, in which year he was appointed commander in China and the East Indies, a post he held till 1867. He was made vice-admiral in March 1867, and promoted to be admiral in April 1875, and the following year was granted a good-service pension of 300*l.* The late Sir George was nominated a Companion of the Bath in 1855, and a Knight Commander of the Order in 1873. He succeeded his brother, Sir Richard Duckworth, as fourth baronet, in 1887, when he assumed the name of Duckworth. In 1847 Sir George married Lady Caroline Mary, sister of the third Earl of Portarlington, by which lady (who died in 1851) he leaves a son, Major Dudley Gordon Alan Duckworth-King, who succeeds to the baronetcy. The present baronet married last year Eva Mary, daughter of Major-General Ralph Gore.

Captain Arrowsmith, commander of the India General Steam Navigation Company's steamer Amir, died suddenly on July 26, from enlargement of the heart, when the steamer was passing Cutwa. The body was taken to Calcutta by the steamer Varona. The deceased was seventy-three years old and leaves a young widow of twenty-five, to whom he had been married only six months.

Mr. N. A. O. Wadia.—We (Bombay Gazette) regret to announce the death, on July 31, of Mr. Nusservanjee Ardesir Wadia, the father of the Hon. Mr. Nowrojee N. Wadia. Mr. Nusservanjee, following in the footsteps of his family and forefathers, who were shipbuilders in her Majesty's Dockyard, betook himself to mechanical engineering and rapidly acquired a scientific knowledge of that profession. Upwards of thirty years ago he proceeded to England to purchase machinery for the Victoria Mills. While he was in England he prosecuted his studies in the construction of boilers and mastered the subject with such proficiency that he was able to suggest improvements, for which he was granted a patent. For this patent, in strengthening the durability of boilers, he was offered a royalty of 1,500*l.*, which he declined. On his return to Bombay he was commissioned again to go to England for the purpose of purchasing machinery for the Royal Mills. On this occasion he took with him his eldest son, now the Hon. Mr. N. N. Wadia, for placing him in an engineering college, the result being that he is now one of the foremost in the profession, holding the office of chief engineer and manager of the principal mills belonging to Sir Dinshaw M. Petit, Bart. The late Mr. Wadia brought out with him the necessary machine equipment for the Royal Mills, which he himself set up, and commenced to work in December 1863. He then joined the Oriental Mill as manager, and subsequently the Bombay United Spinning and Weaving Company. But failing health compelled him latterly to lead a retired life. His second son, Mr. Sorabjee, is also employed in one of Sir Dinshaw's mills as a manager. His younger brother, Khan Bahadoor Rustumjee Ardesir Wadia, was for a long number of years an assistant master-builder and is now a Government pensioner. Mr. N. A. Wadia was nearly sixty years of age at the time of his death. His funeral and third day's obsequies were numerously attended by his friends and relatives.

The mail from Japan brings news of the death of Nakamura Masanao, professor, and life member of the House of Peers, who has played a prominent and interesting part in Japanese public life ever since the revolution of 1868. He was born in 1830, and was therefore brought up in the old school, where Chinese scholarship was everything. He became, and remained to the end, one of the finest Chinese scholars in Japan, and was also an authority on the history and theology of Buddhism.

MANIPORE.

THE STATE NOT TO BE ANNEXED.

A REUTER telegram from Manipore, dated Aug. 20, says:—The Regent and Prince Angao Sena and the man who led the attack on the Residency were quietly deported during last night in order to avoid a disturbance. They reached Sengmai this morning. At Kohima the prisoners will be handed over to the civil authorities, and will eventually be sent to the Andaman Islands.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Aug. 23:—

The Government Gazette yesterday contained a proclamation stating that whereas the State of Manipore was recently in armed rebellion against the Queen-Empress, and whereas her Majesty's representative and other officers were murdered, therefore it is notified that Manipore is liable to the penalty of annexation, and is now at the disposal of the Crown. It is further notified that her Majesty, believing that the punishment inflicted on the leaders of the rebellion is a sufficient vindication of her authority, is graciously pleased to forego the right to annex the State, and to consent to re-establish the native rule under such conditions as the Governor-General in Council considers desirable. The name of the ruler selected will be announced hereafter.

The same Gazette publishes a long resolution giving the reasons for the decision in the cases of the princes and other persons who were convicted. The most important point is the refusal to admit the argument that Manipore is independent of the Governor-General in Council. It expressly declares that Manipore was a subordinate and protected State, which owed submission to the paramount Power, and that its forcible resistance to a lawful order was an offence justifying the adequate punishment of the individuals concerned, as well as of the State as a whole.

DESPATCH FROM VISCOUNT CROSS.

There has been issued from the India Office a despatch addressed by Viscount Cross, Secretary of State for India, to the Governor-General of India in Council, expressing an opinion on the policy adopted by the Indian Government in regard to the revolution in Manipore. In reference to the action taken by the local authorities in giving effect to the instructions of the Indian Government, the papers which have reached her Majesty's Government are not, says the letter, adequate to enable an opinion to be expressed. After reiterating the chief facts in the matter, as set forth in the Viceroy's despatches, Lord Cross says:—

"Of the right of the Government of India to interfere after the forcible dispossession of the Maharaja, there can be no question. Your Government would undoubtedly have been justified in restoring the Maharaja by force in September, when the revolution took place, and had he not fled precipitately this course would probably have been adopted. Your interference was necessary, not only in the interests of the Manipore State, but also in the interests of the British Government; but, above all, it was necessary in the interest of the other protected States of India, for every chief would have felt that the stability of his power was compromised had you passed over without notice an unprovoked and successful rebellion proceeding only from family quarrels. I am satisfied, therefore, that your Government were right in deciding to interfere, and that your decision to remove the Senaputty from Manipore and intern him in India was sound and politic."

"The question whether the ex-Maharaja should be restored, or whether the Jobraj should be acknowledged as Maharaja, was by no means so clear as that of the Senaputty's removal." But after considering the subject in the light of the objections urged by Mr. Quinton to the restoration of the expelled Maharaja, Lord Cross expresses opinion that the Indian Government was justified in yielding to those objections. "So far, then, as the policy of your Government is concerned, I am glad that her Majesty's Government have been able to afford it their full support. It was honourable, it asserted the right of the Government of India, and it was calculated to give assurance to feudatory chiefs. Nor do I doubt that you were right in leaving to the discretion of the Chief Commissioner the details of the method for enforcing your decision."

Referring to Mr. Quinton's intention for causing the Senaputty, should he not surrender, to be arrested in Durbur, the Secretary for India writes:—"I fully concur with you that nothing like treachery can be imputed to Mr. Quinton in this matter; but care should be taken that persons summoned to attend Durbur, which are almost universally understood to be held for ceremonial purposes, should not be subjected therein to measures of personal restraint."

Commenting on the above despatch and Lord Cross's approval of the action taken by Lord Lansdowne's Government, the Standard says:—"On an impartial review of the evidence, it seems impossible to come to any other conclusion. The Indian Government formed a sound judgment on the facts before them, and their decision was in accordance with all the traditions of British policy in Asia. When they were first made acquainted with the forcible dispossession of the Maharaja by the Senaputty, and the pusillanimous flight of the former, they at once determined that the usurper must be deprived of his power and expelled. To have shirked this plain duty was out of the question. If they had calmly allowed the Senaputty to enjoy unmolested the fruits of his robbery and violence, they would have dealt a serious blow at their own prestige, and caused a natural alarm and anxiety to every feudatory prince in India who reigns under the protection of the English Raj. These potentates are encouraged to believe that their position is secure so long as they comply with the conditions laid down by the Government. To accept the results of an armed revolution, and a violent change of Government, produced by a family quarrel, would certainly be impolitic, and would deprive the princes of that guarantee of stability which they have a right to look for if they remain loyal to the suzerain Power. These considerations would apply to most of the protected States; but they had special force in the case of Manipore, since by the treaty of 1851 the Indian Government had given a distinct undertaking to uphold the Raja, and punish any attempt to dispossess him. Lord Lansdowne's determination to recognise the last-named prince as the sovereign, rather than the weak and cowardly Maharaja—who had voluntarily abandoned his kingdom at the first sign of danger—is also intelligible and defensible enough. It was necessary that authority should be vindicated, and usurpation discouraged, by the expulsion of the Senaputty. That done, it remained only to establish the Government which would be likely to maintain itself in Manipur with the smallest amount of friction. Such were the motives which guided Lord Lansdowne in the instructions he issued to Mr. Quinton. The unhappy mistakes which ended in a signal calamity cannot be fairly traced back to the action or inaction of the highest authorities in the Indian Empire. This is the view taken by Lord Cross. He is content to absolve Lord Lansdowne's advisers from the responsibility of the subsequent misfortunes. He does not go into the further question as to where that responsibility does really rest, and we need not complain of his reticence. It is clear enough that the errors lay not so much in the original instructions as in the steps by which they were carried into execution.

A telegram to the Times of India from Manipore (July 21) says:—The trial of Sokendra Brajit Singh, alias Wangkai Rakpa, of Manipore, has just been concluded. The accused was one of the leading officials in the Manipore State, and belonged to the royal family. He was charged with waging war against the Queen-Empress both at Manipore and at Thobal. The evidence proves that he was in command of a party on both occasions, and he himself admits the charge, and that he was in command of the guard at the inner west gate during the attack on the Pat. He states that he saw the Chief Commissioner and other officers taken into the Durbur Hall, and that he assisted in protecting them from the mob, but that he afterwards went to sleep, and said nothing of the executions, and did not hear of them till next morning. As his guard was only about 200 yards from the dragons, where the executions took place, and it was a moonlight night, this statement is absurd. The judgment of Major Maxwell, Chief Political Officer, is as follows:—"The accused holds the title of Wangkai Rakpa, and is one of the leading officials in the State. He admits having taken an active part in the revolt on March 24, and in the attack on the Residency. He also opposed Lieutenant Grant at Thobal. On the occupation of Manipore by the British on April 27 he fled, and was in hiding till captured on July 9. There is no direct evidence implicating the accused with the murder of the British officers, but there is no doubt he was aware of the occurrences on that night. The accused as a leading man should have used his influence to prevent the murders, as by his own statement he kept the mob from murdering the officers at an earlier period in the evening. The finding and sentence of the Court is that the accused is guilty of the charge against him, and directs that he be transported for life and forfeit all his property. This sentence has been confirmed by Major-General Collett. This trial is important, as the evidence shows that the Regent was actively engaged in the fighting against us, and actually ordered the attack on the Residency."

All the bazaars in Manipore are crowded, and there appears to be as much cultivation as in former years. In a few years the land under cultivation would probably be doubled or trebled with a settled Government, as there are large tracts at present lying idle which would be quickly taken up.

ATTACK BY KUKIS ON NAGAS.

Information reaches Manipore of an attack by Kukis on a Naga village, which arose over the possession of the tusks of a wild elephant the Kukis had wounded. The elephant escaped from its pursuers, and, subsequently dying, was found by the Nagas, who took possession of the tusks, which they refused to give up to the Kukis, on which the latter attacked the Naga village, killing fifty-two men, women, and children within half an hour. This took place in the interior of the hills north-west of the valley.

THE PRESS PROSECUTION IN INDIA.

THE following telegrams in reference to the State prosecution at Calcutta of the Bangabasi newspaper have been received from the correspondent of the Times:—

AUGUST 19.—The State prosecution of the Bangabasi newspaper began to-day before the Chief Justice. The Court was densely crowded. The main charges of the indictment are of seditious libel under the Penal Code, Section 124A, and there are subsidiary charges of defaming the Government under Sections 499 and 500. Mr. Pugh, Standing Counsel to the Government, with Mr. Woodroffe, Mr. Evans, and Mr. Dunne, was for the Crown; while Mr. Jackson, Mr. Graham, and Mr. Chowdry, were for the defence. Mr. Jackson applied for the postponement of the trial for ten days on the ground that he had not had time to prepare the defence. Mr. Pugh objected strongly, and the Judge said that, as the vacation was at hand, the case must either be taken now or postponed till November. He did not think that counsel for the defence had shown that they would be prejudiced, so he refused the application. Mr. Jackson then moved to quash the counts of defamation, arguing that the offence under the Penal Code must be against a person and not against a body like the Government. Counsel for the Crown supported the counts, but the Judge adopted Mr. Jackson's view, and quashed the counts. The accused were then called upon to plead on the seditious libel counts only. All of them pleaded "Not Guilty." After several challenges by both sides, the jury, consisting of eight Europeans and one native, was sworn in. Mr. Pugh, in opening the prosecution, referred to the importance of the case, and said that the people of India had enjoyed a free press since 1835, with the exception of a slight restriction which was imposed in 1878 and removed in 1881. There was no desire on the part of the Government to interfere in any way with the liberty of the press, but the Bangabasi had systematically, in a series of articles, charged the Government with interfering with and attempting to destroy the religion of the people. Such things could not be tolerated in a country like India by a Government which was responsible for the peace and safety of the country. Mr. Pugh then proceeded to read a comment on the articles which were the subject of the indictment, and also on subsequent articles in the issue of August 1, which, he said, showed the seditious intentions of the writers more clearly. The speech was not finished when the Court rose.

AUG. 20.—Mr. Pugh continued his opening speech. He read and commented upon the articles, and pointed out that they systematically represented the Government as persecutors of the Hindoo religion, and as determined to destroy it. They likened the Government to Aurungzebe, the great persecutor of Hindooism, and Kalipahar, the renegade Brahmin and the destroyer of temples. They described the Government as demon-like in characteristics, and as callous and indifferent to the sufferings of its subjects, and they said the effect of the English Raj was to increase disease and famine, and the end must be the total extinction of the people from want of food within about fifty years. Articles to this effect had been continuously published for over four months, and counsel argued that the government of a country like India would become impossible if seditious publications of this character were allowed to be scattered broadcast. To punish such writings would in no way interfere with the full and complete liberty of the press, but would only curb licence. The learned counsel then proceeded to argue the law point whether the articles came within the meaning of Section 124A, and said that this was the first prosecution under that section, and he cited "The Queen v. Pigott" and some Irish and other cases. After the prosecuting counsel's speech had been concluded, the calling of witnesses began. Counsel for the Crown first called two witnesses to prove the connection of the accused with the Bangabasi, and then called the translator to the High Court to prove that the translations of certain articles published in the Bangabasi were subsequent to those forming the subject of the indictment, and these articles were put in as evidence of the seditious intention of the article published on July 11. These articles contained, inter alia, the following:—

"It begins to be not improbable that, being offended by abuse, we may by degrees really become rebels. That will be no small danger for the English Raj. The day on which these twenty crores of subjects, no matter whether unarmed or without food, weak or dispirited, shall become rebels only in their minds, there will not be much delay on that day in striking up the death-dirge of the English Raj."

The article published on Aug. 1 said:—

"The Sepoy mutiny took place in 1857 because Dharma (that is, religion) was concerned. In 1891, too, in this very India, there is being caused bloodshed, and the people of India are submitting to loss of life and imprisonment because Dharma is concerned."

Another article of the same date says:—

"English Courts are hells pure and simple. The man who has rights is ruined, while he who has no rights is dancing for joy. There goes on a sort of sale and purchase of victory and defeat."

AUG. 21.—Counsel for the defence cross-examined the Government translator regarding the meaning of the original Bengalee articles, and also regarding the feeling about the Age of Consent Act. They put in three other articles. One of these, dated Jan. 31, before the Age of Consent Act was passed, was headed "The Triumph of Loyalty," and urged the people to hold a public meeting to protest loyally against the measure. The second article, dated April 18, which was after the Act had been passed, said that a public meeting should not be held then, as the Government had its hands full by reason of the Manipore troubles. The third, which was published on or about the same date, advised the people to continue the agitation, in order to procure the repeal of the Act. Counsel for the Crown then proved that the lease of the Bangabasi office stood in the name of the first of the accused, also that the manager did business with the post office concerning the dispatch of the papers, and that about 13,000 copies were sent weekly through the post. They then put in the formal Government sanction for the prosecution and the printer's statutory declaration. This closed the evidence for the Crown.

The Hon. G. H. P. Evans, in summing up the case for the Crown, showed in the first place how the evidence connected all the accused with the Bangabasi, and argued that, assuming the articles to be seditious, all the accused were responsible, though the degrees of criminality might differ. He then said that, having regard to the line which the defence evidently meant to take, it was necessary to go into the circumstances in which the matter arose. He proceeded shortly to trace the progress of, and to explain, the Age of Consent Act. He pointed out that some Hindoos asserted that the Act put them in the position of having to choose between breaking the law and committing sin. The article dated January 31, while the Act was pending, was temperate, but when the Act passed the Bangabasi broke out and began to vilify the Government in a series of articles, representing it as having a settled design to subvert the Hindoo religion. The paper also vilified the race to which the Government belonged as regards its moral qualities, and informed the people that the Government had thrown away its pledge and had stated that it would interfere with the Hindoo religion according to its whim and fancy. Not content with this, they tried to persuade the people that fever and famine were due to the British Government, and, while professing in some articles that rebellion was impossible, they showed in other articles that they were well aware that the necessary result of inflaming religious feelings would be tumults, riots, and probably rebellion; that they apparently started the agitation for the purpose of forcing the Government to repeal the Act, but tried to gain this end by creating disaffection of a most serious character; and that this was a grave and serious crime, whatever the motive might be which led them into this course of conduct. Counsel then quoted the remarks of the Privy Council on the petition against the regulation abolishing Suttee—namely, that the stability of the British Government mainly depended on the observance of the just and established principles of religious toleration. He then analysed the articles to show the continuity of the attempt, and the defendants' knowledge of the inevitable consequences, and he pointed out that some of the later articles were even worse in tone, and preached implacable hostility to the British rule.

On the conclusion of the speech the Court rose.

AUG. 23.—Mr. Jackson, the leading counsel for the defence, said that he called no witnesses, but he submitted that there was no case to go to the jury, as counsel for the Crown had not proved the articles to be written by any of the accused. He asked the Judge to reserve the point, if he decided against him.

The Chief Justice ruled that there was a case to go to the jury, and declined to reserve the point.

Mr. Jackson then proceeded to address the jury. He complained that the native prisoners had been placed at a great disadvantage, as they were not entitled to claim that the majority of the jury should be natives. This, he said, was weak, wicked, and contemptible of the prosecution. The Government must feel weak indeed when it found it necessary to defend itself against such senseless writings as those which the Bangabasi had published. He would show that no conviction was possible. Counsel then traced the history of Section 124 A of the Penal Code, and showed that it was included in the original draft of the Penal Code, but was omitted when the Code was passed, and was afterwards added by the Act of Sir Fitzjames Stephen, who was then legal member of the Council, in 1870, and he quoted Sir Fitzjames Stephen's speech on that occasion.

Mr. Jackson then read extracts from the Calcutta Englishman of 1870 denouncing the income-tax, and urged that they were more seditious than anything in the Bangabasi, yet the Government had never ventured to prosecute the Englishman or any Anglo-Indian newspaper. Counsel next read long passages from the debates in the Legislative Council on the passing of the Vernacular Press Act in 1878, and on its repeal in 1881, and called special attention to Lord Ripon's remarks on the latter occasion. He then turned to the Age of Consent Act, and said that a large proportion of the people in Bengal considered that it interfered with religious customs, and they were thus excited to an unusual degree. The Government translator who was called by the Crown, had admitted in cross-examination that he believed it was an interference with religion. Counsel then asked the jury to turn to the articles which were the subject of the prosecution, and said that the Crown had not called a single witness to prove that they caused hatred to the Government or a solitary instance of disaffection. The jury, he said, were bound to take a liberal and generous view of the case. He then proceeded to read and discuss the articles at great length. He maintained that some portions were fair comments on current events, and that others on which the Crown mainly relied were either poetic imagery, Oriental exaggeration, or in many cases unmitigated twaddle, nay idiotic raving. He was surprised that such twaddle should be relied on to secure conviction.

Mr. Jackson was still engaged in analysing the articles when the Court rose. The case continues to excite great interest, and the court was densely crowded with natives.

The following is section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, upon which the prosecution relies in the case of the Bangabasi newspaper. This section, forming part of Chapter VI., which deals with "offences against the State," was inserted in the Code by Act XXVII. of 1870, section 5:—

Whoever by words, either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs, or by visible representation or otherwise, excites or attempts to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, shall be punished with transportation for life or for any term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment for a term which may be extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Explanation.—Such a disapprobation of the measures of the Government as is compatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of the Government, and to support the lawful authority of the Government against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist that authority, is not disaffection. Therefore, the making of comments on the measures of the Government, with the intention of exciting only this species of disapprobation, is not an offence within this clause.

THE TRADE OF BRITISH INDIA WITH FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

As previously announced by telegraph, Mr. O'Connor's first chapter of the Annual Review of the Trade of India, which it had been considered expedient not to delay publishing until the other chapters, which are in preparation, are ready, has been issued. We make the following extracts. After referring to the Course of Exchange and the Forms taken by Speculation in Silver, Mr. O'Connor turns to the

IMPORTS OF SILVER AND OF GOLD.

4. While the increase in price was in progress large profits were made by those who threw their silver on the Indian market. The net imports into India were on a scale unprecedented except in 1865-66, the year of the great cotton famine, and 1877-78, a year of famine which necessitated large borrowings and the reduction of Council drawings. The net imports amounted in 1865-66 to 18,668,673 rx.; in 1877-78 to 14,676,335 rx.; last year to 14,175,136 rx. This large quantity, following on a considerable import in the preceding year, was greatly in excess of commercial requirements, and the excess was augmented by the substitution by Government towards the end of the year 1890-91 of ten millions of rupees in Government securities for that sum in coin and bullion held as part of the paper currency reserve. The silver thus thrown on the market from countries outside India and from the currency vaults has not yet been absorbed in general circulation, and the cheapness of money throughout the year has been quite phenomenal. This cheapness and the general dislocation of legitimate trade resulting from the violent changes in the price of silver were partly the cause of the insane speculation in gold shares which prevailed in Calcutta throughout the year.

5. The rapid rise in exchange following on the rise in the price of silver between March and September, besides stimulating the imports of silver, also had the effect of stimulating the imports of gold and of merchandise. Gold was imported (net) to the value of about 5,636,000 rx., being in excess of the imports of 1889-90 (which were also large) by more than 1,000,000 rx. Altogether, the (net) value of gold and silver imported was 19,811,308 rx.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF MERCHANDISE.

6. The temporary stimulus to the importation of merchandise caused by quickly rising exchange was of brief duration, and was not unattended with serious difficulties. When the native dealers who had contracted to buy goods from importers at prices based upon exchange before it began to rise saw goods brought into the country and sold at prices based upon rates of exchange which had increased by 15 to 20 per cent. (making a proportionate reduction in price), there was a prompt repudiation of their contracts, accompanied by the declaration that their fulfilment meant insolvency. The position was becoming critical for importers, when fortunately for them the rate of exchange began to fall as rapidly as it had risen, and matters were satisfactorily adjusted, though it is believed that the conditions which followed from the rise in the price of silver were the cause of considerable losses to importers.

7. The total value of the merchandise imported in the year was 69,035,109 rx., being about 3·7 per cent. more than the imports of the preceding year (66,560,121 rx.), and a little under what may be called a normal increase.

8. The exports of Indian merchandise fell to 95,874,936 rx., having been 99,101,054 rx. in the preceding year, the rate of decrease being about 3·2 per cent. This restriction of 3,226,118 rx. in the value of exported merchandise was due in part to the same cause—the fluctuations in exchange—which helped to increase the value of imported merchandise by 2,474,988 rx., but it was more largely due to a fall of price in opium and to actually restricted supplies, arising out of deficient harvests of cotton and rapeseed. The restriction would have been greater but for the accident that there was an unusually large demand for Indian rice in the European and Asiatic markets.

TOTAL TRADE.

9. The trade of the last two years compares thus:—

	1889-90. Rx.	1890-91 Rx.
Imports.
Merchandise.....	66,560,121	69,035,109
Gold.....	5,071,027	6,500,832
Silver.....	12,388,274	15,418,654
Total imports.....	84,019,422	90,954,595
Exports.
Foreign merchandise re-exported.....	4,295,808	4,233,529
Indian merchandise.....	99,101,055	95,874,936
Gold.....	455,723	864,660
Silver.....	1,386,196	1,267,246
Total exports.....	105,238,782	102,180,371

The total trade—imports and exports together—was—

1890-91.....	„ 193,134,966

The increase was only about 2 per cent., while the average rate of increase in the four preceding years was 5½ per cent.

Including Government transactions the aggregate trade of the two years was—

1890-91.....	„ 196,233,334

The considerable transfer of Government securities to London during the year, to which reference has been made in the third paragraph, helped materially to settle the balance of international indebtedness. On the other hand, the amount paid for Council Bills was smaller. The drawings of the Secretary of State in the two last years were—

1889-90.....	£15,474,496 at 16·565d. = Rx. 22,419,000
1890-91.....	£15,009,033 at 18·089d. = „ 21,187,000

ARTICLES IMPORTED.

11. Amongst imports the largest increases in the year occurred in cotton goods (1,136,421 rx.) and in sugar (1,199,837 rx.). There were also minor increases in certain other articles, such as apparel, coal, drugs, glassware, metals, paper, railway materials, umbrellas, and woollen goods.

12. The increased importation of sugar is a noticeable feature in the trade of the year. Of refined sugar, which is mainly what India imports, the quantity imported was about 68 per cent. more than in 1889-90, the excess being chiefly beet sugar imported from Germany. This is an immediate and direct result of the system of sugar bounties aided, by the development of direct steam communication between India and Germany. It is worth while drawing attention here to the fact that whereas in former years India exported more sugar than she imported, that feature has in the last few years been rapidly reversed, as the following figures prove.

	Imports of Sugar. Cwt.	Exports of Sugar. Cwt.
1874-75 to 1879-80.....	550,284	576,817
1880-81 to 1885-86.....	988,429	1,106,557
1886-87 to 1890-91.....	1,840,417	1,058,311

Last year's imports amounted to 2,734,491 cwt., while the exports amounted to only 824,741 cwt., so that we imported more than 3 cwt. for every cwt. we exported.

The question suggests itself, Is this feature of trade the result of artificial encouragement of production in Europe? or is it the result of natural causes, Indian sugar being really dearer and therefore unable to compete, or has the limit of our production been reached? If it is the result of State encouragement in Europe, then after a time the imports will diminish, if they will not cease entirely, for the bounty system will probably terminate in a few years; but if it arises out of natural causes, we must expect imports to increase progressively with increase of population while the exports diminish.

After dealing with the export of food stuffs—rice, pulses, tea, &c.—Mr. O'Connor deals with COTTON YARNS AND PIECE-GOODS.

23. The exports of cotton twist increased in the year by over 19 per cent., the value reaching about 6½ millions rx., the bulk of the exports being to China. As yet the inception of the cotton-spinning industry in that country seems to have had no effect on our exports, though we must be prepared eventually for effective competition. The exports of cotton piece-goods also increased by 13½ per cent., being a complete recovery from the depression of the previous year. The principal markets for these are on the African and Arabian coasts, in Ceylon and the Straits, and there can be little doubt that with the gradual introduction of civilisation into Africa, Bombay should possess there an ever-increasing market for cotton cloths.

TRADE OF THE PROVINCES.

24. The import trade of each of the Indian provinces increased more or less largely in the year, the increase in Bombay being the largest. On the other hand, every province, with the exception of Burma, shared in the general decline of the export trade. In that province there was a very large increase, due to the unusual activity of the rice trade to which reference has before been made.

25. The total import and export trade (in merchandise) of each of the provinces during the year was as follows:—

	Rx.
Bombay.....	65,375,640
Sind.....	8,402,102
Bengal.....	63,339,594
Madras.....	16,933,637
Burma.....	15,092,600

Thus Western India, or practically the ports of Bombay and Kurrachee, had about 43½ per cent. of the whole foreign trade last year, while Bengal, Burma, and Madras had 56½ per cent. The trade of Calcutta was 36½ per cent., and of Bombay 38½ per cent. of the whole, these two ports monopolising three-fourths of the foreign trade of the country.

TRADE WITH COUNTRIES.

26. Of the whole import and export trade in merchandise, 68 per cent. was with Europe, the bulk of this being with the United Kingdom, with which just half our whole trade was conducted. The trade with Europe was really more than 68 per cent. of the whole, probably not less than 70 or 71 per cent., for the trade with Egypt, though it must be recorded under Africa, is mainly European. Taking the record as it stands, the trade in merchandise last year was as follows:—

	Rx.
With the United Kingdom.....	84,855,038
With other European Countries.....	30,189,572
Total with Europe.....	115,044,610
With Africa.....	9,632,311
With the American Continent.....	6,429,218
With Asia.....	36,560,829
With Australia.....	1,476,605

In the last five years there has been a material diversion of our trade from England to countries on the European Continent, for while our trade with England has increased by less than 4½ per cent. in that period, our trade with other European countries has increased by about 26 per cent.

GERMANY.

27. Germany and Belgium are conspicuous in the record for the rapid development of our commercial relations with them. With Germany our trade has increased from 944,935 rx. to 6,089,572 rx., being an increase of 544 per cent. in the five years. Some of this increase is doubtless trade which was until within the last two or three years conducted indirectly by way of England, but much of it is also trade which is quite new, owing its creation to the establishment of direct steam communication between Northern Germany and India. About half the whole value of the imports from Germany last year was represented by beet sugar, and even though the trade was aided by the remarkable conditions of exchange which prevailed for a part of the year, it can hardly be considered satisfactory that such imports could have been successfully made in competition with local production and manufacture; the imports were large, representing 35,459 tons, valued on landing at 840,270 rx.

BELGIUM AND OTHER EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.

28. Our trade with Belgium reached last year 5,628,256 rx., having increased by 44 per cent. in five years. Until the last three years our trade with Italy largely exceeded the trade with Belgium, but the positions have now been completely reversed. France still has larger commercial relations with India than any other European country except the United Kingdom; but as the trade increases very slowly, it seems likely that our relations with Germany may soon become more important than those with France, and that the centres in Europe of trade with India are being transferred from the Mediterranean to the Northern seas.

OTHER REGIONS.

29. The development of our trade with other regions of the world is on the whole very satisfactory, in some cases (especially Australia) particularly so. The opium trade bulks so largely in our relations with Asiatic countries that the decline in its value has appreciably affected the rate of progress, but the development of the trade in cotton yarn and cloths with China, Japan, and other countries, and in petroleum with Russia, has compensated for the decline in opium.

CUSTOMS REVENUE.

30. Unsatisfactory as the year was from the point of view of trade, owing to the violent and rapid fluctuations of exchange, it was a good year from the point of view of the customs revenue. The net import revenue was 774,269 rx., being nearly 7 per cent. more than that of the previous year, the increase being almost entirely the result of the increase made in the spirit duties in March 1890. The net export revenue, which is derived entirely from rice, was 900,646 rx., being 27.6 per cent. more than the revenue of the previous year, this increase being due to the abnormal increase in the exports of rice already explained.

The only dutiable articles in the list of imports are liquors, salt, opium, petroleum, and arms and ammunition. The value of these articles last year was only about 6½ per cent. of the total imports, 93½ per cent. being entirely free; in England last year the proportions were almost the same, being 7 and 93 per cent. respectively. We are behind England, however, in our retention of an export duty. Rice, on which this is levied, represented in value last year 13.4 per cent. of the whole value of exports of Indian goods.

SHIPPING.

31. The shipping which entered and left Indian ports during the year was substantially larger than in 1889-90, chiefly owing to the demand for rice from Burma. The numbers and tonnage compare thus:—

	No.	Tons.
1890-91	11,023	7,684,954

giving an increase of 5 per cent. in tonnage, the increase in Burma being about 13 per cent. The displacement of sailers by steamers continues, steam tonnage last year representing over 78 per cent. of the whole, against 73 per cent. in the preceding year. The tonnage under the British flag represented about 82.4 per cent. of the whole, against 81.3 per cent. in the previous year. There has been a large increase in vessels under the German flag:—

	No.	Tons.
1889-90	138	180,996

but the flags of other nations are becoming rarer in our ports.

THE SCARCITY IN INDIA AND THE RAILWAY QUESTION.

In a letter on this subject Sir E. W. Watkin, M.P., says:—

I addressed a question to the Under-Secretary for India in the House some weeks back, and I was informed that the noble lord the Chief Secretary was perfectly aware of the importance of continuity of gauge and was in communication with the Government of India on the subject. The facts are very simple, and are these:—In Kattiwar there are 334 miles (open) of metre-gauge railway, which have cost 1½ million sterling. In Rajpootana and Central India there are 2,008 miles of metre-gauge railway, costing 11,000,000 sterling. In Oude there are 278 miles of metre-gauge railway, costing 800,000. In Bengal there are 1,145 miles of metre-gauge railway, costing 6½ millions sterling. These four represent so many distinct unconnected groups. They have been built at various times during the last fifteen or eighteen years. Their cost represents a total outlay of 20 millions sterling. Why should they continue disconnected? The remedy is the cheap mixture of gauges, the narrow inside the broad. The Kattiwar group belong to native States and are worked under the control of the States interested. To connect this group with the Rajpootana group (seven-eighths of which are worked by the Bombay and Baroda Company) only requires the laying of a third rail over the broad gauge between Tiramjan and Wudwan, a distance of about thirty-nine miles. Similarly the Rajpootana group can be connected with the Oude group by laying a third rail over the broad gauge, Oude and Rohilkund State Railway, between Lucknow and Cawnpore, a distance of forty-five miles. The laying of a third rail for about thirty-nine miles further over the Oude and Rohilkund Railway would enable through connection between all three of the groups of metre-gauge railway in Kattiwar, Rajpootana, and Central India and Oude with the Bengal group (the greater part of which is worked by the Bengal and North-Western Railway), via Byram Ghat, on the Gogra river. At present all through-traffic between the various districts served by these distinct groups of metre-gauge railways has to be repeatedly transhipped where the breaks of gauge occur. These breaks can be avoided and the whole can be linked up into a continuously efficient system by the addition (at a cost of about 200,000) of about 120 miles of metre-gauge rail inside the existing tracks and on the sleepers of the broad-gauge systems. Such a measure would increase enormously the effective value, both to Government and to all others interested, of the 3,765 miles of now disconnected metre-gauge railway already built and in operation. The extent of country served by the metre-gauge railway referred to represents 400,000 square miles in Northern India, in which no broad-gauge railway exists. With these facts laid before you, I believe I am correct in stating that four important breaks exist, that the narrow-gauge system alluded to can be coupled up at a cost of 200,000, and that this small expenditure is, to my somewhat practical experience, very likely to be repaid in money in the first year of operation, and is certain in times of famine, war, and other pressure to add vastly to the transit capacity of the railways of India. The work could be completed in three months. Then why, with scarcity looming on the horizon, is not the work done out of hand? General Trevor and Mr. T. W. Wood, of the Bombay and Baroda Railways, have been hammering at the door of the India Office for half a year, and, so far, in vain.

ADMINISTRATION REPORT ON INDIAN RAILWAYS.

THE annual Administration Report on Railways has been issued. The length of railways opened for traffic during the year 1889-90 was 869½ miles, and the total length open at the end of that period was 16,095½ miles. During the year the length added was 874½ miles, so that on March 31, 1891, the total length of open line—after allowing for minor corrections of mileage—amounted to 16,996 miles. The chief sections opened were 330½ miles of the Bengal-Nagpore, 163½ miles of the South Indian, and 162 miles of the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway. Subsequent to the close of the year—that is, from March 31 to May 15—159 more miles have been opened, including 58 miles of the Rohilkund-Kumaon Railway to Pilibhit, and 64½ of the Jodepore-Bikanir line. Progress on the standard-gauge system was during the year represented by 695 miles of commercial lines in British India, while on the metre-gauge 152½ miles in British India, 33 in Burma, and 162 in Native States were opened.

The total sanctioned mileage on March 31 was thus brought up to 18,879 miles, showing an increase over the previous year of 1,130 miles. The gross earnings during the calendar year were 20,67,01,158 rs. against 20,49,20,068 rs. during 1889. Of this, 32.30 per cent. were earned by lines worked by guaranteed companies, 12.27 per cent. by the East Indian Railway, including the Patna-Gya State line, 16.81 per cent. by all other States line worked by companies, 25.76 per cent. by State lines worked by the State, and the balance (3.86 per cent.) may be divided between lines in Native States, and lines opened by assisted companies. The number of passengers carried was 114,082,346, coaching earnings being 7,05,98,929 rs. and passenger mileage 4,779,075,224, while during 1889, 110,402,383 passengers were carried, coaching earnings being 6,89,64,758 rs. and passenger mileage 4,673,304,103 miles.

The aggregate tonnage of goods, material, and live-stock carried was 22,612,718 tons, which earned 12,99,51,712 rs.; ton mileage being 3,509,668,215. In 1889 the totals were 22,155,164 tons with an earning of 13,02,35,243 rs., and a ton mileage of 3,639,462,392. The quantity of general merchandise carried was 14,044,138 tons, or 3.30 per cent. more than in 1889, and the freight received aggregated 11,18,47,041 rs., being less by 10.33 per cent. Including materials and stores carried for home lines, military stores, and coal and live-stock, for the public, the gross weight lifted showed an increase of 457,554 tons, or 2.07 per cent.; but the earnings were less by 28,353 rs., or 0.22 per cent. The decrease in earnings was mainly due to a falling-off in the traffic in oil seeds and to the smaller quantity of construction materials carried, owing to the completion of works on new lines.

The total working expenses amounted to 49.87 of the gross earnings, as compared with 50.64 in 1889. The net earnings realised were 10,36,11,972 rs., against 10,11,46,589 rs. in 1889, giving a return on the capital expenditure on open lines, including steamboat services and suspense account, of 4.85 per cent., against 4.93 per cent. in the previous year. Colonel Sergeant concludes his general statement as follows:—"Interest charges for the East Indian, Eastern Bengal, and North-Western Railways included annuities paid in England, in which is included a contribution of about 24 lacs of rupees for a sinking fund that is meant to reproduce the capital at the expiry of the period for which the annuity is to run, so that on the whole the net loss to the State during the year, from the working of the entire Indian railway system, may be taken at something over 136 lacs of rupees. Excluding interest on capital expended on unopened lines, the net loss may be stated approximately at 97 lacs of rupees. The loss on guaranteed railways is mainly attributable to the comparatively high rate at which the guaranteed interest has to be paid. Under its contracts with guaranteed railway companies the State has to pay interest at the guaranteed rates until the contracts terminate, and it is consequently unable to obtain any advantage from the increasingly easy condition of money at 3½ or even 3 per cent. to pay off the loans raised at higher rates of interest. It has still to continue to pay interest at or near the high average rate of 4½ per cent. on capital raised by guaranteed companies, and now, owing to the fall in exchange, the amount of rupees which have to be remitted to England to pay sterling interest is equivalent to a payment of interest of nearly 7 per cent. on the total capital raised, converted at par."

The Faculty of Medicine of the Bombay University, at an adjourned meeting held on July 31, resumed the consideration of the proposition of Dr. R. N. Khory to proceed in detail with the draft scheme of medical study which had been printed and circulated, as well as of the amendment, moved by Dr. R. Manser, that the alternative draft scheme of regulations for the degree of Bachelor of Medicine and Surgery be now considered. There was a very large attendance at the meeting. After a prolonged discussion the amendment of Dr. Manser, we understand, was carried by the casting vote of the Dean of the Faculty, Dr. Wellington Gray. The meeting then adjourned till the 11th inst., when the details of Dr. Manser's scheme will be considered.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Good-Service Pension.—It is notified that on the recommendation of the Government of India, her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer a good service pension on Lieut.-Col. and Col. Charles John Anderson, Staff Corps, with effect from Dec. 31, 1890, in room of Lieut.-Gen. J. G. Petrie, C.B., Retired List, Royal (late Bombay) Art., deceased:—

Dates of Commissions.—Cornet, May 20, 1853; lieutenant, Dec. 19, 1855; captain, May 20, 1865; major, May 20, 1873; lieutenant-colonel, May 20, 1879; colonel in the army, May 20, 1883.

Regimental duty, 1st Bombay Light Cav., June 1853 to September 1858; Aide-de-Camp to Brig.-Gen. Sir R. C. Napier, K.C.B., commanding the Gwalior Division, September 1858 to June 1859; Regimental duty, 1st Bombay Light Cav., June 1859 to November 1865; Aide-de-Camp to the Commander-in-Chief, Bombay Army, November 1865 to December 1867; Brigade-Major, Mhow, December 1867 to June 1870; Brigade-Major, Sind District, June 1870 to April 1873; Second in Command, 1st Bombay Light Cav. (Lancers), May 1875 to February 1882; Commandant, ditto, February 1882 to September 1883; Commandant, 2nd Bombay Lancers, September 1883 to February 1889.

War Services.—India, 1857-58.—Mutiny at Nasirabad; first attack on Awah; siege of Kotah and subsequent pursuit; action at Kotah-ki-Serai; capture of Gwalior, and action of Ranod.—(Mentioned in despatches; medal and clasp.)

Egyptian Honours for English Officers.—The Queen has granted unto the under-mentioned officers in her Majesty's Army her royal license and authority that they may accept and wear the insignia of certain classes of the Orders of the Osmanieh and the Medjidieh (as signified against their respective names), which his Highness the Khedive of Egypt, authorised by his Imperial Majesty the Sultan, has been pleased to confer upon them in recognition of their services while employed beyond her Majesty's dominions with the Egyptian Army:—

Osmanieh, Second Class.—Brevet Col. Charles Holled Smith, C.B., King's Royal Rifle Corps.

Osmanieh, Third Class.—Capt. George William Hacket Pain, Royal West Surrey Regt.; Capt. Walter Hervey Besant, Norfolk Regt.; Capt. Hector Archibald MacDonald, D.S.O., Gordon Highlanders.

Medjidieh, Third Class.—Brevet Major Francis Reginald Wingate, D.S.O., Royal Art.

Osmanieh, Fourth Class.—Surg. James Perceval Myles, Medical Staff; Surg. William Perceval Gore Graham, Medical Staff; Capt. Cyril Godfrey Martyr, Duke of Cornwall's Light Inf.; Veterinary-Surg. George Richard Griffith, Veterinary Department; Lieut. Herbert William Jackson, Gordon Highlanders.

Medjidieh, Fourth Class.—Capt. Percy Wilfrid Machell, Essex Regt.; Capt. Henry Marlow Sidney, Duke of Cornwall's Light Inf.; Lieut. Arthur Fox Pullen, Royal Art.; Lieut. Reginald Salmond Curtis, Royal Engineers.

Colonel Maxwell.—Colonel Maxwell, who has been appointed to the command of his old regiment, the Derby, leaves in a few days, says a Darjeeling correspondent on July 28. He has been associated with Darjeeling for some years as adjutant of the Volunteers, then in command of the depot at Jellapahar, and again in temporary command of his regiment during the late operations against the Thibetans at Lingtoo, Gnatong, &c. He was then placed on half-pay, and has recently been acting as vice-chairman of the Darjeeling Municipality during the absence, on leave, of the permanent incumbent. His numerous friends are giving him a farewell dinner at the club.

The Indian Staff Corps.—In the July issue of the Quarterly Indian Army List the effect of the amalgamation of the three Presidency Staff Corps is shown. On pages 87 to 124 the new title "Indian Staff Corps" appears with the subsidiary headings of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Staff Corps preceded by the significant little word "late." The officers included in this list are the captains, who originally entered the various Staff Corps before Jan 1, 1881. On page 825 the heading is simply "Indian Staff Corps." This list is framed "agreeably to the Royal Warrant of Jan. 28, 1891," and it contains the names of 164 captains, 839 lieutenants, and 219 probationers. These are not classified according to the Presidencies in which they are serving, but in order of seniority. They can be posted to any part of India under the terms of the Royal Warrant.

The Hong Kong Battalion will be raised in Upper India and recruited entirely from the Mahomedan population, the Pioneer says. Its complement of officers will be one commandant of the rank of a major, two wing commanders (captains), five wing officers (lieutenants), a medical officer, eight subadars and a smaller number of jemadars. The non-commissioned officers and men will number 988, giving a total of 1,013 of all ranks. The proposed rates of pay and staff allowances are the same as in the Indian Staff Corps, but colonial allowance up to a certain limit will be granted. The exact amount has to be settled by the War Office, and until this has been done it cannot be said whether the prospect of serving in China will attract smart and good officers. Major E. G. Barrow, who left the Military Department Secretariat last year, is likely to be first commandant, and he may be expected to reach India next cold weather to raise the regiment. The War Office may keep what little patronage there is in the matter of appointments to the battalion in their own hands, but in any case they will have to obtain the officers from the Indian Staff Corps through the Government of India. The rank and file will be treated on the same liberal scale as the Sikh Police in the Straits and China, furlough on full pay being granted every five years.

The Military Transport Problem in India still seems as far from solution as ever, says the Pioneer. It is not that the authorities have neglected it, but that the whole question bristles with difficulties, and that the expense involved in keeping up an efficient transport train in time of peace is almost prohibitory. Each expedition undertaken on the frontier, whether on the north-east or northwest, shows how great is the strain put upon existing transport organisation and the need for further measures to ensure the mobility of our troops in case of a really great war. It is, of course, easier to indicate defects in the transport arrangements than to suggest remedies. Where the staging system is in perfect working order, the evils complained of are reduced to a minimum; but in the opening phases of a campaign there must be long and hurried marches, often through a country where water is scarce and fodder only obtainable with difficulty, and it is then that the transport is, in the language of the camp, "knocked to pieces." But from the standpoint of the Commissary-General-in-Chief, the question as a whole presents itself as one which is impossible of solution unless sanction is given for more liberal expenditure in peace time. Scheme after scheme has been rejected on the score of expense, and it must be a heart-breaking task which the regular officers of the department have to undertake when a campaign is ordered. More supervision, fewer returns, fewer objection statements to petty expenditure, a larger establishment in the lower ranks, with more attention paid to the food and accommodation of the muleteers—these are some of the changes needed. Some of them will cost money, but the extra expenditure will be repaid in the long run by the greater efficiency secured in the field. It is upon the mobility of an army that the issue of a campaign often depends, and, with the comparatively small garrison in India, we cannot afford to let the movements of our troops be hampered by the want of a strong, well-organised transport train.

ANNUAL MUSKETRY COURSE, 1890-91.

MARKSMANSHIP AND FIRE DISCIPLINE.

In reviewing the results of the annual course of musketry for 1890-91 the Commander-in-Chief says that the high standard of individual marksmanship to which the British Army has attained during past years has been fully maintained. The progress in fire discipline and control cannot be conclusively gauged by any system of figures, but it is satisfactory to observe the appreciation of their importance steadily gaining ground. Nevertheless, it cannot be affirmed that the paramount necessity of attaining to an exceptional efficiency in these branches of musketry training has been fully grasped by all ranks concerned, and, speaking generally, it is certain that company and section commanders have not yet devoted all the attention to the control and direction of fire which the subject unquestionably merits. In the revised course for British troops, now in progress, the benefit of a thorough system of fire discipline will be more manifest than heretofore, and there is every reason to hope that the close of the present season will witness the highest standard of general musketry efficiency yet attained in India.

THE NATIVE ARMY COURSE.

The results of the second year of the new Native Army Course speak for themselves. Individual marksmanship has improved to a remarkable degree, while fire discipline and control have reached a standard which, although it may still leave a good deal to be desired, is yet far in advance of any hitherto attained. These satisfactory results are attributable to the keen interest which pervades the Native Army in all that appertains to musketry; and, considering the general enthusiastic and thorough manner in which every detail of training is now being executed, sanguine hopes of further advancement may fairly be entertained.

PENALTIES FOR FAULTY PULL-OFF.

The pull-off of rifles of the 1st Batt. Connaught Rangers and the 2nd Batt. Royal Dublin Fusiliers having been tampered with to such an extent as to render them unserviceable and dangerous, these two regiments have, under the orders of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, been debarred from participating in any musketry rewards, and excluded from the figure of merit list. A similar penalty has, under the orders of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, been inflicted upon the 8th and 24th Regts. of Madras Inf., owing to the discovery of serious irregularities in the execution of the annual course. With the above exceptions the annual course for 1890-91 has been satisfactorily carried out.

THE ORDER OF MERIT.

The order of top regiments is as follows:—

Regiments.	Figure of Merit.
21st Hussars	155

The Deolali Court of Inquiry, of which Col. Symons, Yorkshire Light Inf., was president, has closed its proceedings, and the officers composing it have rejoined their regiments.

It is calculated that by the beginning of the cold weather the Transport Department returns will show 17,000 mules on the rolls for military purposes. In 1878 only 1,000 mules were entertained, except those with the Punjab Frontier Force.

The largest Artillery Camp of Exercise this year will be at Gurgaon, where will be concentrated A, C, Q, and T Batteries of Royal Horse Art. and 71st Field Batty. The Manipuri Camp of Exercise will assemble on Nov. 25. It will last upwards of three weeks.

A tablet in brass has been subscribed for by the 1st batt. Rifle Brigade to perpetuate the memory of Major Eccles and other officers and men of the corps who died at Bareilly from dysentery or typhoid between January 1889 and February 1891. The memorial will be placed in the Garrison Chapel at Bareilly.

Sanction has been accorded to the appointment of two instructorships in gunnery at the ports of Bombay and Aden. These will be regimental Staff appointments, and are to be held by specially trained officers of the rank of captain or senior subaltern (seconded), who will be selected by the Commander-in-Chief. They will be tenable for five years, and the Staff salary will be 250 rs. per month, with horse allowance.

The Madras Circle of the Ordnance Dept. is to have a harness and saddlery factory, and the necessary machinery has been ordered from England. The factory will be in charge of a Covenanted superintendent from England, who will be under the orders of the Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines.

The military authorities, in consultation with the principal medical officer, her Majesty's Forces in Madras, have obtained the approval of the Government to the despatch to Wellington of as many British soldiers of the garrisons of Fort St. George and St. Thomas's Mount as can be spared, so as to escape the possibility of contracting disease from the existing insanitary condition of the Fort ditch and fever prevalent at the Mount. It has accordingly been arranged to send as soon as possible about 150 men from Madras and St. Thomas's Mount, who will remain at Wellington till the middle of October next.

Col. Leigh Hunt is granted an extension of service till September of next year.

Major W. A. Broome, Staff Corps, second in command, 27th Bombay Light Infantry, has been granted leave for eight months.

Capt. A. E. S. Searle, Staff Corps, wing officer, 12th Bombay Infantry, has been granted leave for one year.

Capt. H. R. W. Lumsden, at present attached to the 30th Punjab Infantry, has been appointed wing commander, sub. pro tem., in the 1st Bengal Infantry.

Capt. Bowles, East Surrey Regt., has been appointed adjutant of the Allahabad Volunteers, vice Capt. Becker; and Capt. Cuppage, 5th Bengal Infantry, adjutant of the Oude Volunteers, vice Capt. Carter.

Capt. Muspratt Williams eventually succeeds Major Scott as superintendent of the Ishapore Gunpowder Factory. Capt. Williams proceeds home for special instruction before taking up the appointment.

Two appointments will soon be vacant at Madras Army Headquarters—namely, that of deputy adjutant-general on Col. Hope going to the Military Secretariat, and that of assistant adjutant-general on Lieut.-Col. Wratislaw vacating the same, on completion of five years' tenure of appointment. The successors to these appointments are being considered, says the Madras Times, and several names have been put forward. An officer with a large experience of the Madras Army will be the right man for the first appointment, and one such officer will no doubt be selected from the various applicants.

A Jubbulpore correspondent writes on Aug. 3:—Col. J. McCleverty relinquishes the command of the "Sherwood Foresters" (Derbyshire Regt.) this evening. He held command since April 1888. A farewell entertainment is to be given him to-night in the officers' mess. To-morrow it will be two years since he obtained the army rank of colonel. The departing colonel and his wife leave this station to-morrow night for Bombay en route to England. Lieut.-Col. T. M. Maxwell, of the Derbyshire Regt., who was placed on the half-pay list and was performing the duties of commandant of the Jalapahar Depot (Darjeeling), arrived here on Saturday, and was well received. Being senior to Major A. C. Lloyd, he assumes command of the regiment to-morrow. Lieut. J. W. G. Roy, who entered the army on Nov. 12, 1884, took over charge of the adjutancy from Capt. Stopford (Derbyshire), who vacates. Capt. H. C. Wylly, of the above regiment, who proceeded on eight months' leave to England, will not return (on extension) till Jan. 5 next.

The undermentioned have passed the Higher Standard in Hindoostani:—Major H. W. N. Guinness, Royal Irish Regt.; Capt. G. H. Ovens, Border Regt.; Lieuts. R. H. Hare, R. St. G. Gorton, and W. F. T. Corrie, Royal Art.; W. Ewbank, Royal Engineers; G. O. Ross-Keppel, Royal Scots Fusiliers; A. W. Pennington, 9th Bengal Lancers; P. Holland-Pryor, 17th Bengal Cav.; F. W. Pirrie and F. J. D. Henslowe, 4th Bengal Inf.; H. A. Vallings, 24th Punjab Inf.; J. Gaisford, 25th Punjab Inf.; P. W. Anderson, 40th Bengal Inf.; E. J. Drummond, 2-2nd Goorkhas; C. S. Eastmead, 2-3rd Goorkhas; A. T. Rowlandson, 30th Bombay Inf.; C. B. Winter, Lincolnshire Regt.; J. Randall, 23rd Pioneers; A. Roberts, 24th Punjab Inf.; and Surg. C. L. Walsh, Medical Staff.

BENGAL.

OUR advices from Calcutta are to Aug. 4.

Income-tax Curiosities.—The Times of India of Aug. 7 says:—We heard on Tuesday by telegram that Messrs. Finlay, Muir, and Co., of Calcutta, having failed to pay a debit balance of one pie left over from income-tax due for last year, had had a chair and table seized under a distress warrant. The matter is explained to some extent in a letter addressed by the firm to the secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. They had, it seems, received a notice requesting them to remit "pie one only, being the balance of income-tax due from you on account of the financial year 1890-91 at your very early convenience." Having ignored or forgotten this curious request to pay in "pie one only" at "your early convenience," all the majesty of the law was put in motion, and they next heard of the matter in the following quaint epistle from Mr. S. J. Kilby, Collector of Income-tax, Calcutta:—"Take notice, that I have this day seized the property specified in the inventory below for the sum of 0-4-4 rs., as detailed on the margin, and that unless you pay me, or into the office to the collector of income-tax, Calcutta, the said sum of 0-4-4 rs. within ten days from the date of this notice, the property will be sold." The property mentioned in the inventory is one wooden table and one chair. The 0-4-4 rs. is made up as follows:—"Balance tax under Part IV. of the Second Schedule of Act 11 of 1886, 2 pie; penalty, 2 pie; amount to defray the charges of taking, keeping, and selling the property seized, 4 annas—total, 0-4-4 rs." We agree with Messrs. Finlay, Muir, and Co. that in carrying off a table and chair for a claim of 0-4-4 rs. the Collector has taken very ample security. Now, however, that the matter has been brought before the Bengal Chamber, we presume a representation will be made to Government. The firm probably pay income-tax on four or five lacs of rupees, and it is monstrous that a distress warrant should have issued for one pie by an overfervent collector. They do these things better in Bombay; and if they did not, the income-tax would be a great deal more unpopular than it is. The collection of the income-tax depends mainly upon the good faith of those who have to pay it, and partly on their good will. It is better than the obnoxious licence tax, because, though heavier to most of us, it is less unjust. But if Sassoons or Grahams, to take a homely view of the case, were mulcted of their office chairs and tables to meet an absurd claim of "pie one only," we fancy there would be rumpus in Bombay.

A young apprentice of the ship Bannockburn, named Arthur O'Leary, a well-connected lad, was drowned on July 31 at Calcutta. He went to bathe off the Howrah Dock, but slipped off the steps and fell into deep water. Being unable to swim he was drowned, his companions making futile efforts to save him. The body was not recovered.

The directors of the Bank of Bengal, in their half-yearly report, state that the rate of discount, 3'502 per cent., has not been so low since 1822, when it was 3'466 per cent. The directors, of course, attribute this extraordinary fact to the unprecedented superabundance of capital available for employment in the Indian money market.

A Mussulman girl in Lower Bengal has come forward to break the fetters of the Zenana. The lady wants to enter the Female Medical School in Calcutta to qualify for the Medical Service. A Mahomedan vernacular journal violently abuses her, and expresses alarm that the example of the medical Hindoo reformers should so soon make its influence strongly felt within the four walls of the Mahomedan Zenana.

Mr. Charles Gellert, builder and architect, who is pretty well known in Calcutta, committed suicide on Aug. 1 by swallowing a large quantity of laudanum. He at first denied taking the poison and refused to take emetics, but ultimately he confessed when too late. He was thoroughly conscious and intelligent when being removed to the hospital, as he told his wife to remove his gold watch from his coat pocket or it might be stolen.

We (Indian Engineering) hear that it is intended to build an official residence for the Commissioner of Police at Calcutta. This official has hitherto been provided with quarters in the top flat of the Police Office, not at all suited to the dignity of the governor of this town.

MADRAS.

OUR advices from Madras are to Aug. 5.

Lord Wenlock.—The movements of Lord Wenlock during the next two months are now settled, says the Times of India of Aug. 7. His Excellency leaves Ootacamund on the 14th, arrives at Bellary on the 16th, stays in the Bellary district till the 22nd, and in the Cuddapah district till the 26th inst. His Excellency will remain in North Arcot from the 26th to 30th, and in Chingleput from the 30th to Sept. 3. He afterwards proceeds to the affected portion of Coimbatore.

The Madras Cricketers' Visit to Poona.—Although Lord Wenlock will not be able to visit Poona as he had originally intended doing, it has been arranged that a Madras Cricket Eleven, under the captaincy of Captain E. Wintour, of the 3rd Madras Light Cavalry, will play a Bombay Eleven at Poona on the day originally arranged—namely, Aug. 11, 12, and 13. But, as Lord Wenlock is not coming, H.E. Lord Harris has decided not to play himself. Colonel F. Rhodes, D.S.O., Military Secretary to H.E. Lord Harris, heard only late last night, says a telegram of Aug. 7, that the Madras team was coming, and there may now be some difficulty in getting together the team which Lord Harris had selected to represent Bombay.

Sir William Rumbolt's Estate.—We (Madras Times) publish the following in continuation of what has already appeared in connection with the above estate, which is valued at 500,000l., and a large portion of which has been bequeathed to the late Mr. Felix Joachim, who served as a steward under the late Sir William Rumbolt, Bart., who was a resident of Ootacamund, and a partner in the late firm of Palmer and Co., of Hyderabad. Mr. Felix Joachim had four sons, of whom three are living, George Gilbert, Andrew, and Murray, and three daughters, of whom one is living, Victoria, married to Mr. Charles D'Arango, a Eurasian and a native of Calicut. Isabella Joachim (one of the deceased daughters) was married to one Mr. Andrew Brown and has left a son, William Brown. Theodora Joachim (the other deceased daughter) was married to one Mr. Robin Bonjour and has left a daughter, married to one Mr. McDonald, who is now in Ootacamund, and a son Edward, who is now living in Black Town. Naze! Joachim (the deceased son) was a student for priest-hood and died at Ootacamund. Murray Joachim is supposed to have absconded.

Fort St. George.—The fate of old Fort St. George is sealed. A ukase will be shortly issued to raze the outer walls to the ground and to fill up the trench. The inutility of the structure with the progress of modern tactics was a foregone conclusion, and military writers years ago pointed out that the fortification was a farce, as it was neither impregnable nor fit for strategic purposes. The fort, nevertheless, has an historical reputation of two centuries. Mr. Francis Day, the representative of the Court of Directors, obtained a grant of land from the Raja of Chandragheri in 1639, in the reign of King Charles I., and formed the first establishment in Madraspatam, which was then known as the Fort or "White Town," in contradistinction to Black Town. In 1644 the sum expended on the Fort was 2,300^l. The extent of the Fort in 1670 was about 400 yards in length from north to south, and 100 yards in breadth from the sea-face to the old channel of the river.

A Curious Superstition.—On July 31, at the Black Town Presidency Magistrate's Court, before Mr. J. M. Maskell, a native lad named Doraswamy was charged by the police with exhibiting an indecent figure to public view. The accused pleaded guilty to the charge, and in mitigation urged that it was an immemorial custom to exhibit such figures when constructing houses. His Worship sentenced him to receive one dozen stripes with a light rattan. The owner of the house, K. Streenevasa Chetty, who was tried for the same offence and discharged, brought to the notice of the Court that ever since the police interfered in this matter his bricklayers had struck, and still refused to return to their work, and he was unable to get other bricklayers to carry out his work.

The new Madras High Court buildings are getting on apace. The decorations of the interior have been begun, and already it is possible to get a very good idea of what the appearance of the various courts, rooms and offices will be like when finished. The frescoes and other artistic embellishments are excellent, a Bombay paper states, and do the greatest credit to Mr. Irwin's workmen.

The Governor of Madras cut the first sod of the Nilgiri Railway on Aug. 6 at Coohoor. A large number of residents on the Nilgiri Hills were present. In the course of his speech the Governor expressed the hope that Government would soon receive applications for permission to extend the line to Ootacamund. The Governor then blew up a rock by electricity and a banquet followed.

The total value of the minerals and gems produced in the Madras Presidency during the year 1890 was 6,78,352 rs.—viz. gold, 96,518 rs.; iron ores, 7,501 rs.; quarry-stones, 5,68,011 rs.; and other minerals 6,322 rs. The whole of the gold, 1,694 oz., was from the Nilgiri district, and iron ores 186 tons, valued 3,153 rs. in Salem, 45 tons valued 3,600 rs. in Bellary, 5 tons valued 423 rs. in Malabar, and 2 tons valued 325 rs. in Godavari.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Aug. 7.

Lord Harris in Bombay.—Early on Wednesday morning, Aug. 5, H.E. Lord Harris, accompanied by Colonel Rhodes, military secretary, Captain Cox, aide-de-camp, and Ressaldar Sayadoolla Khan, native aide-de-camp, arrived in Bombay from Kirkee by the ordinary passenger train, which left Poona on Tuesday, midnight, to witness the cricket match which is being played between the Poona Gymkhana and the Parsees of Bombay. The arrival of the Governor was strictly private. However, a few Government officials assembled at the Victoria terminus to meet his Excellency. Among those present were Brigadier-General Budgen, D.S.O., commanding the Bombay District; Mr. James M. Campbell, C.S., Acting Collector of Bombay; Colonel W. H. Wilson, Commissioner of Police, Bombay; and Mr. H. A. Acworth, C.S., the Municipal Commissioner. On the Governor alighting from his saloon he shook hands very cordially with the gentlemen present, and immediately, in company of General Budgen, drove to the latter's residence at Marine Lines, where Lord Harris remained as the General's guest. During the day he went to the Gymkhana to witness the cricket match. On Wednesday night his Excellency, accompanied by Ressaldar Sayadoolla Khan, A.D.C., left Victoria terminus for Kirkee by the ordinary passenger train. Colonel Rhodes, General Budgen, and Colonel Wilson were on the platform to see the Governor off.

The Late Sir Henry Morland.—The Bombay Municipal Corporation met on Thursday afternoon (July 30), but adjourned without proceeding to business, as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Sir Henry Morland. Mr. Grattan Geary moved "that the Corporation, in recording the death of Sir Henry Morland, desire to express their sense of the many and long services which the deceased councillor rendered to the city and the municipality of Bombay. His administrative ability, his aptitude for public business, and high character made him a foremost and useful citizen, and gained for him the esteem and confidence of his colleagues, who now deplore his loss; that, as a mark of respect to his memory, the corporation do now adjourn without proceeding to the transaction of business; that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Lady Morland, with an expression of the corporation's sincere sympathy with herself and children in their bereavement," which was put to the meeting and carried.

Formation of a Rifle Club.—A well-attended meeting of local Volunteers was held at the headquarters of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps on July 19 for the purpose of forming a local rifle club, Major R. S. Brown presiding. Rules and by-laws having been read and passed, it was decided that the club should be called the "Bombay Rifle Club," and should be open to all Volunteers, including cadets, the Army and Navy, and also to civilians. The entrance fee was fixed at 8 a. for cadets and 1 r. for all other members, while the subscription, which is payable quarterly in advance, has been fixed at 4 a. per month for the cadets, 8 a. for the Army and Navy, and 1 r. for civilians and Volunteers. A committee, consisting of Major Brown, B.V.R., president, Lieutenant J. F. Pennock, G.I.P. Vols, treasurer, Lieutenants Jenkins, B.V.R., and T. M. English, B.V.R., joint secretaries, and the general members were then elected, the proceedings terminating with a vote of thanks to the chair. It may be added that gentlemen desirous of joining the club should communicate with the secretaries at the B.V. Rifles Headquarters, Carnac Road.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Aug. 23:—

The crop prospects in Upper Burma continue to be very gloomy, although there are slight improvements in some localities. Rain is everywhere urgently wanted. In most districts there has been so far practically no rainfall. The price of paddy continues to rise throughout the province. The Commissioner of the eastern division, which includes Myingyan, Meiktila, and Yamethin, reports that the crops there have failed, that the food-stocks are low, and that the people have no reserves either of money or of food.

The Chief Commissioner, who is about to visit this division and other districts where famine is anticipated, has sanctioned the Commissioner expending 20,000 rs. immediately in relief works. If there is no rainfall within the next ten days, relief works will be opened in Mandalay. Although there may be no actual famine in Upper Burma so far, the opinion prevails that the measures hitherto adopted are inadequate, and that the local Government is delaying too long the undertaking of relief works on a large scale.

If a famine occurs in Upper Burma it will almost certainly result in a serious renewal of disturbances, unless ample measures are adopted to relieve the distress. The Burmese differ widely from the natives of India, and will not remain quiet if they feel the pressure of want.

Sir A. Mackenzie lately held a durbar at Bhamo, which was marked by an unusual incident. All the Chinese traders and residents, although they were invited, refused to attend. The Chinese complained of the undue severity with which the Deputy Commissioner exercises his authority and administers the law, and said that as their grievances were left unredressed they absented themselves. Some offence was also caused amongst the Burmese, owing to the local officials failing to arrange them according to their official rank.

Sir A. Mackenzie at this durbar announced that he was determined to stop the smuggling of arms, opium, and liquor, and that military posts would be established along the trade route, and legitimate trade would be protected.

The Kachyens have been warned against raiding villages, and have been informed that they must pay tribute.

The younger Wuntho Tsawbwa has now openly allied his fortunes with a notorious dacoit leader, and in conjunction with him is preparing to raid the villages in his former territory.

The Rangoon Gazette announces that a general court-martial will be held in Mandalay in connection with an alleged card scandal, in which a lieutenant in a Madras infantry regiment is accused of cheating. This officer, who is now on leave in England, has been ordered to return to give evidence.

NEXT SEASON'S frontier operations in Burma (says the Pioneer) comprise expeditions from Fort White to Kanhow and Nwengal countries, while an expedition will be sent from Haka for the subjection of Tlangtangs in conjunction, if possible, with a party from Fort Tregear. An examination will also be made of the country lying between the Baungshes and Chinboks. Several expeditions will be organised in the North for the further exploration of the Kachin country and of the Jade and Amber Mines, and, if practicable, an expedition will be sent to the practically unknown Shan State of Kanti in the Hukong Valley. The northern portions of the Upper Chindwin will also be visited and explored, and a series of posts established on the Uru River to connect Paungbyin sub-division with the Jade Mines' post. It is not yet definitely known whether anything further will be done towards settling and demarcating the boundaries between Burma and Siam, and between Burma and Chin; but the matter is under the consideration of Government.

IT HAS TRANSPIRED that the recent visit of Lieutenant Bullock and Surgeon Weight to Byingye to report on that place as a sanitarium for Burma, showed it to be over five thousand feet high. The climate is dry and bracing, with a cool breeze always blowing. The nights are cold enough to make fires indispensable. There is no malarious tract to be passed, and all the valleys near are dry and rocky. There is no adequate water-supply at Byingye itself, but water could be pumped up at a small cost. The water is excellent, and there is abundance of it below Byingye. The area suitable for building sites is rather limited, but there is enough room to provide barracks for a thousand men.

THE Rangoon Times says a commissariat scandal has come to light in Upper Burma. Over 2,000 baskets of paddy were supplied during the Manipore expedition to the commissariat at Tammoo, payment being sanctioned at the rate of 50 rs. per 100 baskets, but it was discovered that the villagers who supplied the paddy received only 35 rs. The bill was signed by a Burman in the employment of the Myook, and countersigned by the Myothugyi. The latter, however, asserts that he only received 35 rs. per 100 baskets.

THE COURT OF INQUIRY, of which Major Welsh, 23rd M. I., is president, and which was constituted to inquire into the evidence regarding the accusation against an officer in a native regiment, of cheat ing at cards, reassembled at Mandalay a short time ago. Mr. Swinhoe, a member of the Mandalay Bar, who, it is believed, had undertaken the case for the defence, was present at the investigation, the events of which, however, have not transpired.

THE DEPUTY COMMISSIONER of Mandalay, says the local paper, has been stirring himself up in his capacity as President of the Municipality and the Municipal Committee to assist in holding an exhibition in Mandalay for Upper Burma of Arts and Manufactures conjoined with an Agricultural Show. The idea is excellent, and as the Municipal Committee have promised to give the proposal every assistance in their power, we have no doubt that the affair will be a success. We would suggest that the exhibition be given for the whole of Burma, including the Shan and other States, instead of confining it to the upper province. There are several towns in Lower Burma which are widely noted for the excellence of their works in gold and silver, and an exhibition of such arts and manufactures in Upper Burma will have the effect of stimulating those who engage in such works in Upper Burma to improve their style of workmanship.

THE Rangoon Gazette says that the Local Government has thought better of its determination not to compensate the Engineers who lost their property in Wuntho. They have been told to forward particulars of their losses to the Local Government, and our contemporary is of opinion that it will be a wise proceeding if their claims are dealt with liberally. We (Mandalay Herald) are glad to see that Sir Alexander Mackenzie has reconsidered his decision to have nothing to do with the Engineers' claims. It was decidedly unfair to give compensation to everyone else who had sustained losses at the hands of the Wuntho rebels and to refuse even to consider the claims of the Engineers.

HYDERABAD.

THE Deccan Times says:—A marriage has been arranged between the elder of the two sisters of H.H. the Nizam and the Nawab Imam Jung, Kurshed-ul-Mulk, Bahadur, the elder son of Sir Kurshed Jah, K.C.I.E., the premier noble. The official sanction to the marriage was given last week, when the premier noble, accompanied by his brother, the Nawab Vicar-ul-Oomrah, and other relatives, went as a deputation to H.H. the Nizam to solicit the hand of the princess, and to present a royal muzzer of 101 gold mohurs. The mungni (betrothal) ceremony will take place on Aug. 1, and the celebration of the marriage itself will be in November. The event will be attended with great pomp and ceremony, the estimated expenditure in connection with which is reported to be about ten lacs. For several years past, it is said, a feeling of coldness existed between the Nizam and his premier noble over some domestic disagreement, of which there are several versions, but the approaching marriage completely dispels any such misgivings. If, however, there really was anything in them, the impending marriage marks a new era as to the relationship between the two most powerful houses in these dominions, the significance of which cannot be underrated.

THE LAST jarida says that Mr. Narsing Rao has notified that H.E. Sir Asman Jah has given orders for the construction of a new lake behind the Jalpalli lake, at his own expense, as a gift to the public, and that the same is to be maintained in repair from his private purse. The lake is to be called the "Umda Sagar." This is the third great work of public utility which H.E. the Minister is constructing at his own expense since his ministry began.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

SIMLA, Aug. 6. — Nearly 14 inches of rain have fallen here in 30 hours, and the damage done is very great. A house fell in at Chota Simla last night, burying three natives, of whom two were killed; and a stable collapsed on the Elysium Hill, and buried a syce and two horses. All are reported killed. Heavy slips have occurred throughout the station. The occupants of Stirling Cottage had to take refuge in the Elysium Hotel in the middle of the night. The whole face of the hill below Yarrow is reported to be in a very dangerous condition, and there is scarcely a house in the station which has escaped, all being more or less damaged. Seven inches of rain fell between four and eight o'clock last night.

SANCTION HAS been accorded to the whole scheme for regrading the North-Western Railway between Jhelum and Rawul Pindi, so as to admit of full troop trains running through with one engine. A portion of the work has already been taken in hand.

RATHER IMPORTANT statistics of cotton cultivation and trade in the North-West Provinces for the year ending June, 1891, have recently been compiled. From these we learn that the total area under cultivation was 1,579,821 acres, and the total outturn of cleaned cotton 729,782 cwts.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES Police Report is very satisfactory. It records, among other things, the night raids against the moss troopers. The police came upon the dacoits near Marugarh in the Indore State; the latter fired first, but the police poured in volley after volley from their breech-loaders, and four noted bandits were killed or died of their wounds. Two of their men had escaped from Jubbulpore Jail in 1880. All this is very pleasing. This band had been the terror of the country; they had with them a dusky Delilah named Gendi, who for years had followed her bold Bheel and shared his forest lair; she was only slightly wounded. Similar success attended police operations against the dacoits from Lalitpore. But the most interesting passage is that which chronicles how Maharaja Scindia's Government had pardoned some professional dacoits and settled them along the Saugor and Lalitpore borders. This was benevolent perhaps, says a mofussil journal, but hardly fair to British subjects, as twenty-three dacoities were committed in the Saugor district, and some of these dacoits "with their parwannis of pardon on their persons were arrested red-handed."

ALLAHABAD, Aug. 5.—The hearing of the appeal of the seven men convicted at the Benares Sessions Court for having been concerned in the rioting at the Badaini Temple in April last was concluded at the Allahabad High Court. All the prisoners were sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment, in some cases with solitary confinement and heavy fines. The High Court, differing from the sessions judge and agreeing with the jury, held that the charge of dacoity was not brought home against any of the accused except Girja Pershad, and that the imposition of the fines was ultra vires. The sentence on Girja Pershad accordingly has been sustained, but in the case of the other six accused the sentence has been reduced to one for simple rioting, and the High Court considered 18 months' imprisonment without fine a sufficient punishment.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

LAST YEAR, says the Civil and Military Gazette, our news from Cabul gave frequent evidence of the Ameer's growing dislike to the Shias among his subjects, as evidenced by his disbandment of Shia regiments, and his prohibition of the Shia Mahomedan processions. This attitude on his part was attributed to the fanatical influence of his son, Habibulla, while his queen was using all her influence on the other side to secure fairer usage for the Shias. Either this influence would appear to have prevailed, or the Ameer has discovered that in creating discontent among the Shias he was playing with edged tools, for a marked change is reported to have occurred. The Maradkhani and Chandawal Shias lately presented a petition with twelve thousand signatures, through their chief Mulla, Yusaf Ali—who, by the way, had himself suffered from the Ameer's anger—asking to be allowed to celebrate the Muharram with the usual processions this year. In reply the Ameer is credited with having made a speech worthy of the Government of India, in its expressions of belief in the principles of religious toleration and individual liberty, pointing out that the prohibition of the Muharram procession was in reality dictated by a tender regard for the welfare of the Shias, whose processions would have been liable to be attacked by the Sunnis; but that if this year the Shias would take the responsibility of any breach of the peace on their own shoulders, and would undertake that the processionists should do nothing nor utter any words calculated to injure the religious susceptibilities of others, he would grant their request. The Mulla accepted the conditions on behalf of the Shia community, and the Muharram will probably be celebrated in Cabul as usual this year. The Mulla appears to have been perfectly satisfied with the result of his interview, and has made it generally known throughout the Shia community. The latter are, however, still extremely dissatisfied with the fanatical conduct towards them of the Ameer's eldest son, Habibulla, whom they believe to have been the cause of the stoppage of their religious processions. Indeed, it is pretty evident that, if anything happened to the Ameer, Habibulla at any rate would not succeed to the throne, unless after a bloody civil war.

The Ameer has been suffering again from gout, which necessitated his returning from Paghman to Cabul. The last news was that he was better.

THE NATIVE PRESS.—The Madras Times says:—Considerable harm is being done to the more respectable section of the Native press, which has latterly been making some endeavour to shake itself free from the low tone of political morality, misrepresentation, and bombastic high falutin which has hitherto held it up to contempt and ridicule, by the unscrupulous endeavours of some vernacular papers to bring the British Raj in India into discredit with the people over the Manipore affair. The latest illustration of this is a vernacular print which favours its readers with a sensational engraving of the Senaputty Tekendrajit in prison. He is represented in a cage like a wild beast, clad in prison clothing, heavily ironed, guarded by four British infantry soldiers with fixed bayonets, the men being decorated with epaulettes and lace! As there are no British infantry in Manipore, the truthfulness of the picture may be readily estimated. The object of this tall lying is as apparent as it is discreditable.

IRREGULAR PROCEDURE.—It is one thing to hold the opinion that the law might be improved and that legal procedure might be simplified, observes the Pioneer; it is quite another thing, being a judge, to ignore the procedure laid down by the statute, and act as you think the statute ought to have prescribed. The Sessions Judge of Aligarh seems to have lost sight of the distinction, and the consequence is that he has come into somewhat disagreeable collision with the Bench of the Allahabad High Court. The occasion was an appeal from a decision of the Sessions Judge, which no sooner came before their lordships of the High Court than they referred back for an explanation of what they felt constrained to term very irregular procedure. The Sessions Judge, not very wisely perhaps, endeavoured to justify himself, with what result will be seen from the report of the proceedings in the High Court. The explanation furnished, Mr. Justice Knox remarked, was, if possible, of a nature still more extraordinary than the procedure which the judge had attempted to defend. Briefly, the Sessions Judge seems to have argued that, in acting as he did, he took a common-sense view of the circumstances, and was therefore justified in disregarding legal procedure even so far as to take cognisance of an offence without commitment and without jurisdiction. It is not necessary to doubt Mr. Blennerhasset's capacity to perceive that the course of justice would run anything but smoothly if every judge was thus to follow the light of nature instead of the provisions of the Code. "I never found," observed Mr. Justice Straight, "that the interests of justice, let alone the interests of accused persons, were advanced or benefited by slackness, or carelessness in procedure."

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been published since our last issue :—

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23 (Times).—A Russian naval lieutenant named Kouznetsoff, who has lived many years in Japan, relates in the Cronstadt Viestnik, the official organ of the navy, that the whole of the Japanese aristocracy are strongly inclined towards the Protestant form of religion, and that they only wait for the Mikado to change his religion in order to follow his example. Lieutenant Kouznetsoff calculates the number of Japanese who have adopted the Russian Orthodox faith at 17,000.

PARIS, Aug. 19 (Reuter).—According to the latest official intelligence received here, the effect of the collective action of the European Powers on the Tsung-li-Yamen is beginning to make itself felt, and the local authorities are evincing a more conciliatory disposition.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 20 (Standard).—A strong Chinese Squadron has been ordered to Nankin, and a second flotilla is assembling to the north of the Yang-tze-Kiang. The Pekin Government is now becoming seriously alarmed at the aspect affairs have assumed, more especially on account of the appeal to force threatened by the representatives of the European Powers, in the event of China continuing to refuse redress for the murders and losses suffered by European subjects in the late riots. The expedition sent out by the Chinese Government to lay down a telegraph has been driven back by the literati and people of Hunan, with the loss of all its apparatus and materials.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 21 (Standard).—I learn from Pekin that the dispute between the Chinese Government and the foreign Ministers in reference to the redress demanded by the latter in connection with the late riots has taken a favourable turn, and that there is now a prospect of an amicable settlement. Although the Pekin authorities are beginning to show themselves more tractable so far as the claims of Europeans are concerned, they hesitate as yet to proceed against Hunan, where the mob have just dispersed the expedition sent by the Chinese Government to construct a line of telegraph through that province. The foreign Envoys in Pekin, on their part, appear disposed to make matters as smooth as they decently can for the Chinese Government. They have assented to the compensation for the losses suffered by Europeans in the minor riots being settled by the authorities of the localities in which the outrages were committed.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 22 (Times).—Everything is quiet at Nankin, where the Viceroy is settling claims. Viceroy Li's answers to the foreign Ministers' demands are eminently evasive.

The Times correspondent at Berlin wrote on Aug. 20 :—A few days ago a notice appeared in certain German journals to the effect that the participation of Germany in the protest of the Powers against the recent disturbances in China had made an unfavourable impression on Government circles in China. It was considered, said the article in question (which is regarded here as inspired from Chinese quarters), that Germany had no right to associate herself with the other Powers because German interests were not affected by the recent disturbances, because an incident which occurred at the German Mission in Shan Tung last year was being separately arranged at Pekin, and because among the missions of China Germany was less represented than any other Power. To-night the semi-official North German Gazette publishes the views of the German Government. The assertions of the above notice, says the writer, are not confirmed by the facts. German commerce, which on the Yang-tze-Kiang is not inconsiderable, has been greatly injured by the recent excesses. Regarding the incident of a year ago in Shan Tung, it is declared that all the representations of the German Ambassador at Pekin have called forth nothing but the most vague general promises on the part of the Chinese Government. It is even declared that the official of the province who is chiefly to blame for the acts of violence against the German Mission at Shan Tung has recently been promoted, whereby the hostile feeling of the populace against the Germans has been strengthened. A direct denial is given to the statement that the German interest in missions in China is inconsiderable; on the contrary, it is averred that it is very great, and that the Government place great value on the prosperity and development of the Catholic Mission of Shan Tung. The writer adds that the otherwise good relations of Germany and China would be advanced and strengthened if the Government at Pekin would pay somewhat more attention to the claims of Germany.

A telegram from Rome states that on receiving the first trustworthy intelligence of the anti-foreign disturbances in China, the Italian Government gave orders for the Italian gun vessel Volturno, cruising off Shanghai, to hold itself at the disposal of the Italian Minister, with a view to an eventual co-operation with the warships of the other Powers in affording protection to Europeans.

Mr. Wharton, Acting Secretary of State, on August 20 made a statement at Washington as to the attitude of the United States Government on the question of the disturbances in China. He affirmed that it was a mistake to say that the American Government is moving slowly in the Chinese matter, and that the energy displayed by France, England, and Germany is lacking in the United States. It has, in fact, been keeping pace with Europe in efforts to protect the Americans in China. There is only one exception, and that is in the naval display. "We cannot make such a display," said Mr. Wharton, "because we have only two ships in Chinese waters, and it is impossible to make much of a show with them. The Navy Department has done its utmost, and has just ordered three more vessels to proceed from the Pacific coast to China. We have made every proper demand upon the Chinese Government.

Our Minister, Mr. Denby, received orders long ago, and every Consul within the Empire has been likewise instructed, to use all the means in his power to preserve the dignity of this Government. We have the promise and assurance of the Emperor that our requests will be granted, but we are sending every available ship across the Pacific to assist in preserving peace." Outside the State Department much concern is expressed regarding the situation. Naval officers who have served in the Asiatic Squadron state that the American naval force there is wholly inadequate to protect American interests. Even conceding that the British admiral will do all that is possible to protect Americans, he will probably have only enough force to protect the English residents.

A typhoon passed near Hong Kong on July 19, doing considerable damage to small craft. H.M. gunboat Tweed broke from her moorings and grounded near the Naval Dockyard at Kowloon; a bluejacket was drowned. The damage to her hull was patched up and the vessel floated, but she filled again and sank in deep water.

It has been reported, says the North China Herald, that the soldat General Tchêng Ki-tong is under arrest at Foochow, that he has been condemned to death at Pekin, that he has never got beyond the protection of the British flag at Hong Kong, &c. We believe that he is really at Tokio with his intimate friend Li, the adopted son of H.E. Li Hung-Chang, and at present Minister for China to Japan.

"J. W. M." writes to the Standard on Aug. 21 :—"Will you allow me to point out that the Chinese Squadron, which your Shanghai correspondent says has been ordered to Nankin, is no doubt composed of the ships of war which are under the control of the Viceroy, who resides at that city? It is highly probable that these vessels have been scattered at the different ports in the Yang-tze, from Woosung, near Shanghai, to Nankin and Wuhu. The Yang-tze Squadron is, like every other squadron in what may be called the Chinese navy, a provincial, and not an imperial fleet. Its disposition and movements are entirely controlled by the Viceroy of the Liang-Kiang—the two provinces of Kiangsu and Kiangze—just as the Northern or Peitung Squadron is under the control of the Viceroy of Chihli, and the Tukien and Canton fleets under that of the Viceroys of the Southern Maritime Provinces. There is a Board of Admiralty at Pekin; but it has no real power over the provincial fleets, and never has, as far as I know, tried to exercise any authority over them.

"The Viceroys regard their fleets as solely intended to protect the provinces which have defrayed their cost and maintain them, and it is doubtful whether a Viceroy would detach any part of his navy for the defence of another province, or, perhaps, even of the Empire. During the troubles with France a few years ago I heard an official Chinese say, in answer to a foreigner, who asked why the Yang-tze Squadron did not put to sea and attack the few French men-of-war which were then prohibiting the rice trade with the North, or trying to do so, 'Why should the Viceroy (of Nankin) risk his ships; he has no quarrel with the French? Let Pekin settle their own affairs.'"

"I take it that the meaning of the telegram is that the Viceroy of the Liang-Kiang is concentrating his squadron at Nankin for the purpose of overawing the rulers in that city and others, and at the same time to appeal to the imaginations of the people by a display of naval power which, it will be reported, is to be used to destroy the insolent foreigners who have sent their men-of-war to menace the great Chinese Empire. The Peitung Squadron will be concentrated in some safe port—Port Arthur or Wei-hei-wei; the inferior mandarins will bluster to keep the people quiet; but the ships will never leave their anchorage to assist the rulers in any other province, should any of them be hard pressed, either by their own people or by the action which foreign Governments may find themselves compelled to take."

The development of telegraphs in China is in reality a far more significant sign of the times than the anti-European riots, and the Revue Française gives some facts which are only the more interesting because of the French imprimatur with which they come. It will be remembered that the first telegraph line in China was opened in 1872. The effect of the last Franco-Chinese War was to force upon the Chinese Government the recognition of the necessity for rapid communication between the centre and the scene of action, and the determination was then taken to endow the Celestial Empire with a complete network of telegraph lines. The work was entrusted to the Danish Northern Telegraph Company, and now all the principal towns of China are connected not only with each other and with the outlying districts of the empire, but with submarine cables which bring them into immediate connection with the world. The Great Wall of China and London Wall are within a few hours' communication of each other. There is not at present a direct overland connection between Canton and Paris; but a comparatively short line to join Helamp, on the Chinese system, with Blagovetschensk, on the St. Petersburg-Vladivostock line, would effect this through communication. The arteries of Chinese thought will be then inevitably drawn into the system of Western circulation. How rapidly this will affect the Chinese people may be judged from the fact that already all the telegraph operators are native Chinese, who for the most part speak English.

The Times correspondent telegraphs from Singapore (Aug. 22) :—The trade returns of the China Treaty ports for the quarter which ended on June 30 have increased by 16 per cent. over the returns for the same period last year.

The Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank has reduced all its interest rates. The shareholders' meeting to-day was harmonious.

Mail advices up to the 12th inst. complain that Sir J. Walsham is inactive in getting the inciters of the riots punished.

THE SUPREME LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

At the Supreme Legislative Council meeting at Simla on Aug. 6 the Hon. Sir David Barbour presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the India Merchant Shipping Act, 1880, and the Hon. Sir Philip Hutchins moved that the Bill to extend the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes, Madras, be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Hon. Sir Alex. Miller, the Hon. Mr. Rattigan, and the Mover. In also moving for leave to introduce a Bill to make better provision for the administration of the Municipalities in the Punjab, he said that six years' experience had discovered some faults in the operation of the Municipal Act of 1884. Both faults and deficiencies were probably due to the great difference of conditions existing among various Municipalities of the Punjab, and the difficulty of framing a single enactment fitted to centres like Amritsar and Delhi and small country towns. The apparatus of administration in these latter, the hon. member pointed out, was unnecessarily cumbrous, and the Punjab Government resolved to amend the Municipal law. The decision to repeal the existing Act and re-enact it, with additions recommended by the Punjab Government, has swollen the Bill to formidable dimensions; but in reality, all the new proposals can be divided into three groups:—First, a number of sections to grant new or enlarged powers to committees in connection with municipal administration in hill stations—such as rules to license posters and hired horses, the regulation of buildings (though this is not confined to hill stations), the control over petroleum and inflammable materials, regulations for the sale of food and drink, reductions of danger from diseases such as cholera and small-pox, and the control over houses of ill-fame. The second group of amendments comprises all sections tending to make the administration less cumbrous and more efficient; also provisions to facilitate the change from an appointed to an elected committee, or vice versa, and for delegating in case of the smaller Municipalities some of the functions of local Government in regard to them to the Commissioners. The other sections simplify the dealing with the imposition and remission of taxation, the reform of the law as to house scavenging, and the grant of larger powers of control over Municipal servants. The third group provides simple regulation for cleanliness, &c., of such places as Kalka. The Bill having been introduced, the Council adjourned for a fortnight.

FRONTIER RAILWAYS.

WHILE on the subject of frontier railways, says the Pioneer, we may notice the intention of the Government of India to relay the temporary line up the Bolan which has so frequently been wrecked by the floods. This is a wise precaution, for with breaks occurring on the Hurnai route at Mud Gorge and elsewhere, Quetta might find itself cut off from railway communication with India at a critical moment. From Bostan, where the Quetta loop effects a junction with the rail from the Hurnai valley, the line is a double one onwards through the Khojak tunnel to New Chaman, as it is intended to accommodate military traffic coming up from the Indus through the Bolan on the one hand, and by way of Hurnai on the other. But if the Bolan route were closed altogether the advantage of this double line would be in a manner neutralised. As one never knows when the stress of war will arise, it would be running some considerable risk to trust to only one line of communication with the Indus. To make assurance doubly sure, the survey for a permanent railway east of the Bolan has been undertaken. This would start from near Rindli outside the mouth of the pass and follow the Mushkaf valley to Mach, to which the high-level line from Darwaza to Hironk—a perfectly safe section—is being extended. There would be absolutely no danger from floods or landslips on this route, the length of which is only 40 or 50 miles. Mr. Ramsay, the Engineer in charge, may be expected to send in his plans and estimates before the cold weather, and a decision can then be come to as to the feasibility of the project. As the heavy expenditure upon the Khojak tunnel and its approaches has now come to an end, there will be funds available for the work if it is decided to undertake it. Quetta and the advanced post at New Chaman would thus eventually have absolutely stable communication, not only with the great cantonments of the Punjab, but with the sea at Karachi.

A RESERVE OF FODDER.

RESOLUTION BY THE GOVERNMENT.

A RESOLUTION has been issued in the Revenue and Agricultural Department of the Government of India dealing with the fodder reserves. So far back as September 1883 the Government of India asked for the advice and co-operation of local Governments as to the action which should be taken for the better protection of cattle during seasons of drought, and at the same time indicated the general outlines of the scheme which appeared most likely to secure the desired result. This scheme, while seeking to encourage people to store more carefully the grasses produced in fields, and, where possible, to store hay, had for one of its principal objects the extended growth and reproduction of fodder trees and bushes, on which Indian cattle are so largely dependent for their food-supply in years of scarcity. The question was asked whether in some cases land could not be purchased for the above purpose, and information was called for which would indicate how far the cattle in each district required protection, the extent of waste land available, and the best means of managing any land that could be set apart for the purpose. The Government of India, having the replies of the local Governments before them, are convinced that the subject deserves to be further analysed and studied in greater detail before it is safe to draw any final conclusions. They accept the proposition that no impediment should be offered to the extension of permanent cultivation, wherever the welfare of agricultural communities demands it. It is only in cases in which the expansion of arable land is less profitable, or unless protected by a sufficient area of pastures, fodder reserves, and forests is unsafe, that restriction is required. It must first be considered to what extent pastures, fodder reserves, and forests are required in each locality, in order to meet public wants, and to secure the proper protection of agriculture or the full efficiency of agricultural operations, and an analysis of each district should be made in special regard to this question. As to the management of areas brought under treatment, a general principle applies to all of them, that they should be permanently maintained in such manner as to provide the maximum benefit to the adjacent population at a minimum cost to the State. The management must, therefore, be conducted on mercantile principles, so far as these are consistent with a full regard to proved and acknowledged rights. The Government of India state that in a resolution of Dec. 8, 1881, it was laid down that the Agricultural Departments should, district by district, ascertain the causes which, especially in years of drought, had tended to interfere with agricultural efficiency, and that when these causes had been ascertained, remedies should be suggested, and where possible provided. These instructions have not in some provinces been sufficiently understood or carried into effect, and it is now requested that a commencement be made in setting on foot in each district the agricultural analysis contemplated in the resolution of 1881, so far as it includes the provision of an adequate grazing and fodder supply.

Unappreciated Hospitality.—The Bengali vernacular Press, writes an up-country paper, is making a great fuss over the action of Sir Charles and Lady Elliott in offering tea and biscuits to Hindoo students. The students appear to have admitted, when asked, that their parents were orthodox Hindoos, but to have shown no reluctance on their part to accept the refreshments offered, in spite of the admonition to observe their parents' wishes. Surely, there is little enough in an incident of this kind on which to found an indictment of the kind brought against Sir Charles Elliott; but it shows how extremely careful and prudent it is for rulers in India to be in dealing with natives. They are so fenced around by prejudices, and at the same time are so apt to mistake the politest invitation from those in authority as a hukm, that the best intentions may easily produce the worst results. Of course the right thing to have done would have been to provide refreshments, as far as possible, suited to all requirements of the guests, and leave the rest to their own choice. The incident offers, however, a practical instance of the difficulties of the "social intercourse" problem.

"TRUTH" ON THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

It is a great pity, says the Bombay Gazette, that the vivacious and always interesting correspondent of Truth in Paris should have taken the trouble to transmit to Mr. Labouchere the irresponsible chatter of "members of the different Indian services" who sought to amuse her by "carping" at the Duke of Connaught for wholly imaginary offences while Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army. It is true his Royal Highness is kindly acquitted of any design or desire to imitate "those acts which Pedro I. practised in his father's lifetime with the view of detaching Brazil from Portugal and setting up there himself as an independent Emperor." It is very truly—and quite superfluously—stated that the "Duke of Connaught so acted as to be quite above the suspicion of any such interest." We should think so. No one ever dreamed that it would be necessary for the Paris correspondent of a society journal to vindicate the late Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency Army from such a preposterous accusation—which was never made. Not less preposterous, but, seeing that it is actually made, better worth emphatic contradiction, is this allegation:—"The Duke of Connaught's headquarters in India became the resort of intriguing rajas and disaffected natives who wanted to fish in troubled waters (!) They were tempted to try and use the Duke for their own purposes, though, personally, he never encouraged them to do so. Indeed, if they hoped to lure him on through ambition, he behaved in a way that was most disappointing"—instead of giving them his ear and his confidence, he gave them his photograph, framed. All this is pure nonsense. The story that rajas and disaffected natives went to Magdala House in the hope of working on the ambition of the late Commander-in-Chief, and getting him to play the part of a Don Pedro, is the wildest fiction. We should like very much to get sight of the names of the enterprising rajas in question, and to learn whether they were in league with the disaffected natives who had the entree at his Royal Highness's headquarters. Col. Becher, the equerry, and Colonel Cayave, the military secretary, were they cognisant of these conspirators in buckram, whom they allowed to approach so near, though the Duke personally gave them no encouragement to try and use him for their own purposes? Really Mr. Labouchere ought to take some little trouble to sift the stories that are sent to him for publication, and only publish those that are credible. The Duke of Connaught's relations with native princes while in India were entirely such as became the Queen's son. As we wrote on the eve of departure of the late Commander-in-Chief from India, the Duke had always remembered that as the son of the Queen-Empress he had in addition to his duties as head of the Bombay Army other obligations, chiefly in regard to the native princes, which it would have been against duty and against policy for him to forget. In those supplemental but essential duties which his close relations to the Throne imposed upon him, the Duke of Connaught rendered services to the Empire which should not be overlooked wherever the advantage is recognised of maintaining the relations between the paramount Power and the feudatory chiefs upon a footing of personal regard. His Royal Highness recognised to the full that the Presidency and the State had claims upon him as the Queen's son, and never spared himself in discharging with tact and judgment the higher duties imposed upon him by his exceptional position.

Assam.—There was an increase of over a lac in the imports into Assam last year from the surrounding foreign States. In 1889 Bhutan, Hill Tipperah, Manipore, the Looshai and Naga Hills, sent about 5,30,000 rs. worth of merchandise; in 1890 the value had grown to 6,40,000 rs., the principal increase, 80,000 rs., appearing in the returns for Hill Tipperah. It is worthy of note, says a Bombay paper, as indicating the detail in which the official statements of imports are drawn up, that Towang is credited with an import of 14 rs. worth of yaks' tails, while Manipore appears to have sent mats to the value of 4 rs. One of the most noticeable features of the returns is the continued increase in the price of timber. While the import of logs from Hill Tipperah and the Looshai Hills was only 7,780, as against 7,870 in the previous year, the total value rose from a little more than a lac to over a lac and three-quarters. The record of the last three years shows, indeed, a constant diminution in imports, accompanied by a rapid increase in the total value.

The Unconventured Service Bank.—The Bombay Gazette, of Aug. 4 says:—"The official liquidators of the Unconventured Service Bank will pay a dividend during the present month of five annas in the rupee on all claims admitted by Mr. Justice Straight, the judge in charge of the liquidation proceedings. Depositors will thus obtain nearly one-third of their deposits in six months after the closing of the bank. They will also be paid interest on their money up to Jan. 20, the date of the order first passed by the district judge for the winding-up of the bank. The balance of the deposits will be paid, with similar interest, in due course, and Mr. Justice Straight has intimated that, if the assets of the bank are well realised, he will allow interest on the whole sum up to the dates of actual payment. The liquidation must therefore be considered as having progressed very satisfactorily so far.

The Leprosy Commission Report.—Partly owing to Dr. Barclay's death, the Leprosy Commission Report is not likely to be ready till the beginning of September. The practical work, says the Simla correspondent of the Times of India, is already virtually completed, and the draft report for the Government of India is in full proof. The chief work now consists in correcting the same and the preparation of the plates, maps, and statistics. On the two main questions with which they were to deal—namely, the contagiousness and hereditary transmission of the disease, the Commission have come to an unanimous decision, but their conclusions will not be known till the report is published by the National Leprosy Fund. At Home they have also had to propose a practical scheme for diminishing leprosy in India, and it is believed the Government of India are not disinclined to consider the question of legislating in accordance with their suggestions if the ground is practicable.

PORTUGAL AND THE CATHOLICS IN INDIA.

It is to be hoped that the negotiations on behalf of the British and Indian Governments which are now being carried on in Lisbon will result in the satisfactory settlement of one or two points in the relations of the two Powers in India to the Catholic religion which cause some vexation. The Indian Government policy in relation to the respective claims of Portugal and the Vatican in India has been rather that of GALLIO, and it is not difficult to imagine some cogent arguments in favour of the wisdom of that policy. The Government has abstained from recognising the concordat by which the long dispute between Portugal and the Pope was settled in 1886. But the position claimed and assumed by Portugal under this arrangement is not altogether a matter of indifference to us, since her assertion of the rights it is supposed to confer upon her leads to several difficulties and is felt by a certain class of our Catholic subjects to affect their interests. One of the complications arising out of the present position is that the appointment of some of the chaplains of our Roman Catholic troops in Madras lies with Portuguese prelates. Our Government does not recognise the official standing of these prelates, whereas there are Catholic bishops in Southern India who receive allowances from the Government, for the purpose of making certain appointments and returns under the army regulations. It is asked why these bishops, who seem to be the proper persons to make the appointments, and actually did make them before the concordat, should not continue to do so? The existing anomalous position appears to be deeply resented by the bishops and British Catholics of Southern India. Another grievance which we have frequently mentioned is that of the non-appointment of an Archbishop to Bombay, where the see has been vacant for two years. It is suggested that the negotiations now on foot for the renewal of the Anglo-Portuguese treaty regarding Goa afford an opportunity for pressing Portugal to abandon her claim to ecclesiastical patronage in British India. The Government, which preserves neutrality in religious matters in India, might, it is urged, without compromising that principle, take steps to free its Catholic subjects from a jurisdiction which is anomalous and inconvenient. As the Portuguese wish to obtain a renewal of a treaty under which a subsidy is paid to Goa, the opportunity may be a favourable one for obtaining the desired concession if the matter is pressed with sufficient energy.

THE SILVER QUESTION IN THE UNITED STATES.

A LONG telegram from its Washington correspondent appeared in the Daily Telegraph last Friday, stating that the agitation on the Silver Question is taking a shape which is likely before long to lead to important legislation. SENATOR PADDOCK indeed, who is the leader in the Senate of the pro-silver party, declares the feeling to be so strong that a Free Silver Bill is inevitable. This opinion may be discounted because of the natural prejudice of the author; but MR. LEECH, director of the United States Mints, seems to think that a Silver Bill may pass both Houses, but doubts whether PRESIDENT HARRISON would sign it. This view is shared by MR. JAMES B. COLGATE, one of the principal bullion merchants, and both he and MR. LEECH conceive that the fears of disastrous effects from such a measure are chimerical. The news will be read in India with avidity and some hope; for, whatever views may be held as to the ultimate effects of such legislation on the financial position of the United States, the immediate consequences would be favourable to the Indian exchange, and while the boom lasted would diminish the anxieties of the Secretary of Finance and increase the value of silver securities. Telegrams of this character, however, must be received with some caution. It may perhaps be safe to premise that the Silver party will make a gigantic effort to push a Bill through, and that there is a growing opinion in its favour. Should this develop great strength, PRESIDENT HARRISON may after all find it convenient to change his mind.

It is now decided that PRINCE CHRISTIAN VICTOR will proceed to Bombay, to join his regiment, in the P. and O. steamer Peshawur, which he will meet at Brindisi on Sept. 20.

The Central News learns upon good authority that arrangements have been completed with the Dominion Government of Canada for the transport of British troops to India via Canada by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the event of a blockade of the Suez Canal, should our position in India be ever threatened. The troops would proceed in troopships to Halifax, and be taken thence by rail to Vancouver, where they would be re-embarked in the vessels of the Pacific Squadron, assisted by those large steamers which the Government have practically at their command at Vancouver.

INDIA AT THE HYGIENIC CONGRESS.

WE are informed that Sir M. E. Grant Duff's statement to the effect that the special Indian meetings had no connection with the Congress, was made under an entire misapprehension. It is true that there was, properly speaking, no Indian section, but the Indian meetings, which were among the most valuable and interesting of the gathering, were as much a part of the Congress as the sectional meetings. India was fairly well represented in all the sections, and her contribution to the discussions, as is testified by the full reports of the proceedings in Public Health, was important and useful. We are able to give a full report of the speech made by Dr. Simpson in supporting the vote of thanks to the Indian authorities and Native Princes. He said:—

In the absence of Mr. Bhowanagsee I have the honour of thanking the members of the Executive, and especially Mr. S. Digby, for the hearty reception which has been accorded to the Indian delegates. Mr. Digby has been indefatigable in his labours, and I am sure it must be a source of satisfaction to him to know that we have benefited much by our visit. The delegates have heard discussed and have seen many things that are entirely new to them; they have learnt the wide range included in the term sanitary science, and they have also learnt what the application of the principles of sanitary science has done and can do for the amelioration of those conditions of ill-health which, up to recent years, have been considered inevitable and unpreventable. The Congress has also been the means of showing that sanitary ideas are gaining ground in India and that an interest is being aroused in the subject. At former congresses the Government were accustomed to send a few accredited delegates, but at this one there have been present representatives from the Native States, from Indian Corporations, and from Chambers of Commerce. The Indian Medical Service in India, like the Army surgeons at home, have been the pioneers in sanitary measures, and this awakening must be indeed a source of great gratification to them, as it is to myself, who have at times felt much disheartened and have occasionally been inclined to think that efforts in the cause of sanitation were fruitless and in vain. This seems, however, to have magically changed, and I look forward to our next International Congress with the feeling that India will take a prominent share in its proceedings. No country in the world presents such an array of formidable and preventible diseases to be battled against as India. These diseases, however, need to be studied; and, to my mind, it is on the scientific spirit and enthusiasm fostered and kindled in the young men of India who attend the future meetings of the Congress that we must rely for the investigation and handling of these diseases; and in time, perhaps, when the East has learnt much from the West in the application of sanitary science, the East may teach some new things to the West. The fact that the Queen-Empress has taken such an interest in the Congress and in its Indian delegates will have an immense influence on the Indian people. That the Empress whom they look up to with so much reverence should be interested in their health, is sufficient for them also to take an interest in the matter. I may add, in conclusion, that I should not have been present here to-day as a delegate had not the Prince of Wales been President of the Congress. This fact alone helped to turn the scale as to whether a delegate should be sent or not from Calcutta. (Cheers.)

An agreement has just been made by the Government with the Chinese Minister which, although it looks very innocent, is, says the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, nevertheless of considerable importance, and is sure to lead to agitation among the people of Hong Kong, Chinese as well as British. For the first time in the history of the colony the British Government agrees to accept and recognise a Chinese Consul there. The appointment, however, is to be provisional for one year. Strange as it may seem, the Chinese have not the right to appoint Consuls to our ports, as they did not provide for this when the first treaties were made. In 1870 they had found out their mistake, and sought to make a new convention in which the right to appoint Consuls was (inter alia) recognised. The convention was refused ratification by Lord Clarendon on account of the opposition of the British merchants in China, and at that time the objection to the appointment of a Chinese Consul in Hong Kong (there was no real opposition to the appointment of these officers elsewhere in the British dominions) was officially declared to be that he would in reality be a spy on the Chinese merchants residing in the colony, of whom there are very many, and that his main duty would be "to report to the mandarins of the adjoining provinces the amount that can be extorted from them by the nefarious means which, experience shows us, these provincial despots know but too well how to use." It seems that Chinese merchants in Hong Kong usually came from the adjoining province, where their families still remain, and it is through the latter that pressure is said to be put on the residents in the colony. However this may be, the order has gone out from the Colonial Office that a Chinese consul is to be received for a year at least. It is safe to predict that during the year a good deal will be heard on this subject from the Hong Kong community.

Sir Charles Crosthwaite's resignation of his seat on the Viceroy's Council, says the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, does not, as has been generally supposed, involve the termination of his official career in India. I learn that the six months' leave of absence, which is all that is allowed to a member of Council, having expired without his complete restoration to health, Sir Charles decided to apply for another six months' leave, at the same time resigning his membership of the Council. Accordingly he will return to India in January next, and the expectation in official circles is that he will for a time be placed at the head of the Public Works Department, and that soon afterwards he will succeed Sir A. Colvin as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces. Sir C. Crosthwaite's work during the four years succeeding the annexation of Upper Burma, when he stuck unflinchingly to his post in spite of an unhealthy climate and duties of a most arduous and worrying description, is recognised in official quarters at home and in India as giving him a special claim on the Government of India. His work in Upper Burma is acknowledged to be one of the best and most successful pieces of administrative work done in India since the pacification of the Punjab by Henry and John Lawrence. Hence the Lieutenant-Governorship which is in immediate store for him.

Very opposite views are entertained (says the Daily News of Aug. 19, in its commercial article) as to the relative merits of Four per Cent. and Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Rupee Paper. The Four-and-a-Half per Cents. used to be a freely marketable stock, but times have changed, and the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. are quoted nearly a point or two lower than those which bear an inferior rate of interest. The reason, of course, is that the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. are under notice of redemption at par in 1893; and the par means 100 rs., whereas the equivalent of the present sterling price in rupees would be 106. According to some opinions, therefore, it is better to sell Four-and-a-Half per Cents. even yet than to wait until they are redeemed at 100 rs. per cent. On the other hand, it is held that the Indian Government will soon, if it consults its own interests, offer to the holders of Four-and-a-Half per Cents. the option once more of converting into Four per Cent. Rupee Paper. This option was extended to them some months ago, but was withdrawn after a time. Were that option renewed, the prices of the two stocks would come together once more. Arbitrageurs believe that a profit can be got by selling the Four per Cents. and buying the Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Rupee Paper. They point out that the Four per Cents. are no more safe from redemption at par than are the Four-and-a-Half per Cents.; because Four per Cent. Rupee Paper is quoted in India at 107½. This is still a higher premium than that which tempted Mr. Goschen to effect the redemption and conversion of British Three per Cents. The arbitrageurs referred to care little whether Rupee Paper rises or falls; but, inasmuch as Four per Cents. are redeemable at three months' notice (as anyone may see who takes the trouble to read the back of a bond), and the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. are safe from redemption for two years, they contend that one stock is in no better position than the other; that both may fall, but that there is room for a greater fall in the Four per Cents., or a greater rise in the others, supposing both go up. The position is interesting, and we have to see whether our Indian financiers will be able to make the most of it.

Dam Rong, brother of the King of Siam, arrived at Brindisi on Friday from Port Said, on board the P. and O. steamship Arcadia, and proceeded to Geneva, en route for Paris, London, and St. Petersburg.

THE POLITICAL DEPARTMENT OF THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT.

THE London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald furnishes to his paper some interesting notes on the personnel of the Indian Political Department. He writes:—

The diplomatic service of the Indian Government, which is officially known as the Political Department, and its members as "politicals," will lose several of its most prominent members by retirement during the next few months. Sir Henry Prendergast, who is best known to the outside world as the commander-in-chief of the army which annexed Upper Burma a few years ago, but who has filled some very important posts in the political service, retires almost immediately. On his return from Burma in 1886, he was, for the first time in a long career in India, set down to diplomatic work as resident in Travancore; soon afterwards he was transferred to the much more important Court of Mysore, thence to Baroda, and finally, on the death of Sir Oliver St. John, he was sent to be Governor-General's Agent (in other words, Indian Ambassador) to Beloochistan. Sir Henry retires with as varied service as almost any man in India. As a young soldier he served through the Mutiny campaign in Malwa, and was an officer of the force with which Sir Hugh Rose did such marvellous work in Central India; he was with Sir Robert Napier in the Abyssinian campaign, and commanded the sappers in the Indian expedition to Malta in 1878; in and out with military work, he served the Public Works Department, was Secretary for War to the Madras Government, and seems to have had a knack of turning his hand to anything, so that it was not surprising to find him, after conquering Burma, turned in a wholly new direction. Colonel Powlett, the Resident in Western Rajpootana, is also about to retire, after about thirty-five years' service, more than twenty of which have been spent at native Courts, especially in Rajpootana.

Two more Indian diplomatic retirements are of special interest. These are Colonel Ross, Resident in the Persian Gulf, and nominally Consul-General under the home Foreign Office for Fars, Bushire, Mohammerah, and other Persian Gulf Ports; and Colonel Tweedie, Political Agent for Turkish Arabia under the India Office, and Consul-General at Bagdad under the Foreign Office. Both are members of the Indian Political Service, Colonel Ross having served for about thirty years in various posts in Arabia and Persia, and Colonel Tweedie for almost as long in various native States. Persia and the parts of the Ottoman Empire adjacent to it for many years formed a sort of Tom Tiddler's ground between the Foreign and India Office jurisdictions, and disputes respecting the officers to be appointed and the authorities to appoint them were constant. The Foreign Office said that Persia and Turkey were both foreign countries, and the Ambassadors and Consuls were therefore under that Department as absolutely as in France or Brazil. The India Office argued that, while technically this was the case, India was in truth alone concerned with the relations with Persia and Turkish Arabia. It was India had to fight and pay for the Persian war; and Indian officials knew the countries, the languages, the questions at issue, and those likely to be raised. At length the question was settled in this way:—The Consular officers in Persia were to be nominated by the Indian Government, and were to be Indian officials, but their appointments were to be formally made by the Foreign Office. The same rules applied to Bagdad and Bussorah within the Ottoman dominions. In all these cases, however, the Indian Government was to pay the full cost of the consulate whatever it might be; and in the case of Jeddah, on account of the Indian pilgrim traffic to Mecca, while the Consul was to be an imperial officer, half the cost was to be borne by the Indian Government. In regard to the Legation at Teheran, India was to contribute 10,000*l.* a year to the cost, the Imperial Government paying the remainder, while India got in return the right to have a voice in the appointment of the Minister, and the nomination of the Oriental and Military Secretary. Incidentally, I may mention that it is well known in official circles that the Calcutta Government was for a time inclined to kick against Sir Henry Wolf's appointment. In practice, very little difficulty arises now, the Indian Government appoints the Consuls-General and Consuls without question, and calls many of them by mere high-sounding titles, such as Resident, Agent, or the like, while the Minister is appointed by the Foreign Office, and since the time of Sir Henry Rawlinson has had no previous official connection with India. Mr. Alison, who succeeded Sir Henry Rawlinson, was the far-famed Voltairean secretary (as he has been called) to Lord Stratford de Redcliffe at Constantinople; while the two Taylor Thomsons (William and Ronald) were successively Oriental Secretaries at Teheran. Nevertheless, there are high officials in India who are persuaded that nothing will go right in Persia till her Majesty's minister at Teheran is an Indian official whose days and nights have been passed in studying and dealing with north-western frontier questions. But, needless to say, this is not the Foreign Office view.

The Indian Staff Corps.—A correspondent, "J. S. C. M.," writes to the Morning Post:—"As the vicissitudes and prospects of the officers of the Staff Corps have lately been occupying some little public attention, I venture to ask your indulgence for a few remarks apropos of the paragraph in the Service Notes in your issue of the 20th inst., to the effect that "The Madras Cavalry Regiment to be disbanded is the 4th (P.W.O.) Madras Cavalry, and not the 2nd Madras Lancers." The meaning of this will be to the officers of the disbanded regiment that eight officers—ranging from eight to eighteen years' service—will have their prospects suddenly destroyed, as far as serving in the Cavalry Branch of the Service goes, and will be transferred to other—and probably infantry—regiments, and have to provide themselves with new uniforms at an average cost of, say 100l. If this were a solitary case of disbandment it would perhaps not call for comment; but disbandments and fanciful reorganisations have been so frequent in recent years, to say nothing of changes of uniform, that the Staff Corps officer can never know if his particular regiment will be in existence sufficiently long for him ever to hope to command it or even wear off the freshness of expensive uniforms he has to keep up for special occasions. In the case of the Madras Cavalry, a body which has a continuous record for over 100 years of excellent service, both in its early history and in recent years in Afghanistan, Suakin, and Burma, there are now only four regiments—the 4th Cavalry has the Prince of Wales as its honorary colonel, as it performed the escort duties to his Royal Highness when he visited the Madras Presidency in 1876. It has a special uniform, &c., of its own; when it is disbanded its unfortunate officers will have to throw it away and buy a new one. It is another warning to candidates for the Staff Corps.

The Working of the Inventions and Designs Act.—A report on the working of the office of the Secretary under the Invention and Designs Act, 1888, during last year, states that the total number of applications received was 319, as against 336 in the previous year, of which ninety-six were referred to experts, against 218 in 1889, the remainder being dealt with under the advice of the officer appointed under the Act. Permission to file specifications was accorded in the case of 176 applications and refused in the case of thirty-seven, while 106 applications remained pending at the close of the year. Many of the latter were filed under Section 25 of the Act, after an application for a patent had been made in England and awaited the completion of the patent there. The Government of India, however, have ruled that the sealing of the English patent should not, save in exceptional cases, be in future awaited. Delay is not infrequently caused by the failure of the applicants to comply with the requirements of the law in framing their applications for leave to file a specification, and the correspondence which is entailed thereby. Out of 192 specifications of inventions which were filed, eighteen were of inventions connected with railways and tram-cars, sixteen dealt with processes for the treatment of fibres and cotton in various stages of their conversion into textile fabrics, and twelve were concerned with the manipulation of mineral ores. There were seven inventions dealing with the various stages of tea manufacture, five relating to the preparation of indigo, and six intended to facilitate and improve methods of irrigation, but only three inventions dealt with agricultural implements; eight inventors of punkah machines were granted exclusive privilege during the year. The public made more use of the provisions of the Act for the registration of designs in 1890 than in the previous year. Forty-nine designs, the majority of which were patterns of textile fabrics, were presented for registration, of which forty-four were registered. The fees collected amounted to 10,406-10-0 rs., of which 676-10-0 rs. were paid for the inspection of registers and for copies of specifications and drawings.

REORGANISATION OF THE FOREST SERVICE.

THE Times of India of August 7 says:—"The scheme for the reorganisation of the Indian Forest Service, which in one form or another has been under discussion since June, 1888, has at length gone through all the necessary stages of consideration and sanction, and the Departmental Resolution on the subject was issued yesterday. The organisation of 1882 provided, so far as the superior staff were concerned, no margin either for the absence of officers on leave or for the practical training in India of the officers coming out from England. Three years ago the Local Governments and Administrations were addressed on the subject, and proposals for supplying the recognised deficiency on the numerical strength of the service (chiefly by providing for the "gradual development of indigenous agency") were submitted to the Secretary of State in the October of last year, sanction being duly received some months later. Under this new scheme the controlling staff will be divided into two sections—the Upper, which is to include conservators and deputy and assistant conservators, and the Lower, composed of extra-assistant conservators, including, of course, the existing class of sub-assistant conservators. On the upper controlling staff there will be for the present 193 officers (exclusive of those in foreign service), and the staff will be divided into an Imperial and a provincial branch; and on the lower 86 officers. The Imperial branch of the upper staff will be recruited solely by officers appointed under covenant with the Secretary of State; and the provincial branch by officers holding the higher standard certificate in forestry of the Dehra Dun Forest School or of the Poona College of Science, or who have "done good service of not less than five years as extra-assistant conservators in either of the two upper grades of the lower controlling staff." At the same time the pay of officers of the provincial branch promoted into the upper controlling staff will range at 50 rs. intervals from 450 rs. per mensem, fourth grade, to 600 rs. per mensem, first grade. In the Bombay Presidency the appointments on the upper controlling staff will number thirty-one—namely, one 1st grade conservator at 1,600 rs. per mensem, and one 3rd grade at 1,100 rs.; three 1st grade deputy conservators at 900 rs., four 2nd grade at 800 rs., eight 3rd grade at 650 rs., and seven 4th grade at 550 rs.; four 1st grade assistant conservators at 450 rs., and three 2nd grade at 350 rs.; the total monthly cost of the establishment (including 400 rs. for working-plan allowances) being 20,900 rs. The lower staff appointments will number nineteen—namely, four 1st grade extra-assistant conservators at 350 rs., four 2nd grade at 300 rs., six 3rd grade at 250 rs., and five 4th grade at 200 rs.; the total monthly pay being 5,100 rs. Specially-appointed working-plans officers of all grades on the upper and lower controlling staff will draw a local allowance at the rate of 20 per cent. of their pay, subject to a maximum of 100 rs. per mensem; while officers of the lower controlling staff placed in charge of forest divisions will, up to a limit of two such officers in the Bombay Presidency, be permitted to receive under orders of the Local Government a local allowance of 50 rs. per mensem. The Governor-General in Council further and finally directs that the officers of the upper controlling staff, including the untrained and uncovenanted officers who have been unconditionally appointed thereto in past years, shall be designated as "The Indian Forest Service," and that the officers of the lower controlling and executive staff, including foresters who hold a forest school certificate, shall be designated as the forest service of the province in which they serve—the "Bombay Forest Service," "Punjab Forest Service," and so on; while foresters who hold no certificates and all guards shall be called the "Subordinate Forest Service" of the province in which they serve. The reorganisation of the forest service of the other presidencies and provinces does not materially differ from the Bombay scheme, except, of course, in point of the numbers concerned, and in certain matters of allowances. With regard to the appointment of sub-assistant conservators, the rules have been modified and rearranged in order to secure an even and just flow of promotion to all deserving officers who have obtained at the Dehra Dun Forest School the certificate of forestry by the higher standard, eligible rangers being sectionised into (a) those who have taken the certificate with honours and have subsequently performed two years' good service; (b) who have taken it without honours, but have afterwards performed five years' good service; and (c) those who were members of the forest department on December 1, 1881, and though they have not obtained the certificate, have done "specially good and faithful service," who have received a good general education, and possess a sufficient knowledge of English.

Loans	81,67,794	Decrease	11,13,931
Accounts of Credits	55,29,375	Decrease	2,41,283
Mercantile Bills	1,80,80,187	Decrease	11,82,035
Cash at Head Office	4,10,19,512	Increase	3,58,201
Do. at Branches	2,54,09,858	Decrease	78,06,977

Analysing the above figures, it will be seen that the ordinary trade demand for money on this Bank had decreased by 54½ lacs, made up as follows:—By an increase of over 28½ lacs in "other deposits" and nearly 1 lac in "post bills," coupled with a decrease of 11½ lacs in "loans" over 2½ lacs in "accounts of credit," and nearly 11½ lacs in "mercantile bills." The Treasury balance stands diminished by over 28 lacs at head office, and by nearly 89½ lacs at branches. The Bank's investments were increased by nearly 7½ lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 3½ lacs in cash at head office, while there is a decrease of over 78 lacs at the branches, making the exact total 6.64,29,370 rs., equal to 68 per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 69.4 per cent. last week.

TEA.—On July 30 12,500 chests were sold at auction. Finest Darjeelings were keenly competed for, while good medium teas from this district were neglected. Strong broken Pekoes were rather dearer. Common sorts were in better demand, and broken showed occasionally a slight rise. All other grades unchanged.

JUTE.—The market is quiet but very firm; some sales have been made at 25 rs. for good 1st marks and 24 rs. to 24 rs. 8 a. for "equals," but balers now want 25 rs. 8 a. to 26 rs. for the former and 25 rs. for the latter. C.D.M. and Co. quality quoted 24 rs., and Daisee 22 rs.

GUNNIES.—The tone of the market has been quieter, but prices show no material alteration. Speculators took some further lines, chiefly of E's and C's, for next year, otherwise the country trade is slack. Burma and the Straits took some small lines of E's and C's for early. There are rumours of further business in corn-sacks for the Colonies, but particulars have not transpired. The Cape has been buying to a small extent for early. For U. K. and Western markets, no business is reported.

HESSIANS remain firm. Wheat bags are still in request for 'Frisko, and further business has been done for delivery up to April next year. New York has taken small quantities of 40" cloth for early, and sales are reported of 8-40" for January-May next year at 6-8 rs.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—A fairly good week has again to be recorded. Business has been more general and has not, as for some time past, been confined to one description of stock. The tone of the market is decidedly firm, and business looks very healthy. In jute mill scrip scarcely such a large business has been done as during the previous week, and it has been confined principally to Budge-Budge, Fort Gloster, and Howrah. Press shares have continued in fair request, and have come in for a good measure of support. Calcutta Hydraulics have gone up 3 rs., and transactions have been reported in Canals and Chitapore Hydraulics, which are very firm. Generally the market for press shares is strong, and prices incline upwards. In cotton, both Bowreahs and Gooserys have been dealt in, the former at a slightly higher price; but there is no life in these stocks, and they are difficult to move. In miscellaneous stocks, old favourites such as Landings and Shippings, Calcutta Steam, Titaghur Papers and Tarkessur Railways continue to maintain a strong position and command full rates. They are getting to be so absorbed by investors that they are difficult to find when wanted. With the exception of Sonapets there has been scarcely anything done in Gold Scrip, but the tone of the market is decidedly better. A few transactions have been reported in tea shares, but nothing of importance.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, August 6.

Excessive rain, following the tardy setting in of the monsoon, has flooded some of the up-country districts, causing considerable loss of life and damage to property; but the agricultural outlook is now not unfavourable upon the whole. A moderate quantity of cotton has been taken by local spinners from Godown, but exporters have been very little in the market. Weather and crop reports from some of the principal cotton-growing districts are satisfactory, but from others they are still unfavourable. Wheat has been in but small request for export, but a moderate business has been done in seeds at somewhat higher rates. In sympathy with silver, the course of exchange has lately been downwards, and rates close at a decline of 1-8d. in Bank Bills and 3-32d. in Private Paper from last quotations. Government Paper is 1-16 higher in Four per Cents. Freight rates are firm, with more inquiry for tonnage at somewhat higher rates. The import market is unchanged, ready demand being slack, and not much forward business passing at present.

MONEY.—The generally expected action of the directors of the Presidency Bank in reducing their minimum rate to the exceedingly low level of 2 per cent. on July 30, in presence of their rapidly-increasing balance and in view of continued abundance of money in the near future, had not much effect on the items of loans and bills discounted, the return issued at the beginning of the week having disclosed only slight increase of ½ of a lac in the former, while the latter still showed some falling off, though much less than had been noticeable in the two previous returns. Private deposits, however, had been withdrawn to the extent of some 19 lacs, required at the close of the month for a special purpose, and the cash balance showed a decrease of 20½ lacs; the other noticeable items in the Bank's statement being an increase of 4½ lacs in Government deposits, more than counterbalanced, however, by a further sum of 4½ lacs put into Government Securities. The Bank's minimum remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been no change in the state of the market for grey goods, and rates are quoted the same as before for all descriptions. The demand is very languid, and the balance of stock is becoming larger week by week. Holders are willing to sell very freely at or about the current rates, but they find no buyers of any importance. Bleached, dyed, Turkey red, and printed goods are quite unchanged in position and value. For local goods the demand in the bazaar is very poor and the feeling is dull; but one of the Bombay mills has sold about 4,000 bales during the week, of which some 1,500 bales are ready and about 2,500 in preparation. The week's clearances are estimated at 2,100 packages of imported goods and 4,500 bales of local.

YARNS.—Imported twist continues to be in restricted demand; but the small business which has transpired has been at about previous rates, and in a quiet market. Sales of local spinnings at Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Japan for the fortnight ending Aug. 3 were 9,500 bales, with a downward tendency in rates in a dull market, and with exchange on Bombay 22½ rs. China buyers, in presence of these advices, have been very slow, but some purchasers for Calcutta have been made of No. 21s. at fully current rates. About 1,800 bales have changed hands during the week, and the market closes with some inquiry for the interior, but no demand for China.

METALS.—Copper has declined 4 as. to 8 as. per cwt., only a small business having been transacted, however, in a quiet market. Yellow metal, on the other hand, has been firm, and purchases have been made to a moderate extent on the bases of previous rates. Iron has been quiet and unchanged, little having been done in any description.

COAL.—Sales have been made since last mail of Powell's Dufferin Cardiff for September-October shipment, at 15½ rs. per ton; and of Davison's West Hartley, in the same position, at 14 rs. per ton. Sellers' closing rates for October-November shipment, of Powell's and Davison's are 16 rs. and 15 rs. respectively.

Exports.—COTTON.—This market remained quiet to the close of last week with not much doing for local spinners' account and less for export, but previous prices were maintained. During the week under notice the mills have been more in the market, but only a moderate business has transpired in the aggregate, while the inquiry from shippers has been still more restricted, nothing whatever having been done on their account.

WHEAT.—In the earlier part of the week under review a moderate business was done for export in this staple, and subsequently the tone of the market became firm, while prices advanced half to one anna per cwt. all round. This feeling was not sustained, however, and transactions from day to day have been upon a small scale, while the market has been quiet or at most steady.

SEEDS also became firm at the close of last week, and both linseed and rapeseed of all kinds were half to an anna per cwt. higher, a further advance of one anna having been established in a steady market. The feeling has since become quiet, with a moderate business passing, but without further change in rates.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.
I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.
 The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.
II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.
 The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 112. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.
III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.
 The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Aug. 11; Madras, Aug. 12; Bombay, Aug. 14.

The Viceroy's health had greatly improved. He was going out for a few days at the end of the week to Lord Beresford's house at Mashobra.

It is quite settled, the Times of India says, that the vacancy in the Viceroy's Council caused by Sir Charles Crosthwaite's resignation is to go to a Bombay civilian. The selection is pretty sure to fall on Sir C. B. Pritchard. We reprint a note from the Pioneer on the present composition of the Viceroy's Council in another column.

In the Gazette of India of Aug. 8 a notification is published in substitution for one which appeared on Feb. 16, in which Colonel Pemberton was appointed to officiate for Sir Charles Crosthwaite. In the notification of the 8th, Colonel Pemberton is appointed as a temporary Member of Council until a successor to Sir Charles Crosthwaite shall arrive.

At the next Supreme Legislative Council meeting the Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit Bill was to be introduced, the object being to settle certain property for the maintenance of the Baronetcy. Another Bill to be introduced will bring the Burma Municipal Act of 1884 into line with the shore system of the drainage recently established in Rangoon at great expense.

Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick will not take leave for home till October. Mr. T. G. Chichele-Plowden, Commissioner of the Berars, will officiate in Hyderabad during his absence.

A Zanzibar telegram of Aug. 31 says:—Consul Smith and Dr. Charlesworth have proceeded in the Sultan's steamer Nyanza to Bombay, as witnesses in the recent murder case to be tried at the September session at Bombay.

Seven thousand rupees have been subscribed in Lucknow towards the Quinton Memorial Fund. The Oude Talookdars' Association gave 1,100 rs.

The Bombay Catholic Examiner learns that his Grace the Archbishop of Goa has written to Dr. Beider Linden, S.J., Bishop of Poona, intimating to him that "his Majesty the King of Portugal has nominated the Very Rev. H. Jurgens, S.J., Superior of the Bombay Mission, to the vacant See of Bombay. The King's nomination is, of course, subject to the confirmation of his Holiness the Pope, and no information has, it is understood, as yet reached the ecclesiastical authorities of the archdiocese respecting the approval of the Holy See."

In connection with the conversion into promissory notes of the Indian Four per Cent. loan of 1842-43, it is announced that stock notes will be received only up to Jan. 31, 1892.

A committee, consisting of Colonel Sanderson, Judge-Advocate-General, Colonel Young, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and Mr. Wigley, Legislative Department, was sitting when the mail left and revising Major Temple's Code of Cantonment Rules, which they are likely to finish at the end of September. They will then be circulated to the Local Governments, and probably be brought before the Council in the cold weather.

An adventurous subaltern of a British regiment, who was on leave in Cashmere and who failed to rejoin his regiment, has caused some anxiety to the military authorities by his continued absence from duty. News has been received that he has reached Yarkand, where he met Captain Young-husband. The reasons which induced him to make this journey have not yet transpired, an Allahabad telegram says.

The British garrison in Sikkim was raised from one company to two some time ago. It is now under consideration whether it will be advisable to withdraw altogether a station wing of a British regiment on the Tibetan frontier. The question is purely one of expediency.

Mark 1 of the Magazine rifle has proved no more an experimental success in India than in England. Of 16,000 sent out more than one-third have failed in some particulars. The remaining 9,000 are to be sent to England. Mark 2 is an excellent weapon, and will be the arm eventually served out in India.

A Simla telegram of Aug. 7 says:—Heavy rain continues. Two breaks have occurred on the tonga road between Simla and Kalka, and the mails are six hours late. Heavy slips have also occurred in the station on the main road round Jakko, and the road to Mashobra is completely blocked. The damage done generally to houses is not yet estimated, but it is reported to be very heavy.

According to the Times of India, the Ameer is still anxious that a British Mission should visit Cabul, and such an enterprise is at least a possibility.

An alarming outbreak of typhoid is reported from Quetta. Two young medical officers, Drs. Walsh and Woods, and one lady resident, Mrs. MacGowan, the wife of the manager of the brewery, have succumbed, while several soldiers and non-commissioned officers have sickened. To make matters worse, cholera has broken out at Nari Gorge, fifteen fatal cases being reported.

The Hunza frontier is now reported quiet, the tribesmen having withdrawn to the valley.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times writes on Aug. 30:—According to the Russian Press, the Committee of the Great Fair at Nijni Novgorod has resolved to request the Minister of Finance to come to a speedy solution of the question of instituting export bounties on cotton products. It is considered to be urgently necessary to open up new outlets for Russian manufacturing industries abroad after the failure of the attempts to push Russian manufactures to Bulgaria, China, and Persia, with the existing export duty on cotton and the loss of the market at Kiakhta. In Persia Russian manufactured goods are every year yielding ground to those of other countries.

The correspondent of the same paper at Singapore telegraphs on Aug 29:—The Home Government has disallowed the ordinance preventing Sunday work in Hong Kong Harbour. This has pleased the shipowners.

Reports up to Aug. 10 from Wuhu, the correspondent adds, state that active measures are being taken for the punishment of the rioters.

The exports from April to June of the Straits Settlements amounted to 29,000,000 dols., while the imports reached 34,000,000 dols. The exports were 2½ per cent. and the imports 8 per cent. below those of the same period last year.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Aug. 30:—

It is understood that the northern section of the Attock-Marri Railway will be begun forthwith. Probably the projected section of the Zhob Valley line from Pishin to Apozai will be taken in hand shortly.

A meeting of the Simla Committee of the Uncovenanted Service has resolved to agitate for further concessions, inter alia the throwing open of certain appointments which have been hitherto reserved for the Covenanted Service.

A public meeting was held at Madras on Friday for the purpose of considering the Small Cause Court Bill, which is now pending in the Supreme Council. The majority of those present appear to have expressed their strong disapproval of the measure, but some differences of opinion showed themselves, and the meeting eventually adjourned.

A public meeting was held in Calcutta on Friday evening, the Lieutenant-Governor presiding, for the purpose of commemorating the services of two eminent Bengalee gentlemen lately deceased, Raja Rajendra Lall Mitra and Pundit Ishwar Chunder Vidyasagar. A committee was appointed to raise subscriptions for memorials to them.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office for publication:—

From Viceroy, Aug. 28.—Agricultural prospects. Recent reports show there is cause for anxiety in eastern districts of Hyderabad and Ajmere. Parts of the Punjab, Mysore, Bombay, Deccan, and Carnatic in need of more rain. There is no improvement in Upper Burma and Madras; elsewhere prospects fair. Fine weather generally wanted in North-West Provinces and Oude. General tendency of prices stationary or rising.

G U P.

THE following communication has been received by Lady Morland:—Bombay, Aug. 7, 1891.—Madam,—I am desired to communicate the subjoined copy of a letter from Mr. H. W. Barrow, Deputy District Grand Master, Bombay (E.C.), to Mr. J. W. Smith, Grand Master Depute, All Scottish Freemasonry in India, dated 6th inst.:—"I have just received a telegram from Osborne, in which his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, K.G., District Grand Master of Bombay, directs me to express to you the deep sympathy which he feels with his Brethren of the Scotch Constitution in India in the loss they have sustained by the death of their late Grand Master, the lamented Most Worshipful Brother Sir Henry Morland."—I have the honour to be, Madam, your obedient servant, C. D. WISE, Grand Secretary, A.S.F.I.

From Simla the Pioneer correspondent writes on Aug. 5:—To-night there were tableaux and theatricals, followed by a dance, at Barnes' Court, but the foul weather and the dangers of the road, with landslips on every side, kept away almost one-half of Lady Lyall's guests. Those who braved the storm were well rewarded. The story of "Pygmalion and Galatea," as told in the first set of the tableaux, brought to mind all the best points of Gilbert's ever-green play. There were eleven scenes, and Mrs. Lambert read with good effect the lines descriptive of the plot. Miss Lambert made a charmingly beautiful statue, while Miss Beadon as Myrine and Mrs. Kemball as Cynisca made the audience regret that the piece was not being acted in real earnest. The second tableaux revealed the story of Cinderella, Miss Halliday and Mr. Birch singing the descriptive music between each set of four pieces. The grouping, particularly in the ball scenes, was extremely good. Miss Bromhead as Cinderella would have won the heart of any prince. Mrs. O'Donnell, as the Fairy Godmother, could not fail to have her behests obeyed; while the sisters of the heroine, as represented by Miss Johnston and Miss Lyall, show how jealousy can mar the fairest claims to consideration. There followed after the tableaux a most laughable "musical absurdity" called "Crazed," in which a dramatic author, a musical composer, and a maid of all work indulge in mock-heroics to the top of their bent. Miss Elsmie as Sally scored a signal success. The utter absence of self-consciousness, with the perfection of bye-play and a keen sense of the humour of the part, made the rendering of the part admirable throughout. Captain Williams, it is needless to say, gave us a crazed dramatic author of the best type, the rehearsal of the play in which Sally figures as the heroine being the essence of comedy. Mr. Holland as the equally mad composer, with an exaggerated idea of the importance of his masterpiece, was quietly humorous. A topical song, "Just in the midst of the Season," with its local allusions, was very heartily applauded, as, indeed, it deserved to be.

"Captain Swift" is to be the next piece on the Simla stage, and it should certainly prove a successful play, says the Englishman correspondent, for the cast is as powerful as it could possibly be, including, as it does, the best talent in the station. Even a strong professional company would find it hard to beat Colonel Deane, Major Newnham Davis, Captain Williams, and Mr. Holland, supported by Mrs. Little, Mr. Deane, Mrs. Williams, and Miss Way. "A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing," which is to be performed at the Viceregal Lodge in September, and the "Midsummer Night's Dream," to come off at "Peterhoff" in aid of Lady Roberts' Homes in the Hills, are both in full rehearsal, and the latter promises to be quite one of the most brilliant spectacular performances ever witnessed in the queen of hill stations.

The officers of the Bombay Infantry Mess gave an enjoyable Cinderella dance on Aug. 13 at their Mess House in Staveley Road. About 300 guests were present, and the arrangements were so carefully attended to that the dance was an unqualified success. Among those present were her Excellency Lady Harris, Miss Croft, Captain the Hon. St. Ledger Jervis, A.D.C., Major-General and Mrs. Blundell, Lieutenant-General, Mrs., and the Misses Pottinger, Brigadier-General and Mrs. Hogg, Colonel Carrington, Captain Peyton, A.D.C., &c. Colonel and Mrs. Heath received the guests. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with bunting and trophies of the three regiments, the 18th Bombay Light Infantry, and the 13th and 25th Bombay Infantry. The floor was in capital condition, and dancing on it was a pleasure. The billiard-room was turned into a supper room and was magnificently decked with flowers and ferns. Tents were pitched on either side of the building for the accommodation of the guests, and dancing was kept up with vigour.

The Chinese Embassy is still here, writes the Pioneer correspondent from Darjeeling, July 30, and most probably will remain till further orders. The question in dispute is avowedly a very difficult one to settle, as the "Heathen Chinese" pretty generally has a card up his sleeve, and although his manners are undoubtedly "child-like and bland," he is decidedly of a pertinacious nature. Of course the question of a Chinese protectorate to the south of the Himalayas is all bunkum and hounce; in fact, a stalking-horse, but they seem to me very much in earnest in the matter, and very pertinacious withal. The "staying power" of John Chinaman has become proverbial, even in America. Everybody in India knows that Nepal has to send an embassy to Peking at stated periods, and to present a nuzzar both in coin and kind; and this although Nepal is part and parcel of the Indian Empire from a geographical point of view, as well as many others. Here the great majority of the population is of pure Nepalese origin and descent. This reminds me that I have on my writing-table a book, "Sketches from Nepal," by the late Dr. Oldfield, who in 1850 was Residency Surgeon at Khatmandu, the Hon. J. C. Erskine, of the Bengal Civil Service, being then the Resident. The suspicious policy of the Nepalese Government then prevented, as it does still, any British officer from travelling freely throughout the interior of the country, but during his stay in Nepal he (Dr. Oldfield) had very many opportunities of travelling throughout the country. These travels resulted in a most readable book, now not very easily procurable in India. It happened to me to be consulted by two of the refugees who had managed to get safely across the border and into purely British territory, where they, of course, knew their lives were safe, just after the last Nepalese palace revolution. It struck me at the time, and it is thoroughly impressed on me even now, after a good lapse of time, that I had never before seen human beings with such a thoroughly "hunted" look on them as the refugees had; they were thoroughly footsore, and had very evidently taken almost impassable jungle tracks in their flight.

The "hop season" at Bangalore opened with the Gunners' Ball. It was a very big thing, close on 250 people being there. The ball, says the Madras Times correspondent, was given in the Mess-Room, which is very large, and has a floor that will take quite a lot of beating. It was in splendid condition, and was much praised on all sides. The ball-room itself was decorated à la Mikado with Japanese fans and umbrellas, and bunches of flowers in the lattice-work formed by bamboo poles in the windows. A fountain, too, with a grotto looked very well at the end of the ball-room, and was both cool and pretty to look at. Great credit is due to the artistic taste responsible for the mise-en-scene. His Highness the Maharajah and Sir H. Prendergast were among the numerous guests. For supper the billiard-room was pressed into the service. Dancing was kept up merrily till 3 A.M., and the music supplied by the band was very good, and the programme just what it should be. Among those present I noticed his Highness the Maharajah, Sir Harry and Lady Prendergast, Misses Prendergast, Mr., Mrs., and Misses Ricketts, officers 21st Hussars, officers Yorkshire Regiment, officers Q.O. Sappers and Miners, 4th, 8th, and 13th M.I., &c.

The officers of the King's Dragoon Guards, who in another few weeks will be starting for England, will have good reason to look back with pleasure to their last season in this country, says an Indian paper. The pig-sticking that they have had this year round Muttra has been something unparalleled even in that country par excellence for pig. The results shown by the regimental log are worth giving. Jan., 10; Feb., 8; March, 27; April, 62; May, 70; June, 60; July, 71—a total of 308 boar. The largest bag previously recorded at Muttra was when the 13th Hussars disposed of 177; but this again was beaten by the Agra Tent Club, with 254. The present record is likely to remain undisturbed for many years to come, inasmuch as it was so largely helped by the late rains, which made hunting possible through the month of July.

Under date Jan. 17, 1875, the following passage occurs in the Diary of Raja Rajendra Lala Mitra:—"I noticed a curious fact to-day, which had it been known to me before, would have saved me a large sum in insurance premia. I am a year younger than I always thought I was. The date of my horoscope runs thus: 1743-10-5-6-52-30, which I look to mean thirty anupalas, 52 palas, 6 dandas of Saturday the 6th (this is manifestly incorrect: it should be 5th) of Phalguna of the Saka year 1743, the moon's age being the 10th of the wane, which would make me just 53 years old. The right reading of the passage, however, is ten months, five days, six dandas, fifty-two palas and thirty 60th of a pala after the year 1743 of the Saka king, i.e., on the sixth day of the eleventh month of 1744, which would be, according to Prinsep's Table, the 15th of February (Sunday), 1824, so that I shall complete my 52nd year on the 14th of next month. The time of birth would be two hours and twenty-one minutes after sunrise. Now, the sun rises on the 6th of Phalguna at 6:20-2 A.M., and my time by English reckoning would be 8:43-9 A.M. Ordinary Pundits mean that after the lapse of such a year so many months, days, &c., and not according to the English mode of reckoning the year current. According to our mode a boy born to-day would be described thus: 1874-0-16? i.e., 1874 full years, no full month, but sixteen full days and so many hours and minutes. Our astrologers and those who know the principle and rules of making horoscopes are well aware of this; the extent of error committed by this ignorance on the part of the people is enormous. In our courts the reckoning of the age by horoscopes always leads to wrong."

G. Francis Train has had a rival as a record breaker in the person of Mr. C. A. L. Dunn, says a Shanghai paper. Mr. Dunn left Shanghai at midnight of April 10, in the Empress of India for London, and he returned in the Empress of Japan at noon on Saturday, July 18. He stayed thirty days in England, five days in New York and three days in Montreal and Banff. Notwithstanding these stoppages, he made the round trip in 97½ days. He came over the Canadian Pacific line both ways and was provided with sleeping car, all for the sum of 630 dols. Mexican. He had only one complaint to make and that was that he had not time to use up all the meal tickets the Canadian Pacific Railway Company supplied him with. The Empress of Japan left Vancouver on the 1st inst. at 4 P.M. and made the run from Kobe to Woosung in fifty-two hours, the whole voyage occupying fifteen days, twenty hours.

PERSONAL.

THE Bombay Government has issued the following resolution:—His Excellency the Governor in Council, fully appreciating the value of the services rendered by the late Captain Sir Henry Morland, Knight, and the loss sustained by his death, adds his tribute of respect to the memory of a gallant officer and a valuable public servant.

Sir W. Lockhart was to leave Simla on Aug. 14 for Abbottabad.

Colonel Swinton Skinner, on return from furlough this month, will resume the appointment of Deputy Judge Advocate-General at Secunderabad, and Lieutenant-Colonel Prideaux, who has been officiating for him, returns to Poona.

Lieutenant-Colonel Sheppard takes charge of the Sixth Circle at Allahabad.

Colonel Trevor, Agent to the Governor-General in Rajpootana, was to proceed on three months' privilege leave on Aug. 27, Colonel Powlett, Resident at Jodhpore, officiating.

Dr. Bourne is to act as Registrar of the Madras University, and not Mr. Rungachariar, who acts as Professor of Chemistry.

Mr. T. F. J. Johnstone is confirmed as Chief Engineer in Bengal, vice Mr. Martin, retired.

Mr. Woodman, Chief Reporter for Indian Law Reports in the Calcutta High Court, has been granted one year's furlough from Nov. 11.

Mr. E. P. Henderson, Government Advocate in the Punjab, was to proceed on three months' leave to England about the middle of August. Mr. J. A. Sinclair, Junior Government Advocate, will officiate.

Mr. H. A. Acworth, C.S., the Municipal Commissioner of Bombay, has been appointed by the members of the Municipal Corporation to fill the vacancy on the Board of the Victoria Technical Institute, caused by the death of Sir Henry Morland.

On Mr. T. C. Lewis's return from leave, at the end of October, he will have the option of resuming the principalship of the Government College, or taking the inspectorship of schools, Lahore Circle, in order to obtain administrative training for the post of director of Public Instruction, which he will eventually receive.

Mr. M. Finucane, Director of the Department of Land Records and Agriculture, Bengal, is allowed leave for three months, with effect from Aug. 3. Mr. W. Maude, Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue, General, and Statistical Departments, acts for Mr. Finucane in addition to his own duties.

Dr. Frenchman, who was Civil Surgeon at Thayetmyo for the past eight years, and was very popular among all classes, has been transferred to Bassein, to take Surgeon-Major Dalzell's place there, who has been appointed to officiate for Dr. Sinclair, the Inspector-General of Gaols, Burma, gone on two years' furlough.

On Aug. 8 Dr. Cleghorn, the departing Civil Surgeon of Lucknow, was entertained at the Baradari by the nobility and gentry of Lucknow, and was presented with an address which was numerously signed, and was accompanied by a magnificent silver bowl. Dr. Cleghorn replied in a modest and feeling speech, which was loudly applauded.

Mr. O'Callaghan handed over charge of the office of Superintending Engineer to Government of India to Mr. Bell on Tuesday, July 29, and Mr. Du Cane Smyth succeeded Mr. C. Vincent as Under-Secretary to Government of India, Public Works Department (Irrigation Branch), on the same day. Mr. G. H. D. Walker, Under-Secretary in the Public Works Department (general branch), proceeds home on leave, and Mr. R. A. English officiates for him.

At the paper chase at Bangalore on Aug. 3, Major King, of the 21st Hussars, came a nasty cropper. According to the correspondent of the local Spectator, "Everything was going as merry as a marriage bell until just before the check, when Major King's horse galloped into a drain, rolling over his rider. It was seen at once that this was a bad accident, and all the field pulled up while a hurdle was fetched, on which to convey the major to the hospital." The paper adds, "We are, however, glad to hear this (Tuesday) morning that the injuries, although bad, are not of so serious a nature as at first anticipated, though the gallant major has, we regret to say, received a very severe contusion of the spine, but we hope to see him among us again in time for the races."

Colonel W. Hill, M.S.C., after a service of thirty-two years in the Mysore Commission, was to retire on Aug. 15, on which date he would come in for his "off-reckonings." He would sit for the last time as Civil and Sessions Judge of Bangalore on Aug. 14. He obtained his first commission in 1854, and was posted to the ill-fated 18th Regiment, Madras Infantry, which was disbanded in April 1864 for mutinous conduct. Colonel Hill, however, did not serve long in this corps. In 1857, the Indian Mutiny period, he was appointed Quartermaster and Interpreter of the Vellore Recruiting Depot, having previously taken honours in one of the "black classics"—Hindustani. In 1859 he joined the Mysore Commission, and, after serving in various capacities in the Revenue, Police, and Magisterial Departments, was appointed Civil and Sessions Judge of Bangalore, which position he has held for several years with great distinction.

By telegram from Madras, news has just reached the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel of the death of Bishop Caldwell, which took place on Aug. 28. The Right Rev. Robert Caldwell was born on May 7, 1814, and took his B.A. degree at the University of Glasgow in 1837, and his LL.D. twenty years later, while he was D.D. of the University of Durham by diploma in 1874. He went out to Madras in 1838, and on being ordained, in 1841, he was sent to the society's mission station of Idaiyangudi. Some estimate of the character of his labours in that place may be formed from the fact that after thirty-six years, in March 1877, when he was elevated to the episcopate, there were at this station no less than 4,000 baptised Christians. These figures, however, give an inadequate idea of the social and industrial progress of the district under his charge. At the same time as Dr. Sargent, of the C.M.S., he became assistant Bishop to the Bishop of Madras, and was entrusted with the episcopal oversight of the S.P.G. missions in Tinnevely, embracing 618 villages, containing nearly 40,000 adherents, with forty-six clergymen, most of them natives. Increasing years and infirmities led recently to his resignation. He was well known in Europe for his achievements as an Oriental scholar, his chief work in this department being his "Comparative Grammar of the Dravidian Languages." He was also the author of a "History of Tinnevely," "On Reserve," and a "History of the Tinnevely Mission."

The death has been reported from Ireland of General Henry Hamilton, C.B., colonel of the Leinster Regiment, and formerly in command of the 78th Highlanders (now the 2nd battalion of the Seaforth). General Hamilton joined the Army in 1829, when less than seventeen years of age, and was placed on the Retired List as a lieutenant-general in 1879. During the Indian Mutiny he took part in the relief of Lucknow, the occupation and defence of the Alumbagh, and commanded the 78th at the final capture of Lucknow, and also of Bareilly, being mentioned in despatches and receiving the thanks of the Governor-General in Council. The gallant general died at his residence, Grange Erin, Cork, on Aug. 25, in his seventy-ninth year.

Lieutenant W. L. Fair, wing officer in the 5th Madras Infantry Regiment, died on Aug. 25 at Kindat in Burma.

The Rev. E. B. Winter, head of the Delhi S.P.G. Mission, who was lying dangerously ill at Simla, died on Aug. 6. His remains were to be taken into Delhi, where he expressed a wish to be buried. The funeral would take place on Aug. 8.

The Englishman says:—There are many in Calcutta who will learn with deep regret that Surgeon Henry Moore Brabazon, M.D., of the Indian Medical Service, died on Saturday at the General Hospital. The funeral took place on Sunday morning at seven o'clock, and was attended by Major-General Lord Frankfort, and by the Buffs, who furnished the band and firing party. Dr. Brabazon joined the Indian Medical Service in October 1887.

Mr. Abel Joshua Higginbotham, senior partner and founder of the firm of Messrs. Higginbotham and Co., booksellers and publishers, Mount Road, Madras, and sheriff of Madras, 1889 and 1890, died at his residence in Kilpauk on Aug. 7, in the seventy-third year of his age. Though for some time past he has been in somewhat failing health, no one expected his demise, and he was at business on the day of his death. He was highly respected by all classes of the community, and was greatly beloved by the poor, to whom he was most charitable.

The Rangoon Gazette says:—Mr. Howard J. Williams, whose death occurred at his residence, Kokine, on Sunday last, was the younger brother of the late Dr. Clement Williams, assistant surgeon to the 68th D.L.I., for a while Chief Commissioner's agent to the Court of Burma, and author of "Through Burma to Western China." On Dr. Williams's appointment to the agency of the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company in Mandalay, his brother, Mr. H. J. Williams, and his nephew, Mr. L. A. Goss, came out with him (in 1866) and established the firm of H. J. Williams and Co., which had extensive mercantile transactions with the King, Mindoon Min. Mr. Goss entered Government service in 1874. Mr. Williams migrated to Rangoon, having still very heavy claims against the late Burmese Government. He has for many years past led a very retired life in Kokine, improving the property and showing a kindly hospitality to all who found out his cottage in the wood. An almost uninterrupted residence of twenty-five years in Burma made him one of our oldest inhabitants.

His Highness the Maharana Shree Narandevjee of Dharampore died at Dharampore on Aug. 7.

THE PRESS PROSECUTION IN INDIA.

THE JURY DISCHARGED.

CALCUTTA, Aug. 24.—The hearing of the case against the Bangabasi newspaper was continued this morning, when Mr. Jackson resumed his speech for the defence. He continued his analysis of the articles on the same lines as on Saturday, and then turned to the law. He told the jury that they were judges of the law as well as of the facts of the case, and they could not convict unless they were satisfied that the articles were written with the intention of causing violence. He attacked the Age of Consent Act, and condemned the Government for passing it hastily. He was confident, he said, that the jury would acquit his clients. The Chief Justice then summed up very briefly, not occupying more than half an hour. He explained the meaning of the words disaffection and disapprobation in Section 124 (a), and said that it was unnecessary for him to go through the articles again; the jury had them before them with the comments of counsel on both sides. If they were satisfied that the articles were published with intent to create in the minds of their readers such a disposition towards the Government as was incompatible with obedience to its lawful authority they must convict the accused, otherwise they must acquit them. He warned the jury to put away from their minds all that had been said about the policy of the Government in instituting the prosecution and in passing the Age of Consent Act, &c. The jury retired at four o'clock, and returned after fifty-five minutes. The foreman said they were unable to agree upon a verdict, seven taking one view and two being opposed to it. There was no chance of their agreeing. Although the Indian law allows the judge to take the verdict of a majority of six to three provided he agrees with the majority, the Chief Justice did not ask the opinion of the majority, but said he would only accept an unanimous verdict, and directed the jury to be discharged. The crowd of natives in the body of the court received this order with great applause, evidently mistaking it for an acquittal. The Chief Justice asked Mr. Pugh what he proposed to do. Mr. Pugh replied that he wished to consult his colleagues, and the Chief Justice then ordered the case to be made a remanet to the next sessions, which begin on Nov. 30. The accused were enlarged on the same bail as before. Great disappointment is expressed at this inconclusive result. It has not transpired what was the opinion of the majority of the jury.

CALCUTTA, Aug. 26.—The general opinion is expressed that the result of the Bangabasi case is unsatisfactory to the Government, to the accused, and to the public. It may be doubted, however, whether the trial has been altogether fruitless. There has been a marked improvement in the tone of the vernacular Press during the last fortnight. The Hindoo Patriot, the leading native newspaper in Bengal, states that the Native Press Association, which is in process of formation, is not meant, as originally reported, for purposes of defence, but to promote harmony and good feeling between the different classes of the community, to ensure moderation in the discussion of public questions, and to impress upon the conductors of newspapers the absolute necessity of verifying the statements before giving publicity to them. With regard to the Bangabasi case, it is now an open secret that seven out of the nine jurors were for conviction.

CALCUTTA, Aug. 30.—The course taken by the Chief Justice in discharging the jury in the Bangabasi case without inquiring what was the verdict of the majority seems likely to give rise to some discussion. Many authorities maintain that Section 305 of the Criminal Procedure Code makes it obligatory on a judge, where the jury are not unanimous, but as many as six of them are of one opinion, to inquire what that opinion is, and, if he agrees with it, to pass judgment accordingly. Others, however, assert that on its true construction, Section 305 leaves the matter optional to the judge, and it is certain that there are precedents supporting this view. It is not yet known whether the Government intends to proceed to a new trial. Probably the question will not be decided for some time. As such a trial could not take place for three months, possibly the Government may rest content with the fact that Sir William Petheram's exposition of the law of seditious libel distinctly supported the contention of the counsel for the Crown. The local Press, both European and Native, have said little about the trial, as the case is still sub judice, and the general tone of such remarks as have been made has been very moderate.

Writing to the St. James's Gazette on the result of the Bangabasi action, "An Old Anglo-Indian" says:—

Before the commencement of the trial of the Bangabasi in Calcutta for seditious libel, I pointed out the very risky nature of the enterprise to which the Government of India had committed itself. The result has entirely justified my fears. It has now been proved, by an experience much to be regretted, that Sir Alexander Arbuthnot and the law officers of the Crown in Calcutta in 1878 were quite right in their belief that the sections of the Penal Code dealing with seditious libel are practically unworkable, and that for the sake not only of the Government, but also of the Vernacular Press itself and of the cause of law and order, some amendment of the law is needed. Whether that amendment ought to take the form it took in 1878, in the Vernacular Press Act, is of course quite another question.

Those who remember the unfortunate results that flowed from the abortive issue of the State trial of the late Gaikwar Mulhar Rao will be able to appreciate the disastrous nature of the rebuff now administered to the Government. Then, as now, this result was brought about by the disagreement of the members of the tribunal before whom the case was tried. Then there was open disagreement between the native members on the one side, and the European on the other. Now a similar form of disagreement is more than suspected; and this suspicion is rendered all the more serious, all the more regrettable, by the fact—so severely commented on by the European counsel for the defence—that only one jurymen out of nine was a native, and by the further fact that it is on record that the natives in court loudly applauded the judgment when given. I will take these two points separately.

Mr. Jackson, when addressing the jury for the defence, used very strong language in regard to the composition of the jury as to nationality. He, a leading member of the English Bar in India, characterised the conduct of the Government in this respect as "weak, mean, and contemptible." In the peculiar circumstances of India it would in any case be a most regrettable thing that such language should be used by such a man about the action of the Supreme Government in a criminal prosecution of natives of the country. But it is ten thousand times worse if—as seems to me to be the case—the language was to some extent justified. For it seems perfectly clear that, whether the Government was to blame entirely or not, the jury in such a case ought to have consisted mainly, if not entirely, of natives. Instead of this, in a jury of nine, eight were Europeans. Now, it must be remembered that, in criminal prosecutions of Europeans tried under the Ilbert Act, they have the right to demand that a majority of the jury that tries them shall be European British subjects. Not only so, but this right is regarded as of such transcendent importance that it was the one condition on which the Ilbert Bill was finally accepted by the English in India, and on the strength of which the tremendous agitation against that Bill was abandoned as having attained its purpose. Then, if one considers the particular circumstances of this prosecution, they seem to point strongly in the direction of a similar right. For the alleged crime was that of seditious libel written by natives in the vernacular, and the real point to be decided was whether the effect of these native writings on the minds of natives would be to incite them to rebel against an alien Government. Surely, if this question is to be submitted to a jury at all, and if the submission is not to be a farce and a pretence unworthy of the British name, the jury ought to include a fair proportion of natives.

The applause in court when the Lord Chief Justice refused to receive any other than a unanimous verdict is explained in the telegrams of the Times correspondent to have been because the natives mistook the decision for one of complete acquittal of the accused. If this were so, it only serves to show how strongly native feeling in Calcutta is enlisted on the side of the accused as against the Government. But it seems unnecessary to assume so much; for the abortive result of the trial is hardly less damaging to the Government than an acquittal would have been. And it must surely be admitted that the establishment in Calcutta, just at this moment, of a "National Press Association"—though plausibly explained by some of its leading members as a non-aggressive movement—is, to say the least, highly significant and by no means indicative of any approval of the recent Government policy by even the most loyal section of the Native Press.

Not only the line taken by the counsel for the defence, but also all the comments of the Indian Press, show conclusively (1) that the intemperate language of the Bangabasi was entirely caused by the vehement dislike of its editor and those responsible for its conduct to the provisions of the Age of Consent Act; and (2) that a similar dislike, if expressed in less intemperate language, is very generally felt among a large section of the people of Bengal. The Lord Chief Justice was doubtless right, from the strictly legal point of view, in instructing the jury that they were to attach no weight to anything that had been said about the Age of Consent Act, as that was legally irrelevant. For of course the Bangabasi must not incite the people to rebel on account of that Act, whatever be the character of the Act or the manner of its passing. But now that the trial is over, at least for the present, these points become of considerable importance in forming an opinion as to the wisdom of the general policy of the Government.

The Times of India, writing previous to the conclusion of the trial, says:—It seems a little absurd perhaps to bring the powerful and complex machinery of the law to bear upon a native journal because it charges the Government with being the author of famines, fevers, cholera, and the breakdown of embankments, and the source of forest fires and the scarcity of drinking water. The Bangabasi, it is true, said more than this, but the graver charges are intermixed with so much nonsense that it seems to us doubtful whether a prosecution can be sustained under section 124 of the Penal Code. The section declares that whoever "excites, or attempts to excite, feelings of disaffection of the Government established by law in British India" shall be liable to various heavy penalties. The Bangabasi accused the Government in one article of compassing the ruin of the natives so as to make the English sway a permanent one, and in another of ruling by brute force, sucking the country dry, and seeking to interfere with the religious feelings of the people. How far is language of this sort calculated to excite feelings of disaffection? Every intelligent native knows that charges of this kind are false, and are only made out of some interested motive which is usually not difficult to fathom. The argument on the other side is that the ignorant native does not know this, and that when the village bap reads out choice items of this sort, they sink deep into the minds of the people, and ultimately bear evil fruit in the shape of a riot against constituted authority, or some outbreak of the same sort as that at Benares the other day. We venture to doubt it, and to doubt also the wisdom of the Bangabasi prosecution. The Government, it seems, regarded the offence as one of a "very grave and serious character," and applied for (and obtained) warrants for the immediate arrest of the offenders and for the ransacking of their premises. There is a good deal of the foul froth of the Bangabasi kind in vernacular journalism, and if the Government fail in this prosecution a good deal more of it will be generated, while, on the other hand, a conviction is not likely to put a stop to it. The real sufferers by this prosecution will be the respectable representatives of the Indian Native Press. The Bangabasi will come to be regarded in many quarters as a typical vernacular journal, and the reputation of all will suffer alike. The great bulk of the Native Press, however, is anything but seditious. It expresses its opinion upon matters of government with more or less freedom, no doubt, but it is rarely guilty of such silly nonsense as the Bangabasi is now being prosecuted for printing. We have had one or two cases in this Presidency of "reptile" journalism, but they have happily been rare; and we hear occasionally of envenomed attacks upon local officials for the sake of possible blackmail; but on the whole it would be a mistake to imagine that the spirit of the Bangabasi permeates it to any appreciable extent. The sequel in this case may justify the event, but at present we are inclined to regard the prosecution as a mistake.

The Pioneer says:—The Bangabasi newspaper, now charged with sedition, is a widely-read paper, which stands for the cause of orthodox and conservative Hindooism. It used to be a strong opponent of the Congress when that movement was so much to the fore, and has generally taken a position of antagonism towards the parties of political and social emancipation in Bengal. Such a paper was naturally foremost in opposition to the Age of Consent Bill, and it is probably exasperation at the passing of that measure that has betrayed it since into a violence of language which is charged with falling within the provisions of the Penal Code. The proprietor, editor, and managers of the Bangabasi surrendered on Saturday, and were brought before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, who refused bail.

The trial, which presumably will come off at the ensuing High Court Sessions, will be an interesting one in many respects; and particularly because it promises to test the question of whether we possess in this country a workable law of seditious libel. The best authorities have always maintained that we do not. The section (124 I. P. C.) under which the accused are charged, says that whoever "excites or attempts to excite feelings of disaffection of the Government, established by law in British India, shall be"—liable to various heavy penalties. This is plain enough, but the whole question is what constitutes an attempt to excite disaffection, as distinguished from legitimate expressions of disapproval with the ways and measures of Government? The fact that prosecutions for sedition have been so rarely instituted, in spite of the abundance of material, is the best proof that the Executive knows well that the attempt has to be made over most uncertain ground.

Capital says:—We are not permitted to discuss the justice of the prosecution; but with its policy it is otherwise, and in connection with this point three questions suggest themselves on the very threshold of the inquiry: Is the immediate success of the prosecution reasonably certain? Is the Government prepared to follow it up by setting its heel down promptly and unflinchingly on every similar demonstration which it may call forth? Has the Government any adequate guarantee against being pulled up and compelled incontinently to retrace its steps by a mandate from home? Unless all these questions can be answered in the affirmative, we fear it is making a mistake which will leave a deep and enduring mark on its position in India. Now, we do not think there is one of these questions which any cautious man, with even the most moderate knowledge of affairs, would venture to answer confidently in the affirmative. We have read many utterances in the columns of the native newspapers, vernacular and other, of late years, on which criminal prosecutions might have been based under any or all of the sections of the Penal Code under which the present charge has been laid, with the fullest possible assurance of a verdict, and with the full sympathy and approval of every unbiased Englishman. We doubt whether many Englishmen feel a similar assurance as to the fate of the present prosecution, or will look upon its institution with the same sentiments. We find in the past conduct of the Government no adequate guarantee that it possesses the nerve, or the constancy of purpose to pursue to the bitter end, and at all hazards, such a policy as that on which it is entering. We not only do not believe that the Government can reasonably reckon on non-interference from home, but we regard it as little short of certain that, if not the present Parliament, the next will mark its condemnation of that policy in a manner equally emphatic and humiliating.

THE VICEROY'S COUNCIL.

AT Poona it is quite settled, we (Pioneer) believe, that the vacancy in the Viceroy's Council, caused by Sir Charles Crosthwaite's resignation, is to go to a Bombay civilian. We should doubt this being so much of a certainty: but if it is to be, the selection is pretty sure to fall on Sir C. B. Pritchard. On this side of India the junior member of the Bombay Council is little more than a name. But whatever his abilities it is only too obvious that the accession of Sir C. Pritchard cannot at all make up to the Government what it loses in Sir Charles Crosthwaite. The long and varied experience gathered in many Provinces and many capacities that the latter bore about with him is precisely what the Government of India must require at the present time, when in point of knowledge of the country and administrative experience it is so palpably weak— weaker than it has been within the memory of man. Let a person only think how the Indian Cabinet stands. The finance member is, very rightly, a specialist: the Home member is a civilian whose whole service has been spent in out-of-the-way Madras; the military member is an English soldier, a stranger to the country and to the Indian Army, with whose administration he is charged; the legal member is an English lawyer, whose acquaintance with India, or rather with Simla, is less than six months old. We cannot suppose that ever before has there been a time when the Viceroy's Council collectively could have been absolved of all personal knowledge of Upper India as a whole; of the even working of district administration as brought to its highest pitch of the North-West; of developing administration as exemplified in the Central Provinces; of all the economic and political questions afoot in the Punjab; of the problems and politics of the North-West Frontier; of any experience gathered in Rajpootana or Central India, or the major political appointments as to the traditions and temper and politics of native States; of Burma and its dawning opportunities and difficulties; of foreign policy in the rough as we meet it on the borders of Assam and on the North-East Frontier. There is no reason to question the capacity of the gentlemen who are now at the heads of the different departments of State; but the divorce of practical knowledge from authority in this country and under our system of Government is always objectionable and dangerous; for it must mean the devolution of power upon secretaries and official subordinates who have not the controlling sense of responsibility. It cannot but encourage wire-pulling and the workings of irregular and unseen influences which are always ready to come into activity in a bureaucratic system. The elimination of experience has already been carried to a point at which it becomes difficult for the public to retain the spontaneous respect and confidence that on the whole have been always reposed in the Government of India. We take it, therefore, that though a Bombay member might be an excellent addition to the Viceroy's Council at any other time, the present emphatically calls for a man with the widest range of Indian experience. Has the Service run dry of men of affairs—of Aitchisons and Lyalls and Griffins? We cannot imagine that even a Bombay or a Madras civilian would look upon that as a reasonable distribution of power, which would give each of the minor presidencies a member each, and would leave the rest of India to be represented by the financial member.

"THE FORESTS OF INDIA AND THEIR PRODUCTS."

Savage Club, London, Aug. 21, 1891.

SIR,—I am named so kindly, and so much beyond my humble deserts, in the Scotsman's articles this week on "The Forests of India and their Products" that I venture to take the liberty to make good a serious omission in the recital they give of the history of the organisation of State forestry in British India. The first attempts in this direction were made in the Bombay Presidency, where the Government, so far back as 1807, adopted a scheme of general conservancy; which had, however, owing to popular opposition, to be abandoned in 1822. But we find that subsequent to this date Colonel Gilbert was Conservator of the forests in Canara, and that he was succeeded in this office by Captain Jakes of the Indian Navy. Then in 1840, Dr. Alexander Gibson, superintendent of the Botanical Gardens in Bombay, was deputed to examine and report on the forests in the northern parts of the Presidency; and in 1846 was formally appointed Conservator of Forests for the Presidency, and held the appointment until 1860. A Forest Ranger for Scinde was created in 1847, and the office was successively held by Major Scott, Captain Crawford, Captain Hamilton (of the Indian Navy), Dr. Stocks, and Mr. Dalziel, who in 1860 succeeded "Daddy Gibson" as Conservator of Forests for the Bombay Presidency. But under this, the old régime, forest conservancy was never a success in Western India, and simply because the first object of the Department was, not to conserve the forests, but to obtain timber for the Bombay Dockyard, and fuel for the Indus Flotilla. It was, in fact, in the "benighted" Presidency of Madras that Indian forest conservancy, in the true sense, was originated. The Presidency is rich in forests, from Canara to Cape Comorin, and, in consequence of the ruinous demands on them for the Bombay Dockyard, and a threatened scarcity of teak arising in consequence, the late Mr. A. V. Conolly began an experimental plantation of this wood at Nilambur in Malabar in 1843; and now there is an immense artificial forest of teak in that district, the value of which it is impossible to overestimate. Encouraged by these results, and on the earnest recommendation of Captain (now Major-General) Frederick Cotton, the Madras Government in 1848 appointed Lieutenant (now General and a C.S.I.) Michael, with a special staff, in charge of the celebrated Annamully forests in Coimbatore. The instructions given to Lieutenant Michael were that the conservancy of forest resources was to be his first care, and the acquisition of revenue a secondary one. His success was immediate; and in 1851 the British Association, in alluding to Lieutenant Michael's success, urged the extension of forest conservancy over the whole of India. Lieutenant (by this time Captain) Michael's health breaking down under the exposure to which he was subjected in carrying on his onerous operations, he was succeeded in 1855 by Captain (now General, Douglas Hamilton; and in 1856 the Government of Madras acting on the representations of the British Association, formed a regular Forest Department for the whole Southern Presidency, with Dr. Hugh Cleghorn at its head, and Captain Douglas Hamilton, Lieutenant Biddowe, and Dr. Drew as his assistants.

Dr. Cleghorn developed the work of the new department with such energy that in 1861 the Government of India sought his aid in establishing a system of conservancy in the Punjab and the North-West Provinces, and in the organisation in 1862-64 of an Imperial Forest Department for all India, of which Dr. (now Sir Dietrich) Brandis, who had been serving in Burma from 1856, was the first inspector-general.

The articles in the Scotsman of the 17th and 18th inst. render no more than bare justice to Cleghorn's splendid achievements, but they certainly need to be supplemented, in my opinion, by some account, such as I have endeavoured to afford, of the earlier forest operations in India under Dr. Alexander Gibson in Bombay and General Michael in Madras, not only out of regard for the reputation of these officers, but in the interests of historical truth. Dr. Gibson has long been dead, but General Michael is alive, and although, unfortunately, not a Scotsman, his heart for the twenty-five years I have known him, has always been in the Highlands, and he has his rod and gun with it there, by Deeside, at this moment. As I said in my introduction to the catalogue of the Indian collections at the International Forestry Exhibition, held in Edinburgh in 1884, General Michael is the pioneer of practical forestry, as Cleghorn is the father of scientific forestry in India.

The first person to call effective popular attention to the gums and other minor forest productions of India was a young and very handsome townsman of yours, the late Dr. Aeneas M. Ross, of the Madras Medical Establishment, in a series of articles he wrote for the late Mr. Robert Knight, when the latter first started the Times of India.—I am, &c.,

THE NEW BOLAN RAILWAY PROJECT.

(From the Pioneer.)

THE recent bellicose article in the semi-official Moscow Gazette, promising all sorts of dire calamities to our Indian Empire in consequence of England's infatuated adherence to the Triple Alliance, draws attention once more, says "Baloochee" in the Pioneer, to the subject of our frontier defences and frontier railways.

Our successful resistance to the advance on India, an advance that will assuredly be attempted by the Russians when next we are involved in any dispute with them, depends in a great measure on the efficient working and maintenance of the trans-Indus railways. It is generally admitted that the Herat-Candahar route will be the one along which that advance will be made, and therefore the importance of maintaining efficient railway communication between Quetta and the plains of India is obvious. The experience of the last two years has shown that neither the Bolan railway, never more than a fair weather line, nor the Sind-Pishin line can be depended on to afford open communication between the Pishin plateau and the plains. Portions of the temporary Bolan railway are washed away by the first flood that comes down, and even that part which was supposed to be above the reach of floods was very much damaged, and in places wrecked, by last year's floods. As to the Sind-Pishin line, there are parts of it which can not be made safe at any cost owing to the treacherous nature of the ground over which and through which the railway must pass. Landslips at Nari, Kuchali, Dirgi, and Mud Gorge must always be expected. Moreover, the effects of a very heavy storm, such as wrecked the Bolan line last year, have still to be seen on the Sind-Pishin. There is little doubt that if a rainfall of 5 inches in two hours were to take place along the Sind-Pishin Railway, a great many bridges on that line would be wiped out as completely as were those in the Bolan last year. Picture then the effect of a heavy storm or landslip occurring, just as its carrying capacity was being strained to the uttermost in supplying the sinews of war to our army on the frontier. What disasters might not ensue! What chaos and confusion! That this has occupied the serious attention of Government is shown by the sanction given last autumn to the surveys of the Zhob Valley route and Bolan via Mushkhaf Railway. Compared with the Zhob Valley and Sind-Pishin routes the Bolan has the following advantages:—(1) Shortness and directness; (2) safety behind the Quetta defences and immunity from flank attacks and from tribal attacks; (3) small cost both in construction and maintenance, the country being for the most part open and the line free from the sharp curves that disfigure the Sind-Pishin, and make it so dangerous; (4) can be made absolutely safe from floods and serious landslips; (5) can be constructed in two years; (6) saving in working owing to the Bolan Kotal being 500 feet lower than the Sind-Pishin (Kach) Kotal.

As long ago as 1886 a survey of the Mushkhaf route was made by Mr. F. L. O'Callaghan, C.S.I., and the feasibility of the project and possibility of a 1 in 40 line with 800 feet curves proved. It was found, however, that to obtain a 1 in 40 line for the upper part of the Bolan would be very costly, owing to the natural slope of the country being about 1 in 25. Survey parties have been out during the spring, under the orders of Mr. J. Ramsay, Superintendent, Way and Works, North-West Railway, improving the lower part of Mr. O'Callaghan's alignment, and laying out from Mach upwards a new alignment with a ruling gradient of 1 in 25. A few particulars of this project, which will be submitted to Government by the end of August, may be of interest.* The new Bolan railway would take off from the Ruk-Sibi line at Bolan junction station, situated about two miles south of Sibi, and by a chord line, already constructed, join the existing line from Sibi to Rindli at about two miles west of Sibi. The Sibi-Rindli line is utilised till the Nari river is crossed by the Nari bank bridge (7 spans 100 feet), when the new route strikes off to the right, across six miles of desert, and makes for the mouth of the Mushkhaf Gorge. This latter is very similar to the Nari Gorge of the Sind-Pishin, the hills being of precisely the same character; but whereas the Nari river line endeavoured to escape from its difficulties (with only moderate success), the obstacles in the Mushkhaf are boldly faced, and the line taken through all difficulties by a series of tunnels and bridges. This portion of the line is heavy, but it is only two miles in length, and the line then leaves the Mushkhaf river and makes a short cut across a stony, shelving plain, with light work and an easy gradient, for a distance of four miles, when the Mushkhaf river, now reduced to comparatively small dimensions, is again met with at the Shukur Gorge. Here there are two bridges and a tunnel, and again open country is met with for five miles till the Pamir Bund Pass is reached. Here it is necessary to leave the Mushkhaf Valley, and get into the broad valley of the Bolan, locally known as the Lalachi Plain, by means of a tunnel 3,000 feet long. The difficulties in securing a good alignment at this point have been very great, owing to the Mushkhaf Valley being at a much higher level than that of the Bolan. Once in the Bolan Valley, a steady ascent of 1 in 55 (compensated for curves) begins, and the line takes a north-westerly direction to the Abiguni Gorge, where a banking engine will be required to take the train up 1 in 33 grades to Mach. At Mach the line approaches the Bolan temporary line, but is on an elevated plateau instead of being in the river-bed. From Mach to Hirok the line is parallel to the temporary railway, but about 40 or 50 feet above it, and quite safe from floods. The ruling gradient from Mach to Hirok and Mach to Kolepore (or Kotal) is 1 in 25. Since Mr. O'Callaghan obtained a 1 in 40 line above Mach, it is obviously possible to get a 1 in 33 line, and if Government do not make up their minds at once to construct the 1 in 25, it might be a good plan to survey for a 1 in 33 above Mach. From Hirok to Kolepore the new alignment follows the existing high level line, but at a higher level, for two miles, after which it takes a different alignment altogether and keeps well away from the stream. The eight miles from Hirok to Kolepore will be rather costly, but at all events the line will be safe and can be depended on. No amount of patching can make a good job of the present line, and it is hoped that orders will soon be issued for the construction of the new "Bolan State Railway via Mushkhaf." From Kolepore to Quetta the existing line is safe from serious damage.

THE MISSIONARY IN CHINA.

BY A CHINESE.

THE following remarkable article attacking missionary enterprise in China, supposed to be from the pen of the Viceroy's private secretary, has appeared in the N. C. Daily News.

In view of the recent repeated popular outbreaks against the missionaries, I propose here to examine the activities and objects of the missionary enterprise in China, and, after such an examination, to see if the time is not come, both in the interests alike of Chinese and foreigners, when the foreign Governments should be asked to undertake, if not the entire withdrawal, at least some modification and control of the whole mission scheme as it now exists in China.

The avowed objects of the missionary at the present day, which I will proceed to examine, may, I think, be summed up thus:—

I. The moral elevation of the people.

II. The intellectual enlightenment of the people.

III. Works of charity.

I. Now this was the real legitimate object for which the Chinese Government was originally asked to sanction the preaching of Christianity in China. As originally conceived, it is surely an object worthy of all support. Any scheme that could raise the people morally higher and make them better citizens and nobler men, would be a scheme worth the costs of all merely temporal interests. If, therefore, it can be shown that the modern missionaries by their present modes of preaching Christianity in China, are or have the remotest hope of carrying out this object, then, I say, let them be protected, and, if need be, supported by gunboats and grape shot against the people. But can it be shown? If the mere embracing of the forms of Christianity which the modern missionaries are bringing into China, were really the means of making men morally higher, better, and nobler, one would surely think that the best of the nation—and it is not denied that there are still good and noble men in China—would be the people most likely to be attracted by it. But is it so? I appeal to every foreigner who is at all acquainted with the minds of the best and most educated Chinese to say whether such can be converted, whether the very foundation of their national faith and culture can bear such a superstructure as the forms of Christianity which the missionaries bring into China. Is it not, I say, on the contrary, an open secret that it is only the worst, the weak, the ignorant, the needy, and the vicious among the Chinese who have been or could be what the missionaries call converted? If any one should think that this is too strong a statement, I challenge him to show me that the missionary converts are, as a class, not to say morally higher, but even as educated and as good and useful citizens as those of the Chinese who have not been converted; I ask him to show that these converts, men who have lost the faith of their fathers, who are bidden by their foreign teachers to have no sympathy with, if not to despise, the traditions or memories of their own past history, who live isolated and as outcasts in the midst of their own race and people; that these men, when once the mere hope of pecuniary benefits and other external influences are withdrawn, will not turn out to be worse than the worst of the Chinese are at present. If any one should still doubt the truth of what I say here, I would ask him to read the story of the Taiping rebellion, which ought properly to be called by the future historians of China the rebellion of the Chinese outcasts of the Christian missionaries in China. Morally and intellectually the Taipings are a type of the Christian converts in China.

I appeal, therefore, to every foreigner in China who has any opportunity of judging—yea, I appeal to the missionary himself, to ask his conscience and say whether the carrying out of this part of the programme—namely, to make the Chinese by evangelising morally better and nobler, has not turned out to be a miserable failure. I ask him, the Protestant missionary, to search his heart and say whether it is not the sense of this miserable failure which has lately made him turn to what he calls the teaching of science and works of charity, the two other objects of the mission which we will now proceed to consider.

II. Intellectual enlightenment.

This surely is also a great and noble work. If the exchange of perishable commodities is necessary and valuable, how much more so is the interchange of imperishable ideas between nations. If then it can be shown that the missionary enterprise in China is an intellectual movement; that the missionaries are bringing light where before there was only darkness; that they, by connecting, so to speak, the higher currents of thought, are bringing the East and West closer together; then, I say, let them have the support of all good men. But I ask again, can it be shown? No doubt the Protestant missionary has lately taken a great deal to what he calls science and scientific teaching. He can, no doubt, tell his native pupils that the mandarins are foolish to make a fuss about the eclipse of the moon; but will he not in the very next hour have to tell the same pupils that the sun and moon did stand still at the bidding of the Hebrew General Joshua, and that the book in which this true fact is recorded is a holy book written at the dictation of the all-wise Author of the Universe? Now I appeal to every one who has the cause of intellectual enlightenment at heart, to say whether anything can be more anti-scientific than this—to call it by no harsher name—intellectual jugglery. The fact that the missionary is himself unconscious of it, only proves the subtlety and magnitude of the mischief it can do. I say, therefore, whatever amount of mere scientific information the Protestant missionary is capable of bringing into China, they bring also with them a canker-worm which must eventually put an end to all hope of intellectual enlightenment for the Chinese. For was it not against this same intellectual jugglery that all the great emancipators of the human spirit in Europe have fought and are fighting to this very day? Indeed, to anyone who knows anything at all of the struggle for intellectual enlightenment in Europe, how curious and absurd it must seem to see these men of religion, who in Europe have burnt and persecuted, here in China pose themselves as the champions for the cause of science and intellectual enlightenment. So far then is it from being true that the missionary enterprise in China is an intellectual movement, any one who will take the trouble to look into that mass of impenetrable darkness that goes under the name of missionary publication in China, can easily convince himself that it is this mass of darkness that really makes the educated Chinese intellectually despise the foreigner; and when the educated Chinese sees that this mass of darkness is being thrust upon the people with all the arrogant and aggressive pretentiousness of the missionaries on the one hand, and by the threat of gunboats on the part of the foreign Governments on the other hand, it makes him hate the foreigners with a hatred which only those can feel who see that all which they hold as the highest and most sacred as belonging to them as a race and nation, their light, their culture, and their literary refinement, are in danger of being irreparably defaced and destroyed. This, let me say here, is the root of the hatred of foreigners among the educated Chinese.

I say, therefore, if to the missionary's legitimate object of evangelising a certain indulgence is due from those who still believe that the spirit, apart from the mere form, of Christianity can at least do the Chinese no harm, certainly this pretence of theirs to preach science with anti-scientific jugglery deserves no such indulgence. If I have said that the work of evangelising in China is a failure, I must say that this loud talk on the part of the missionaries lately of science and scientific appliances to make China strong and powerful (with the eventual object, no doubt, of fighting against their own nation) is either a palpable imposture or a delusion.

ASCENT OF THE TAKHT-I-SULEIMAN.

THE Pioneer says:—It may interest some of the readers of these columns to hear that the summit of the highest peak of the Takht-i-Suleiman has at last been surmounted. We hear that on June 29 and 30 Captain McIvor and Lieutenant McMahon, the Political Officers of Zhoob, reached the Takht-i-Suleiman shrine, and succeeded in ascending the highest peaks of the mountain, which have hitherto been looked upon as inaccessible. The ascent from the Pazai springs near the foot of the range on the western side to the shrine occupied one day, and the ascent from there to the peaks and return journey to the Pazai springs were accomplished on the next, the party bivouacking for the night on the crest of the Ziarat ridge.

The ascent to the Ziarat ridge, in which the shrine is situated, presents no exceptional difficulties; but at one place the path crosses a long sloping sheet of smooth hard rock, in which a few dents chipped out of the surface enable one to just get a foothold and lessen the risk of a slide down into the precipice below. The climb, however, from the ridge to the summit of the three or four knob-like peaks beyond, at the southern extremity of the crest line, which represent the highest points of the Takht, was one of extreme difficulty, and in places a rope was very desirable. An easier route was fortunately found in descending.

The famous Takht-i-Suleiman shrine, which is visited by occasional adventurous pilgrims, Mahomedan and Hindoo, is situated just below the edge of the centre of the Ziarat ridge, which forms the crest line of the Takht to the north of the knob-like peaks, above mentioned. The whole length of the long crest line of the Takht is girt on the eastern or Punjab side, except towards the northern extremity, by a continuous line of stupendous precipice some thousands of feet deep. The shrine is situated down in the face of this precipice, about 12 or 14 ft. from the top, and consists of a small platform 3 ft. wide and 4½ ft. long, surrounded on the outer sides by a low artificial rock parapet, over which one seems to look down into apparent space. The platform is reached by climbing down a narrow projecting ridge of rock, in which there are three or four projections for the hands and feet. The ascent and descent appear, perhaps, more dangerous to an onlooker than to the actual climber, owing to the fact that to the onlooker the head and shoulders of the climber appear at the moment of reaching the crest to be overhanging beyond the area of the small platform below.

The Ziarat ridge is separated from the nearest of the peaks beyond by a gap in the crest line, which, although of sufficiently formidable appearance from a distance, proves a very satisfying obstacle on nearer approach. This peak is again separated by gaps from the two next and higher peaks, both of which were in turn ascended.

It will be remembered that in the Sherani expedition of last cold weather General Sir George White and a party of officers ascended to the crest of the Takht, but this party only reached the crest at a more northern point somewhat lower than the crest of the Ziarat ridge and the still higher peaks beyond it.

In the Takht survey expedition of 1883, the Survey party reached the summit of the Kaisarghar peak, which is separated from the Takht-i-Suleiman ridge by the maidan plateau. No attempt was then made to ascend the Takht peaks, which were considered to be inaccessible.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

GOVERNMENT have informed the professors at the Elphinstone College, who protested against their supersession by the recent appointment of Mr. H. P. Jacob to the Second Grade of the Educational Graded Service, that they cannot admit that any supersession has taken place. The last Civil List shows that Mr. Jacob, previous to the appointment complained of, stood fifth in the Third Grade, Mr. Hathornthwaite being first, Dr. Peterson second, Mr. Selby third, and Mr. Macmillan fourth. It is obvious, says the Times of India, that the reply of Government requires some explanation. Government holds that Mr. Jacob, though fifth in the list, is senior, and much senior, to all these officers, on the ground of service rendered outside the Graded List. On the same ground Dr. Bhandarkar is senior to these four officers, and to Mr. Jacob. Dr. Bhandarkar stands next for promotion to the Third Grade, and the moment he enters it will apparently have an indefeasible right to step over all five. He is an officer who well deserves promotion, and he is, according to this new-fangled theory of seniority, senior to all officers who entered the Educational Department after him. The new departure does the greatest injustice to the graded officers. They were sent out by the Secretary of State to the Fourth Grade of the Graded Service. They were guaranteed by the Secretary of State promotion to the Third Grade in order of succession, and they owe it to this that Government have reluctantly refrained from putting Mr. Jacob over their heads before now. Mr. Jacob, appointed to the Graded Service long after them, has now been promoted in his turn to the Third Grade, and Government hold that the barrier in his way has fallen, and that it is open to them to promote him from the fifth place in the Third Grade per saltum to the Second, and that on the ground that he is senior to all the officers already there. But these officers, on their admission to the Fourth Grade, were not only guaranteed advancement to the Third Grade, they were assured that they would also be "eligible" for promotion to the higher grades. And this is a promise which in every graded service in India has been ruled to mean that an officer shall not be passed over for such promotion by men standing below him in the list on the ground of superior length of service in the department. Mr. Jacob's appointment is the merest trifling with this promise of the Secretary of State, and we trust that appeal will at once be taken to that authority. We think we can guarantee success. The Secretary of State must know, what apparently the Government of Bombay do not know, that this is a question which has been decided over and over again, in a sense contrary to that now contended for by the Government of Bombay. In Madras Dr. Bradshaw had a case that was much stronger than Mr. Jacob's. He actually held acting appointments in the Graded Service before Messrs. Wilson and Oppert were appointed from home to that service. He has repeatedly tried, on that ground, to get in front of Messrs. Wilson and Oppert, and has invariably received the answer that faith must be kept with these officers, and that they must continue to be treated as his seniors. They have accordingly now both been promoted to the Second Grade before him. Why should there be one law for Bombay and another for Madras? Government have done our College Professors the service and the justice of stating frankly that their appointment of Mr. Jacob to the Second Grade rests on his seniority. That seniority does not exist. And the appointment will therefore have to be cancelled.

The Secretary of State, we (Pioneer) understand, has turned a deaf ear to a request brought to his notice by the Civilian Judges of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts, in respect of their contributions to the Civil Pension Code. These Judges, as we know, are subject to a 4 per cent. deduction from their salaries, which goes towards making up their pensions; and to that extent they are worse off than their learned brethren who have come out from England or have been recruited from the ranks of the Native Bar. Naturally they do not see why this should be, particularly in cases where the civilian has completed his full payments towards pension. Precedent is distinctly in the Judges' favour, for civilians in the Viceroy's Council and the Executive Councils of Bombay and Madras are exempt from these deductions, the intention obviously being that where they are brought together with members of other services the terms shall be equal for all. However, there seems on all hands to be a great fear lest the judicial service should be getting too popular, and the concession has been peremptorily refused.

Since the transfer of Mr. H. J. Maynard to the officiating charge of the Karnal District, the Punjab Secretariat has been working with only one under-secretary; Mr. Maynard was officiating for Mr. A. Williams; but, as the latter now takes the Lahore district, it is not likely, the Bombay Gazette states, that the vacancy in the Secretariat will be filled at all during the Simla season. As the work just now is extremely light, observes the local paper, no inconvenience will result from this. In fact, it is somewhat remarkable that ever since the Secretariat was strengthened so considerably work has fallen off, although the Black Mountain and Miranzai Expeditions must have broken the monotony for the time.

In addition to the various changes already indicated, a reference has been made to the Secretary of State with the view of effecting a further improvement in the status of Forest Officers in the Bengal Presidency below the rank of Conservator. The question of reorganising and improving the subordinate staff of the Department is also under the consideration of Government, an Indian contemporary says.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Bangalore Command.—It is stated on reliable authority that Col. Gossett, C.B., of the Dorsetshire Regt., succeeds General Bengough in the Bangalore command.

The Madras Deputy-Adjutant-Generalship.—It is now rumoured that Col. G. Simpson, assistant adjutant-general, Secunderabad, will most likely succeed Col. Hope in the appointment of deputy-adjutant-general, Army Headquarters, Madras, on Col. Hope's transfer to the Government military secretaryship. Col. Ranking is also mentioned in this connection.

The Punjab Frontier Force Deputy Surgeon-Generalship.—The first deputy surgeon-generalship to fall vacant is that connected with the Punjab Frontier Force, Dr. Thornton vacating on Aug. 13. Brig.-Surg. Cleghorn, being first for promotion, will, says the Pioneer, be gazetted to the vacancy, and will join his appointment at Abbottabad on the above-mentioned date. He will, however, remain there only sixteen or seventeen days, as he is to be permanently appointed Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals in the Punjab on Dr. Farrell vacating at Simla on Sept. 2. Brig.-Surg. Harvey, now on short leave in England, will then be appointed to the medical charge of the Frontier Force. The date of his return is somewhat uncertain, as he may possibly attend the Hygienic Conference.

The Black Mountain Force.—The following appointments have been made to the force retained for occupation in the Black Mountain:—To command—Brig.-Gen. Hammond; Brigade Major—Capt. L. Bradshaw; Field Engineer—Capt. Abbott, R.E.; Assistant—Lieut. Birdwood, R.E.; Assistant Superintendent, Signalling and Provost Marshal—Lieut. Peters, 7th Dragoon Guards; Commissariat and Transport Officer—Lieut. Anderson; and Veterinary Surgeon—Surg. Maxwell. The following officers have been appointed to the force on the Samana Range:—Brigade-Major—Capt. Du Gray, 4th P. I.; Commissariat Officer—Lieut. Bretherton; Transport Officer—Lieut. Stack, 3rd B. C.

The Victoria Cross.—Those who think that the Victoria Cross has been given too freely of late years, will, perhaps, be surprised to learn (says the Pioneer) that in the whole of the British troops at present in India, there is not a single officer actually in regimental employ who has won the cross "for valour." Indeed, the last Indian Army List shows only one British officer borne on the strength of his regiment with the magic letters before his name. This is Major E. S. Browne, South Wales Borderers, who is officiating as Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry at Fort William. General Sir George White, commanding at Quetta; Col. Hart, Director of Military Education; and Col. Lord William Beresford, military secretary to the Viceroy, who belong to the British Service, are all on the Staff. There are thirty-two names of Indian officers given under the heading of "Victoria Cross" in the Army List, beginning with Lieut.-General Sir J. Hills-Johnes, April 24, 1858, and ending with Major Grant, May 26, 1891. Of these one-half are on the retired unemployed supernumerary list; while five are serving with regiments. Surgeon Crimmin, Bombay, stands alone in the Indian Medical Service as a V.C.

The Military Camps in Upper India this cold weather will be particularly interesting owing to the number of batteries that will practice with the 12-pounder breech-loader for the first time. This gun, observes a contemporary, is beyond all question immensely superior to the muzzle-loading 9-pounder, and the experiments carried out with it at Okehampton and elsewhere in England have been extremely satisfactory. Here in India the artillery have not yet become familiarised with it, and it is important that officers and men should thoroughly appreciate its shooting powers. On the Gurgaon Range, which has been selected as a permanency for the artillery stationed at Meerut and Umballa, four batteries of horse artillery and one field battery will use the 12-pounder, and the shooting should show a great advance on all former practices.

The revised regulations regarding the Reserve Volunteers will be issued shortly, with a view to increasing the number of men enrolled. Fifteen rounds only have to be fired annually to earn the capitation grant.

As all restrictions were removed some time ago against recruiting among the transfrontier tribes on the North-West border, it seems extremely desirable, remarks the Pioneer, that the 4th Punjab Cav. and the 3rd Punjab Inf. should be raised again. It was a great mistake ever to have reduced the Frontier Force, and the question of restoring it to its old strength is, we believe, now under consideration.

Attention has recently been directed to the unfairness of the expenses entailed by the captains and subalterns when travelling on duty, by rail, with detached parties of British troops. The matter has now, it is stated, been represented by the Commander-in-Chief to the Government of India, and a daily allowance of 3 rs. as compensation for extra expenses of living has been sanctioned to these officers when on such duty.

Referring to the complaint regarding the withdrawal from the army of the privilege hitherto enjoyed by the services of remitting by means of Privilege Remittance Receipts, the Pioneer is informed that its correspondents were in error in supposing that these orders emanated from the Pay Department. The restrictions now imposed are entirely due to the Civil Financial Department, who, it is understood, are desirous of withdrawing altogether the privilege hitherto enjoyed by the army, which was a boon greatly appreciated by the service, and the withdrawal of which causes considerable annoyance and inconvenience.

There has been a very encouraging improvement not only in the strength, but in the efficiency of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles during the past year. The total enrolled strength of the corps on March 31 last was 1,005, of whom 585 were classed as "extra efficient" and 372 as "efficient." The total of "extra efficient" in the previous year was only 434, while the "efficients" numbered 508. Over fifty men qualified as marksmen during the year. The twenty-eighth annual report is an admirably-arranged volume, and will be read with very great interest by the many friends of the corps.

Her Majesty's flagship Marathon, Capt. George M. Hill, arrived in harbour on Aug. 9 from Colombo. She is a twin-screw cruiser of the 3rd class, of 2,950 tons, and 9,000 horse-power. She was cruising between Trincomalee and Colombo, for about a month, and left for Bombay on Aug. 6. She carries 6 big guns and 10 quickfiring guns, and has a complement of 250 men and officers, all told. She is a new fast cruiser, and is the latest addition to the East India station, with every modern improvement.

Her Majesty's cruiser Lapwing, 900 tons, under the command of Lieut. A. C. Galloway, arrived at Bombay on Aug. 14 from Colombo, which she left on the 6th. The Lapwing has 75 men and officers all told. As the Admiral's flagship sailed on the 13th for Trincomalee, the Admiral's flag was hoisted on the Lapwing. During the voyage she had a heavy head monsoon. The following are the names of the officers:—Lieut. and Commander A. C. Galloway, Lieut. C. D. Johnson, Dr. J. Shand, Engineer W. D. Dewing, Paymaster G. Pusface, and Gunner W. Parsons.

Major R. F. Willoughby, 1st Royal Fusiliers, has been appointed second in command of the 2nd Battalion at Peshawur, Bengal.

Surg.-Major G. Bainbridge, B.M.S., has been promoted surgeon-major.

Surg.-Major H. P. Jervis, I.M.S., has been granted leave out of India for one year.

Capt. P. W. J. Le Gallais, 8th Hussars, has been appointed aide-de-camp to the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, vice Major P. L. Clowes, 8th Hussars, resigned.

Capt. J. Shaw, Scottish Rifles, has been selected for the adjutancy of the 3rd (Militia) batt. Scottish Rifles.

The formation of a Volunteer Corps—to be known as the Chota-Nagpore Mounted Rifles—has been sanctioned by the Government of India. Mr. W. H. Grimley, commissioner of the Chota-Nagpore division, is appointed commandant.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Aug. 11.

The Mysterious Discovery at Howrah.—A telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta a fortnight ago announced the finding of a woman's body in a wine case at Howrah station. An Indian paper gives the following account:—A wine case marked "P. S. A. Co., Limited, 2 dozen pints," and consigned to a Mahomedan in Calcutta, from Patna, was found to emit a bad smell. It was opened and a human foot discovered. The case was conveyed to Howrah Hospital and opened in presence of the police and the civil surgeon. It disclosed the body of a young Mahomedan female, in an advanced stage of decomposition. The limbs were pressed close to the body, which, save for a piece of coarse gunny, was entirely nude, and was jammed into the box with considerable force. There were no ornaments on the body and no marks of violence. A post-mortem examination disclosed that the brain was congested and that death was due to arsenical poisoning, accelerated by suffocation. The police are inquiring into the matter, which caused some sensation in Howrah, but when the mail left had made no discoveries.

Administration in Assam.—A contemporary's correspondent draws attention to an apparent weakness in the present administration of Assam. The deputy commissioners, he says, are not as a class equal in experience, or in the tact which experience alone can give, to their predecessors of ten years ago. During the last decade most of the Staff Corps deputy commissioners have, he says, "worked out," and a staff of young civilians have taken their place. The latter have gone to Assam merely for the sake of the Assam allowance and rapid promotion; and since the limit of pay to which they can rise in Assam is much lower than in Bengal, they are certain to leave after a comparatively short term of service.

Wheat Trade from Calcutta.—It is the general opinion, says Capital, that unless a very considerable reaction takes place in the prices of wheat in the European markets, the exports from this port during the remainder of the season will be small. The supplies of wheat from up-country have fallen off very considerably, the arrivals by rail during the last ten days of July having been, on an average, only 462 tons per day, which is about the daily quantity required for the local mills.

The Calcutta Football Club and the East Lancashire Regimental team have played off a tie for the Challenge Cup. The result was a draw for the fourth time, neither side scoring. An immense crowd watched the game.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Aug. 12.

Sanitation and Drainage of Madras.—The Government of Madras has arranged for the services of a sanitary expert of the highest reputation to report during the ensuing cold season on the problems connected with the sanitation and drainage of Madras and the improvement of the river Cooum. Various schemes have been under consideration for many years past, the problem presenting difficulties of unusual dimensions.

The Distress in Chingleput.—A Madras correspondent telegraphs:—In an interview I have had with a missionary, stationed in the Chingleput district, and who has an intimate knowledge of the people, he said that the distress is undoubtedly increasing, though the number of persons seeking for employment on relief works is not increasing. The Government officials are doing all they can to prevent starvation. The higher officials especially are very active in organising relief and supervising operations; but the great drawback to success is corruption on the part of subordinates, who give short allowances when they are not watched. The food given is coarse, but sufficient to maintain the recipients. There is room for much private assistance among the sick and weakly low caste males and also females. Much difficulty is, however, experienced in selecting persons for private relief. All persons who appear able to work are sent to officials, and are refused private aid.

Golf.—The annual match between Madras and Bangalore for the Golf Trophy was concluded at Bangalore on Aug. 8, Madras winning by fifteen holes, thus retaining possession of the coveted cup for another year. The teams dined together in the evening of Saturday at the United Service Club. Colonel Hill proposed the health of the Madras Team, which was suitably replied to by Mr. Wedderburn; Dr. Benson then, in a humorous speech, proposed the health of Colonel Hill, who is about to leave India for good, and who will be much missed by the golfers of both Bangalore and Madras. After dinner a few songs were sung in good old fashion, and Madras retired gleeful at having won the cup again, and very well satisfied with the hearty hospitality of their hosts.

CEYLON.

In reply to the proposition by the Planters' Association that the Ceylon Government should import all the labourers required to carry out the proposed public works of the colony, and so free the labour market from the competition of Government officers and contractors, the Colonial Secretary has stated that the officers indicated have been warned to take precautions against drawing their labour supply from the estates; but, in view of the abundant supply of labour offering locally, it would not be reasonable to ask the Government to go elsewhere for the labourers of whom they may be in need. This will not be regarded by the Association as a satisfactory reply.

BOMBAY.

Admiral F. C. B. Robinson.—On Aug. 10 his Excellency Rear-Admiral F. C. B. Robinson, Commander-in-Chief of the East Indies, and Lady Robinson and child, accompanied by Flag-Lieutenant Captain Hill, of H.M.S. Marathon, landed at the Apollo Bunder, where they were received by Col. Shortland, R.A. A guard of honour of the Marine Battalion, under Lieutenant Windham, was in attendance. There were also present Major MacMahon, D.A.A.G., Colonel Forjett, commanding the Marine Battalion, and Major Nicholetts, commanding the 5th Regiment Native Infantry. His Excellency and Lady Robinson drove to the bungalow of Captain Hext, Director of Indian Marine, where they would remain until the Admiral's house in the Marine lines was ready. A salute of thirteen guns was fired from the saluting battery when his Excellency landed.

The Municipal Corporation.—At the meeting of the Municipal Corporation on Aug. 6 Mr. P. M. Mehta moved:—That the Corporation regret the attitude taken up by Government regarding the State grant towards the maintenance of primary education in the city is not calculated to promote and encourage the progress thereof. That in hope, however, of a more equitable treatment in future, and in view of the importance of helping the progress of primary education, the Corporation sanction the expenditure of the 11,800 rs. set apart in the budget for that purpose (so far only as the present year is concerned). That, in view of the above contribution, as well as in view of the other questions pending settlement regarding the statutory liabilities of the Corporation in their relation with Government, the Corporation are of opinion that they should at present refrain from sanctioning expenditure, as far as possible, on objects which are not of an obligatory character, and that, therefore, Government should be informed, in reply to letter No. 2327, dated June 30, that the Corporation are not prepared to make any contribution towards the construction of a vaccination depot. Mr. Kikham took exception to the first paragraph, and moved as an amendment, "That the Corporation regret that Government is unable to make a larger assignment of State aid towards the support of primary education." He also moved another amendment, "That the Corporation note with satisfaction that Government is prepared to assist liberally in the construction of school buildings, and that the Joint Schools' Committee be requested to institute inquiries into the alleged deficiencies of the existing school accommodation and to report to the Corporation the precise facts of the case and with suitable recommendations." After some discussion the debate was adjourned for a week. At the same meeting a long memorial to H.E. the Viceroy in Council on the question of the increase of the police force, drawn up by the committee appointed for the purpose, was submitted, and on the motion of Mr. P. M. Mehta, it was agreed to forward the memorial to H.E. the Viceroy for consideration. Colonel Merewether moved that sanction should be given to the Port Trustees to erect at the pier head, Apollo Bunder, a pavilion, measuring 100 feet by 20 feet, for the convenience of passengers embarking and debarking.

The Surgeon-General Sir W. Moore Memorial.—Surgeon-General Pinkerton presided on Aug. 7 at a meeting of the subscribers of the above fund, held in the Town Hall, Bombay, when it was unanimously resolved that the sum of 1,000 rs. should be expended in the purchase of Four per Cent. Government Paper or Port Trust Bonds for the same amount, the subscription list being allowed to remain open until the above sum was collected, and that the interest on the investment should take the form of a prize to be called "The Surgeon-General Sir William James Moore Prize," and to be given in rotation to the best student in the final year study at the Provincial Medical Schools, the prize being awarded to the schools in the following order:—Poona Medical School, Ahmedabad Medical School, and Hyderabad Medical School. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the proceedings.

Export of Cotton from Bombay.—Some idea of the extent to which the export of cotton from Bombay declined last year may be obtained from recently published export returns. The United Kingdom took, it appears, only 155,000 bales, against 370,000 in 1889, a decrease of nearly 70 per cent., while the export to the Continent fell from 118,000 to 955,000 bales, a decrease of about 15 per cent. This general decrease in the gross amount of exports was accompanied, unfortunately, by a remarkable fall in prices, due in the first place to the unusually large crops raised in America, but ascribable in some degree to a growing distrust of Indian cotton on the part of European buyers. To whatever cause the fall may be due, says the Englishman, prices appear to have reached a lower level in 1890 than at any period during the past forty years, and this weakening of values, together with the diminution of export, has pressed very severely upon Bombay shippers. According to a local contemporary, the loss has fallen for the most part upon the native dealers. In some quarters, however, an improvement is apparent. One of the most remarkable points, for instance, in the return for the past year is the growth in the trade with Hamburg. During the past five years the shipments to this port have risen from 1,000 to nearly 176,000 bales; and, more satisfactory even than the absolute increase, the growth has been steadily progressive. During the month of June of the present year 51,733,600 lbs. of cotton, worth 11,205,643 rs., were shipped from the port of Bombay.

A three-days' cricket match between Lord Harris' Eleven, captained by Colonel Rhodes, and Lord Wenlock's team, captained by Major Bruce, on the Poona Gymkhana ground, has been played, and resulted in a victory for the former by 123 runs.

The Jame Jamshed says an association has been recently established with the object of giving industrial education to native women, in order to enable them to earn a living by honest work. The Hon. Mr. Justice Telang is the president of the association, and Mr. M. C. Murzban and Pandita Ramabai are the vice-presidents. Dr. Emma Ryder is the hon. secretary, and a committee of management will be appointed of influential ladies as well as gentlemen.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

A REUTER telegram from Rangoon, dated Aug. 27, says:—

Supplies of provisions for the month of September have reached the Jade Mines, and further supplies for a period of six months en route, being carried to the mines by elephants from Nanyaseek, the highest navigable point on the Chindwin river. The health of the garrison at the mines has improved.

The correspondent of the Times at Rangoon writes on Aug. 30:—

There has been no material change in the crop reports from Upper Burma, although in certain districts the prospects have improved owing to rain having fallen. Severe scarcity prevails in several districts, and in the majority the stocks of food are insufficient. The districts which are most severely affected are Yeu, Meikilla, Yemethen, and Pokoko. The price of paddy continues to advance in Upper Burma. During the last forty-eight hours rain has fallen in Meikilla and Yemethen. This will, however, only benefit the well-to-do classes, as the poorer classes in those districts have no food stocks, and no seed grain for cultivation. In the Lower Chindwin district cattle disease is very prevalent and great mortality has occurred. Cattle disease has also broken out in the district of Bhamo.

The Rangoon Times reports that two bands of dacoits, one fifty strong and the other twenty-five, and both well armed with rifles, have attacked and plundered villages in the Katha district, on the borders of Wuntho. Both bands are believed to consist of the ex-Tsawbwa's men.

A number of small expeditions in the Chin Hills and on the Bhamo frontier have been arranged for next cold season. In the Chin country a column will explore the Chinbo country, and four other columns will visit the Baungshs, Tashon, Tlangton, Kanhow, and Nwengal tribes. These columns will have mountain guns. In order to effect a settlement of the Kachyen tribes, columns will be sent out from Bhamo, Mogoung, and Myitkynia. An expedition will also proceed to explore the amber mines and the indiarubber tracts, and, if practicable, join hands with Assam.

The quarrel of the Chinese traders at Bhamo with the local authorities is becoming very acute. The Chinese threaten to stop trade by leaving Bhamo en masse, as they did in 1882, before the annexation of Upper Burma.

In a speech at a durbar held at Bhamo, the Chief Commissioner said that the Chinese, although they had been invited to attend, had neither the good taste nor the good manners to be present. He justified generally the action of the local authorities, but admitted that certain fines that had been imposed were too severe. Sir A. Mackenzie declared that if the Chinese would devote their attention to legitimate trade instead of to smuggling they would have no trouble with the administration.

The Chinese especially complain of frequent domiciliary visits, and of interference with caravans from Yunnan. The Bhamo officials, although they have acted legally, have apparently administered the law with undue severity, and have displayed a great want of tact in dealing with the Chinese.

THE SPEECH of the Chief Commissioner at Kindat on July 30 is interesting as being practically a declaration of policy with regard to Chinland. There have been rumours that Government intended to permit the Kale Tsawbwa, now in Rangoon Gaol, to return to Kale. This does not appear accurate, for Sir A. Mackenzie says:—"Notwithstanding that this Tsawbwa has always been treated with every consideration by the British Government, he has proved himself thoroughly disloyal and treacherous. He harboured in the Chin hills the wretched pretender who styled himself the Shwegyobu Prince, and he was in treasonable correspondence with Wuntho." Sir A. Mackenzie then said:—"The Tsawbwa is in Rangoon Gaol pending the orders of the Government of India."

WITH REGARD to the Thaugdut Tsawbwa, who was for a long time under suspicion, the Chief Commissioner said:—"I am glad to take this opportunity of publicly recognising the loyalty and good conduct of the Thaugdut Tsawbwa, who did not hesitate to arrest and surrender for trial and punishment a member of his own family who was implicated in the recent murders. This Tsawbwa has indeed behaved uniformly well. During the late troubled times, when his little State was surrounded by rebels, when Manipore to the north and west and Wuntho to the east were in open arms, when every effort was made by his connection, the Wuntho Tsawbwa, to draw him into revolt, he remained steadfast in his loyalty, and succeeded in keeping order among his people. I trust he may long continue to rule his State in the same loyal and able manner. So long as he does so he may rest assured of favour and protection."

UPPER CHINDWIN, Sir A. Mackenzie said, was generally free from serious crimes, but Boh Le is still at large. He spoke of the panic that set in amongst the Burmese from the blusterings of this cowardly rascal, and said that any town or village will be heavily fined that either harbours Boh Le or fails to resist his demands for food and money. During the cold season, he said, a series of posts would be established between Wuntho and Mogaung, and the civil police will be strengthened.

MR. RODWAY SWINHOE writes to the Times of India regarding the alleged card-cheating case:—"My attention has been called to a paragraph appearing in a recent issue of your paper, reproducing a story from the Rangoon Times of a so-called card scandal in Mandalay. The story which you have copied is untrue in some most important particulars, namely:—1. The officer accused of cheating has never either officially or otherwise admitted his guilt. 2. He has never at any time been under arrest, when travelling or not. The fact is, that certain irregularities are stated to have been observed in the play; and an accusation of cheating was made, which was indignantly denied. A Court of Inquiry has been held since the return to Mandalay of the officer, and the papers have now been sent to the military authorities for decision as to whether the matter is to be proceeded with or not. I am advising the accused officer, and have been desired to point out to you the immense amount of damage and trouble that is caused in cases such as these, when such a compromising statement as that the accused person has admitted his guilt appears in the public press. I must ask you, in justice to the said officer, to insert a second paragraph in your paper, to the effect that the facts which you previously published were not true in the particulars which I have pointed out. I must ask you also to use your best endeavours to prevent the first and untrue story getting further spread abroad, and in future not to publish stories concerning this matter without some better authority than the Rangoon Times."

THE SEARCH for oil at Youngyaung is being carried on with varying success. The Burma Oil Company, who already have several valuable wells, struck oil in a new bore recently put down, and the yield for a few days was about a hundred barrels per day. This has now declined, and is expected to fall to ten or fifteen barrels a day shortly. Another deep bore of the same company was unsuccessful, nothing but water being met with. Sir Lepel Griffin's syndicate have, up to the present, been unfortunate, seeing the concession they got was reported favourably on by a high authority. One bore is down to 700 feet, and in this there are 600 feet of water, but no oil. Another unsuccessful bore of the same syndicate went down much deeper, but no oil was met with.

A LOCAL syndicate which recently started work near Minbu has struck oil a short distance below the surface. The find bears every indication of being a most valuable one.

PUNJAB, N.-W. P., OUDE, &c.

IT is by no means unlikely, says the Lahore paper, that the next piece of legislation for the Punjab will take the form of a Village Sanitation Bill.

THE CHENAB RIVER is to be bunded at Khanki, and a canal made through the Rechna Doab. The Government of India, in view of this development of country between the Chenab and the Ravi rivers, are about to take up land for a new railway from Wazirabad to Mooltan by way of Chiniot and Jhang.

AMONG OTHER SCHEMES of railway extension in the Punjab likely to be taken up shortly, says the Pioneer, are the line from Bhatinda to Bahawalpore, the necessity of which has been so frequently insisted upon, and a line connecting Ferozepore with the main line of the North-Western system between Amritsur and Loodiana. Both these extensions will be broad gauge.

THE Pioneer correspondent writes from Quetta, Aug. 6:—"Quetta society experienced a painful shock when it was announced that two young medical officers, Surgeons Woods and Walsh, who were suffering from enteric fever, had succumbed to the disease. They expired within a few hours of each other on the early morning of the 4th inst. They were buried on the evening of the 5th with full military honours. Both officers were great favourites, and their untimely death is sincerely deplored. The dinner to be given on Wednesday night by Sir George White, and the amateur theatricals, have been postponed in consequence. We had scarce recovered from the shock of the premature deaths of two promising officers, when the death of another esteemed favourite in society, Mrs. Macgowan, the wife of the manager of the brewery, was announced, being also caused by enteric fever. The deceased lady came out from England about eight months ago, and was married at Kurrachee. She is deeply regretted by a large circle of friends, and the greatest sympathy is expressed for the bereaved husband. Several soldiers and non-commissioned officers are down with enteric fever, and some are not expected to recover. Cholera has appeared at Nari Gorge. It is not exactly known how many persons were attacked, but fifteen fatal cases are reported."

OWING TO the rapid spread of enteric fever at Rawul Pindi, which has been ascribed to the impure water-supply and the number of wells that have been fouled by the decaying bodies of the dead locusts, it has been found necessary to supply the troops in garrison with water from the new water-supply. The pipes have already been laid as far as the Military Works Department furniture store, a distance of about 600 yards from the nearest barrack, from whence it is carried in barrels conveyed on bullock carts and emptied into the filters at the barracks. In this manner enough water is supplied for drinking purposes, which is, of course, of the first importance. However, considering the length of time the Pindi water-supply scheme has been in hand, and the very unhealthy state of the station (especially among the British troops) during the last two hot seasons, every effort, a contemporary rightly suggests, should be made to push on the laying of the pipes as rapidly as possible until the whole station reaps the benefit of a pure water-supply. Doubtless the extra cost of furnishing the troops with water by means of bullock carts will be something considerable, and had the money been expended in completing the new water-supply scheme some months ago, we should have heard less of enteric fever at Rawul Pindi.

THE WARBURTON DEFAMATION CASE against the Tribune, which was fixed for Aug. 17 for hearing in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner of Lahore, has now been transferred, at the request of Mr. Williams, who is appointed to officiate for Colonel Beadon during his absence on leave, to the Court of Mr. Goode, first class magistrate, Lahore, for disposal. Mr. Williams, it seems, wrote to Colonel Beadon saying that he preferred not to try this case, and, therefore, asked him to transfer it to another Court before his arrival at Lahore. Mr. Gouldsbury protested against the date being altered from the 17th, already fixed for the hearing of the case. On the 17th counsel on both sides appeared before Mr. Goode, and explained to him that the case had already been gone through, the only thing that was necessary was the adjudication on the public charges, in respect of which Mr. Warburton had already been examined and re-examined at great length. Mr. Chatterjee, counsel for Sirdar Dyal Singh, suggested that the case might be taken up during the Mohurram holidays, in order to get through it earlier than they would if a long date was given. Mr. Goode consented to hear the case on the 12th, at 11 A.M. As the summons had not yet been served on S. K. Chatterjee, Mr. Gouldsbury said he would proceed against Sirdar Dyal Singh, proprietor of the Tribune.

MR. JULIAN SMITH, late Agent of the Rohilkhund and Kumaon Bank, Cawnpore, is being prosecuted by that bank for criminal breach of trust. He has been committed by the Cantonment Magistrate to be tried by the High Court.

THE DIRECTORS of the Morning Post have filed a petition in the Court of the District Judge, Allahabad, praying for the voluntary liquidation of the concern under the supervision of the Court. The press and paper are fully mortgaged to the Agra Savings Bank, which apparently intends to keep the Post going at all events till the liquidation proceedings conclude.

INDIGO RETURNS for the North-West Provinces this year indicate that the decline in the area devoted to this crop still continues, and in an accelerated measure. The falling off as compared with last year amounts to not less than 20 per cent., and, what is more discouraging, there has been an extensive closure of factories in about a dozen districts. Furthermore, the outturn, taking 100 as representing a full average crop, is represented by 66 in the Gangetic Doab and 75 in Gorakpur, Rohilkund, and Oude.

A FATAL CASE OF CHOLERA among the European community at Lahore has occurred in the person of Miss Oman, daughter of a professor in the Government College. The recent rain, however, has greatly reduced the prevalence of cholera in the district.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD, says the Pioneer, that a project to connect the outlying station of Badaon with Bareilly by a railway line has been started. The construction has been warmly advocated by the district authorities of Badaon, one of the grounds of recommendation being the help it would afford to the officials at the coming revision of settlement operations. The proposed line would branch off from Aoula, a station on the main line, the total distance being about nineteen miles.

AT NO DISTANT PERIOD, say the Pioneer, the East Indian Railway will find themselves running in competition with a line from Moghal Sarai to Umballa between thirty and forty miles shorter than that which passes through Lucknow. The Jaunpore-Rai Bareilly route to Lucknow will bring the latter station nearer to Moghal Sarai, while the Bareilly-Rampur-Moradabad line, a short and direct one, will save the present detour through Chandausi Junction. A glance at the map will show that there will then be communication almost in a straight line from Moghal Sarai to Umballa; in fact, no direct line will exist in India. The two projects mentioned will be taken in hand this cold weather, and with the sixty lacs advanced by the Rampoor State the Bareilly-Moradabad line should be quickly built. The rate of speed on the Oude and Rohilkund system is not very high now, but when the sand ballast has been replaced by more stable material and the permanent-way put in more thorough order, there will be no reason why trains should not run forty miles an hour. In actual mileage we believe that the new route from Moghal Sarai will be some miles shorter than that which the East Indian takes through Allahabad, Tundla, and Delhi.

HYDERABAD.

AT A MEET of the Nawab Vicar-ul-Umra's hounds at Trimulgherry, Mrs. Stevens, wife of Captain Stevens, of the Madras Infantry, had a nasty fall, owing to her horse's foot catching in one of the bushes. The animal came down with its rider, and the lady was unconscious for a few minutes. She was not, writes a correspondent, much hurt, and is now all right again.

JUDGMENT in the case of the two Arabs charged with assaulting and wounding Lieutenants Sexton and E. Brewster was delivered on Aug. 10. The prisoners were found guilty, and sentenced each to penal servitude for five years.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

WE give the following on the authority of the Civil and Military Gazette:—A very typical chapter of Afghan history seems to have been disclosed by the alleged discovery of the buried documents of the State Accounts Office in Shere Ali's time. It appears that Habibulla Khan was Accountant-General (Mastufi ulema-Malik) of Afghanistan for ten years during the time of the late Ameer Shere Ali. In the last Afghan war, we believe, he was brought as a State prisoner to India. During his absence he left the whole office and its files with Mulla Abubakr, who was subsequently, until last year, the Ameer's agent in Bombay. It is said that the latter buried the papers of the Accounts Office, and that some accident has now most opportunely brought to light these documents, of which the salient feature is that the Afghan people owed to Shere Ali nearly seventy lacs of rupees of arrears of revenue! It is, of course, a very painful task for the Ameer to have to collect all this money from the people; but, as the successor of Shere Ali Khan, a sacred duty devolves upon Abdur Rahman Khan to faithfully administer his predecessor's estate; and he is not the man to shrink from the task, especially as he appears at the present moment to be straining every nerve to obtain funds for his military preparations for a holy—or otherwise—war. We only hope, for their sakes, that Shere Ali Khan's creditors will not rashly take it to be a corollary of the foregoing that the present Ameer is obliged to liquidate his predecessor's debts. For Mulla Abubakr's sake, too, it is to be hoped that he may never appear to explain the burial for so long a period of the late Ameer's account. On the whole, however, this discovery is peculiarly fortunate just now, when the Ameer wants money and has no important political business on hand.

The Ameer has issued a proclamation ordering a census to be taken throughout Afghanistan.

His Highness has just prohibited the export of wheat from Candahar, his reason being that the crops have been seriously damaged by locusts. The Governor has represented that the damage is very slight, and that the only result of the prohibition will be to reduce the revenue, as there is plenty of State wheat available for export.

M. Vambéry writes to the Times:—If politics could be shaped according to one's heart's desire, I would readily agree with what Mr. Maclean suggests in the debate about Candahar, and I would join him in the reproaches made against the present Government with regard to the leniency shown in the face of the rather lukewarm behaviour of the Ameer of Afghanistan. But, alas! in politics we have to watch the proper moment; we have to view all the various sides of the question; and it is for this reason that I cannot find fault with the Indian Government for having stopped with the railway on the northern slopes of the Khojak mountains and not extending the line to Candahar. I do not see the reason why we should rouse the suspicion of the Ameer by leaving British territory and by entering without his consent and desire—I mean to say forcibly—upon what he regards as his own ground. It is a question of 70 miles, a comparatively short space, and nearly level, which remains behind, and which will certainly offer no difficulty in the hour of trial, which may prompt the Ameer to ask the completion of the line, or, if he does not ask it, we can do it all the same. And, again, it ought not to be forgotten that Russia watches from the Dushakh station of the Transcaspian railroad very attentively. England's doings on the other end of the Khojak tunnel, for the slightest move towards Candahar will be followed by the extension of a Russian branch line towards Puli-Katun, which place Russia is just now anxiously colonising, which is an evident proof of her planned activity in this southernmost portion of her Turkestan possessions. I repeat, therefore, our device for the present must be festina lente, albeit this may surprise the reader to whom I have been known as the chief alarmist. In reference to the deterioration of British trade in Central Asia, I find that both parties have shot beyond the mark. That Afghan duty collectors are always the same hindrance to trade as was the case thirty years ago is clearly proved by the fact that Indian merchants of to-day prefer sending their bales across Persia to the nearest railway station of the Transcaspian line, and thence to Bokhara, instead of crossing Afghanistan to Kerki or to Kilif, on the Oxus. It is a tremendous circuit they have to make, and still they do it only to avoid the cruelty and rapaciousness of the Afghan duty officers, who are still levying blackmail upon the inoffensive merchant in spite of the iron rule of the present Ameer. Of course this state of things cannot and ought not to be suffered any longer. It is an urgent duty upon the Government to cure this evil, and the sooner the Durand Mission, which was interrupted by the rebellion of Ishak Khan, goes to Cabul, the better it will be for England's future relations with Afghanistan. I cannot share the implicit faith the Government puts in the present Ameer. He keeps evidently two irons in the fire, and the sooner we prevent him from heating both the better it will be. England has too frequently dearly paid for her full reliance on the character of Afghans and of Afghan Princes, and it is full time that she should keep her eyes open.

A Reuter telegram from Teheran (Aug. 31) says:—Alarming reports have been received from Tabriz that the people are arming in order to attack the Europeans, and that the priests are actively inciting the inhabitants to expel all foreigners. These reports are altogether discredited in official quarters, however, the information received by the Government stating that hardly any cause for alarm exists. The chief priest of Tabreez has also telegraphed to the Shah in reassuring terms, and the authorities consider that the crisis has terminated.

The Times correspondent at Teheran gives the following version (Aug. 29):—Alarming news from Tabriz circulated this evening, but is not borne out by Government telegrams. The excitement against the tobacco monopoly continuing, and an influential petition having been forwarded hinting at an appeal to Russia unless the monopoly was suppressed, the Shah sent Amini Husur—one of his confidants—ostensibly with presents to the Vali, the Governor, and the High Priest, but really to calm the minds of the priesthood and of the people. Learning this, the High Priest sent to the Grand Vizier a telegram, which has been seen by your correspondent, formally promising obedience to the Government and the tranquillity of the city and the province.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25 (Reuter).—Mail advices from China and Japan bring some few additional details in regard to the position of Europeans in the Celestial Empire. The Japanese Herald, commenting upon a report of the American Consul at Foochow of expected trouble there, states that information up to the 2nd inst. does not tend to confirm the rumour. The American warship Alliance was at Shanghai on the 1st inst. Her Majesty's torpedo cruiser Archer had arrived at Nagasaki from Shanghai. It was stated that Mr. C. Gardner, British Consul at Hankow, was dissatisfied with the perfumatory manner in which the trial of the Wusueh rioters was conducted, and that he remonstrated so effectually that the Viceroy, Chang-Chi-Tung, ordered the case to be reopened.

The Chinese Customs officials of Chinkiang have been arrested. Six are charged with being members of the secret society which is said to have fomented the present troubles, and they have all been committed for trial. The constable of a native Court, who had been arrested by order of the Viceroy, has been promised a pardon for giving evidence against others.

Advices from Tientsin, under date July 15, report that all was quiet at that place and its vicinity.

It was reported at Shanghai on July 27 that some rebels had invaded the Hupeh district, and were marching on Hankow. The rumour, however, was found to have its origin in a raid by mountain bandits, who burned a number of roadside inns on the Hupeh frontier and, after plundering them, retreated to the hills.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27 (Dalziel).—Advices from Shanghai state that a gang of 500 pirates have been creating havoc in the province of Wenchon. Their progress through the whole country has been marked by cruel and cold-blooded crimes. Villages have been burned, and men, women, and children slaughtered. The object of the pirates seems to be to capture influential people and hold them for ransom. Among their captives is the grandson and only relative of a wealthy old man, living a distance of 30 li from Wenchon. They have sent him repeated demands for a large amount of money, accompanied by pieces of the unfortunate boy's flesh. One day they sent a slice of his ear, and on another occasion a strip of skin taken from his back, and so on. Recently the gang has been travelling southward, looting, burning, and murdering.

A Dalziel San Francisco telegram to the Times says:—Advices from Hong Kong say that Russia and Corea have signed a secret treaty. Russia is to protect Corea in exchange for a concession of lands for storing naval supplies. Everything which has taken place in the Corea negotiations points to an Eastern struggle.

M. Blowitz writes from Paris:—I have had with a great Russian personage, who is in a condition to be well informed, the following conversation, which must be read in connection with the Dziziel Agency telegram, dated San Francisco, Aug. 26, relating to a treaty between Russia and Corea. He says:—

The revolution at present going on in China is not, like that of the Taipings, directed against the Dynasty, but, on the contrary, it has been started by the Tsung-li-Yamen, and the man who is really directing it is Li Hung Chang, the successor of the famous Marquess Tseng, who is an intelligent man, and, above all, a patriot. His plans consist in driving out the European element by opposing thereto an actual Chinese migration both on the Russian frontier, a length of 4,000 miles, and on that of Tonquin. The Chinese Government has sent out in the direction of the valley of the Lhi (the region of the Ussuri and the Amour which we have given back to China) 15 millions of the yellow race, and the migration is still far from having reached its limit. A veritable barbaric invasion is what is conceived by these Chinese statesmen. The Black Flags were and still are in their pay, as also the alleged revolution, with their watchword "Down with the foreigner!" The Russian Government is defending itself against this invasion as well as it can by sending Cossack settlers in large numbers into the valley of Lhi.

The two hostile colonies form thus a kind of disguised cordon of troops like those formerly on the Turkish frontier of Austria. This is one of the reasons, and a very strong one, why Russia does not wish openly to join the other European Powers in protesting against Chinese aggression. She has little wish to begin a struggle in these regions—which is sooner or later inevitable—before she has completed the railway just commenced, which will enable her in a few days to throw a body of troops on the Chinese frontier. Another reason is that the Russian Government has been striving since 1876 to absorb Corea, which is now already almost independent of China, and is directed by a German officer in a direction of course hostile to Russia. A third reason is that the island of Saghalien and the coast of Vladivostock almost absorb all the navy that Russia can spare in these parts.

The mother of the young Emperor is at the head of the anti-European movement in China. What I have just told you will confirm the information you published on the Franco-Russian alliance as to their mutual attitude in reference to China; and I believe, indeed, that, as you said, these are thus far the principal, if not the sole formal, stipulations between the two Powers.

The following Japan news comes from San Francisco (Aug. 25):—

Japanese advices announce that the Mikado is about to proclaim the annexation to his dominions of three of the volcano islands in the Pacific, situate 4 deg. south of the Loochoo Archipelago. They are said to be well adapted for Japanese colonising purposes.

The floods at Toyama, in Japan, had most disastrous consequences, and it is calculated that 9,000 houses were damaged thereby.

A storm occurred on July 21 at Nagasaki, causing much damage and entailing the loss of eleven lives. At Ashiya a number of foreign vessels were lost, and their crews are missing.

A telegram from New York to the Standard, dated last Friday, states:—A commission, consisting of leading officers in the Chinese Army, has been ordered to proceed to England to study the English Army rifle, to compare it with the Austrian Mannlicher, to choose the superior weapon, and order a supply of five hundred thousand, the delivery to begin within three months. As China already possesses fifty thousand rifles of the English type, except that the calibre is .43 instead of .315, the choice of the English model is probable. Notwithstanding the temptation offered by such an unprecedented contract, the Lee Company would be unable to deliver that number of rifles of the smaller calibre in less than nine months, as they would have to construct special machine tools. Hence China must accept the larger calibre, or forego the English type, the Lee Company being under obligation not to duplicate the English calibre. The Chinese Commission are impressed with the importance of rearming the entire army, as a step necessary to the maintenance of the empire.

We are glad to learn from a private but reliable source in Hankow (says the N.C. Herald) that the Viceroy, in response to the energetic representations of H.M.'s Consul, Mr. Chris. Gardner, has ordered the Wusueh case to be reopened, in order that the rioters, and especially those who assaulted the ladies and children, may be dealt with more satisfactorily. This has obliged H.M.S. Archer to await the arrival of a relief.

China seems to be getting on here and there in streaks. We read in a China paper:—The Survey Office has hitherto only made preparations for what it intends to do after the hot weather. A corps of twenty students has been selected who are to be trained in surveying and measuring methods, and in finding longitude and latitude. In the present state of China it is obvious that these methods will necessarily be mere rules of thumb, but under the able superintendency of Mr. Seu, a thoroughly competent native mathematician, we may hope that some of these men will be awakened into real interest. The survey of the province probably commences in September.

The most noteworthy development, however, is the opening of the School of Mines. The authorities have at last seen their way to utilising the high technical accomplishments of their foreign staff in training a body of young men in chemical analysis. The fire-brick furnace chimney has for nearly a year been a prominent feature of the neighbourhood near the parade-ground. Conservatives who hear the daily rattle of the foreign artillery and the foreign rifles in practice there, and then see this province reeking with the gases of irons, manganese, coppers, and coals torn from the bowels of the outraged Chinese earth, may well have groaned with the conviction that their Celestial land had gone impiously mad with the outlandish fashions of countries beyond the four seas. Their groans, however, are stifled when they find a new opening for their sons in life. At the beginning of this month (July) a start was made with twenty-two students who have residence, lecture-hall, and a roomy—if architecturally unambitious—laboratory with tables and drawers. The teaching staff is composed of Professor H. H. Robinson, M.A., F.C.S., of Magdalen College, Oxford, and Mr. F. B. Parkinson, Assoc. Royal School of Mines. The former of these gentlemen came out originally to the contemplated Imperial College at Canton, a scheme which on the removal of H.E. Chang Chih-tung was projected in vague outline on to the plane of this province and is now only taking definite shape. The school is fitted out with a good set of materials and instruments, though for a smaller number of pupils than those now entered. The Viceroy has thus secured the most thorough practical and theoretical instruction, and we congratulate the city and province on this new agency for the destruction of fungshui and the development of its mineral wealth.

The initial works for the Ta Ye railway are being pushed on. The road has been surveyed, the station at the Iron Mine end and the embankment are being rapidly constructed. It is rumoured that foreign wheelbarrows are more appreciated by the country folk for private use than for Government public works, and that the stakes for marking the road prove too useful to be allowed to remain in situ; but these are trifling misadventures which might be expected, and their humour relieves the monotony of country life in summer. The rails are on their way out, and it is hoped that the sixty li to near Huangsikang will be complete and ready for use in less than twelve months. The iron ore for whose transport the railway is being erected is known to be exceedingly rich.

The Daily Press of July 15, commenting on the case of the oil merchant and the French police, remarks that when M. Broyis advocates union among foreigners, he forgets that "the French have refused to unite with the other nationalities at Shanghai in the building up of a cosmopolitan settlement, and have taken up a position which is fraught with danger to foreigners in general." It reiterates its formerly expressed doubts as to the value of a continuance of the co-operative policy, and believes that with a strong Minister at Peking, we should do better to fight for our own hand. "Under present circumstances, and with a weak Minister, we are made the cat's paw for other countries."

Relating to the telegram of Lord Knutsford announcing the withdrawal of the arrangement for recognising a Chinese consul at Hong Kong, the China Mail makes these remarks:—The withdrawal of the proposed Chinese Consulate in Hong Kong would seem to indicate that the Foreign Office is becoming alive to the real character and value of the Chinese Government. The recent riots, and the evident helplessness of the authorities in dealing with them, have perhaps tended to open the eye of the Imperial Government. A Chinese consul in Hong Kong would occupy a position occupied by no other consul in the world. It is practically impossible to distinguish Hong Kong-born Chinese from ordinary Chinese. The consul would therefore have under his protection about 211,000 inhabitants of the colony out of the total 221,500—that is, the whole population minus (in round figures) 10,500. In ordinary cases the number of foreigners in a country under consular protection is a very small proportion of the total population. Here, were the Chinese made foreigners—as they would be by the appointment of a Chinese consul—the proportion would be reversed.

The following resolutions were to have been submitted to a public meeting to be held in Hong Kong in connection with the appointment of a Consul to represent his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China in Hong Kong:—1. That this meeting views with the greatest astonishment and regret the action of the Foreign Office in sanctioning even experimentally the appointment of a Chinese Consul in Hong Kong without having in any way consulted the Hong Kong mercantile community, or taken their opinion in a matter so gravely affecting their interests. 2. That this community ratifies and endorses the opinions expressed in 1870 and in later years by the then Governors and Administrators of Hong Kong and by the merchants of those days, that the presence in Hong Kong of a resident Chinese Consul is most objectionable and dangerous, and this community protest vigorously against any such appointment being made or allowed. 3. That the presence of a Chinese Consul in Hong Kong will have a bad effect on the resident Chinese population, weakening their sense of the power and authority of the English Government, setting up in their midst a rival authority to which they will be encouraged to appeal on all possible occasions, tending to create a very dangerous "imperium in imperio." 4. That in face of the recent recrudescence of strong anti-foreign feeling among the Chinese throughout the Empire, it is most unfortunate that a centre should be set up round which any feeling of that sort existing among the heterogeneous mass of Chinese collected in this colony must necessarily gather. 5. That this meeting pledges itself to use all possible means to oppose the permanent appointment of a Chinese Consul in Hong Kong, and requests the Chamber of Commerce to watch closely over the interests of the community during the next twelve months.

The National Congress.—The gentlemen who run the National Congress are very clever: there is no knowing where to have them, says the Pioneer. Some little time ago, in making a passing reference to the report of the last annual meeting, we ventured to associate the opinions of the Introduction with the name of Mr. Digby, the salaried coryphæus of the movement. Upon this somebody pointed out that the Introduction was the work, not of Mr. Digby, but of Mr. A. O. Hume, the "General Secretary." This, says Mr. Digby, in the Congress paper India, is also a mistake. "Mr. Hume is not to be held accountable for the Introduction of the report. He may, for aught we know, have drafted it," but "the Introduction to each Congress Report passes through many hands." It is not to be held to represent the opinions of anyone in particular. We should think that people who dislike the sentiments of the Congress will be delighted to observe the eagerness that is thus shown by its leaders to disown the responsibility of its publications.

Coolies in British Guiana.—A Washington telegram of Aug. 28 says:—The Department of State has received an abstract of the report prepared by the Immigration Agent at British Guiana concerning the East Indian colony, which comprises one-third of the population and numbered 107,424 at the close of 1890. During the year eight ships brought 43 passengers and 4,575 immigrants. Of the latter 197 had previously resided in the colony and 115 in other colonies. The deposits of East Indians in the Government Savings Banks amounted to 55,539 dols. at the end of 1890, and the amount in the Immigrants' Postal Savings Banks was 10,000 dols. One estate owns 20,631 cattle and 5,326 sheep. During 1890 there were 1,530 deaths and 442 marriages. The birth rate shows a decrease of 534 over the previous year. The proportion of females to males among the indentured immigrants is 41 in 100, and among unindentured immigrants residing upon estates 54 in 100. There was only one murder in the course of the year. The Indian remittances amounted to 24,922 dols., and 2,125 returning immigrants carried with them 117,611 dols. in cash and 25,000 dols. worth of jewellery.

The Indian Institute, Oxford.—The foundation stone of the Indian Institute, Oxford, was laid by the Prince of Wales on May 2, 1883, and the Institute was opened on Oct. 14, 1884, by the Vice-Chancellor (Professor Jowett, Master of Balliol), with a well-stocked Indian Museum and Oriental Library, a full staff of teachers, and an endowment of 300l. a year granted by the University. The Institute has since then done excellent work according to the full extent of its possibilities. But the building situated in Broad Street, close to the Bodleian, could not be completed till the termination of the leases of the two adjoining houses, belonging to Merton College. These leases are now soon to fall in, and a sum of 8,000l. is wanted for the extension of the Institute. It is hoped that some of the Indian princes and many of our City Companies and others, who contributed so liberally towards the first half of the building, will generously help to complete it. Already the Maharaja of Travancore has sent 100l.; the Maharajee Surnomoyee, 1,000 rs.; the Mercers Company, 100 guineas; and Sir William Markby, of Oxford, 50l. Subscriptions are sent to Sir Monier Williams, Keeper and Curator, Indian Institute, Oxford.

Perak.—An interesting report on the condition of this protected Malay State, from the pen of the British Resident, has recently reached England. Although last year was one of the greatest commercial depression since the State passed under British protection, the financial position of the country improved, and at the beginning of the present year there was a credit balance of 2,104,987 dols. There was a decrease in the revenue, mainly owing to the failure of two of the leading Chinese monopolists to pay the stipulated rents, and the monopolies had to be resold at a great reduction. A railway of great importance to the State, known as the Kinta Valley Railway, has been commenced between the towns of Teluk Anson and Ipoh, which will absorb the present financial surplus. Up to a few years ago there was no system of land tenure in Perak, and land had no known value. People squatted where they liked, and local magnates, when they felt able, dispossessed them, or squeezed as much from them as they could.

A system of registration has now been introduced, and leases in perpetuity have been granted to the holders of land.

The Trade of Indo-China.—The Journal Officiel publishes the returns of the trade of Tonquin for 1890, and these returns show that, while there was a notable diminution in the imports of foreign products, there was an increase in the imports of French origin, the former having fallen from 680,000l. to 480,000l., while the latter increased from 263,000l. in 1889 to 356,000l. last year. The exports from Tonquin to France also showed an increase of 48,000l., while to other countries there was a falling off of 11,000l., and the French dwell with satisfaction upon the development of the transit movement between the Yunnan and Hong Kong, which they regard as indicating that Tonquin will become the exclusive trade route between China and its southern provinces when the financial condition of that colony admits of the Red River route being improved and regular services of navigation established. The coasting trade between the different ports on the coast of Annam and Tonquin is also becoming an important one, the increase for last year having been more than 90,000l. by comparison with the preceding twelve months.

Corea.—It is novel to hear of a country with ports opened to the trade of the world in which no vessels under the British flag are to be seen from year's end to year's end. This, however, is the case with Corea, where there are four ports opened to foreign trade, and where the volume of shipping entering last year was over 300,000 tons, not one of which was British. The greater part was Japanese, there were some Norwegian and German vessels, but no more. Strange as this seems, it is nevertheless easily explained. Corea has no communication with the outer world save through China and Japan. Chefoo in the one case and Nagasaki in the other are the entrepôts for Corean trade with the rest of the world. There are scarcely any foreign merchants in Corea, the middlemen there being Chinese and Japanese. From an early period Japan has had treaties with Corea, while China had the natural right of a suzerain to trade. Hence such Corean trade as there is fell into their hands before foreign countries ever secured treaties at all. The Chinese and Japanese mercantile houses in Corea are branches of native establishments in China and Japan, so that a bale of cotton goods, for example, sent out from Great Britain goes to Chefoo or Nagasaki, is there sold to a Chinese or Japanese merchant, who forthwith passes it on to his agent in Corea for sale to the consumer. From an early period also the Japanese have had a subsidised line of steamers running between China and Japan on the one hand and Corea on the other, and have thus easily succeeded in monopolising the small carrying trade which exists. The Norwegian and German vessels are small sailing ships—of which there are none under the British flag in the China Sea—chartered by Japanese and Chinese at low rates to carry cargoes of coal, chiefly from the Japanese mines. The Japanese line of steamers owes its subsidy from the Government wholly to political considerations. A few years ago a British steamer ran regularly from Shanghai to Corea; it was owned by the wealthiest firm in the East, but it was soon withdrawn, as it was found that there was no cargo worth the carrying. When Corean trade increases, as it seems likely to do now, the British flag will no doubt take its share in it. As it is, four-fifths of the imports to Corea are composed of British manufactured goods, and fully half the exports find their way to this country or its colonies.—Glasgow Herald.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS AND TROOPSHIPS.

The undermentioned officers are ordered to embark at Portsmouth in H.M.S. Euphrates to-day for Bombay:—

High-priced Teas.—Before we have had time to forget the fancy prices paid for certain choice Ceylon teas in London, a similar transaction is reported with respect to India tea, and in Calcutta. At a recent sale a particularly handsome parcel was offered, composed exclusively of tips, the produce of the Nassau Tea Company, Limited, Kangra Valley, and bids of 15rs., 20rs., and 40rs. a pound were made respectively for three breaks. These bids were refused, and the teas were shipped to London. The parcel, consisting of sixty pounds, took the garden manager, Mr. R. M. Nash, three months to make, and is described as the finest tea ever offered for sale in Calcutta.

The Flat Pea.—It is understood that the Secretary of State has ordered an experiment to be made in India with the Lathyrus Sylvestris, or flat pea, formerly a wild plant of the same order as peas or vetches, but which has been discovered to be a valuable forage production, by sowing some lands in Oude and the North-West with the seed. Succulent fodder that will grow and thrive in poor soil, under such conditions as are now harassing some of our southern districts, would be a boon to the impoverished tenants and starving cattle of the distressed centres, the value of which it would be impossible to overrate. It is claimed for this new plant that it is especially suitable to a dry climate, as it can resist the most unusual drought; it requires no manure; will grow on the same soil year after year, and will flourish on waste stony land where nothing else will, and improves rather than deteriorates the soil. It has been successfully tried in Ireland, Germany, Australia, and South Africa, and, says the Madras Times, if all that is said of it is true, should soon become much sought after in this land of impoverished tenantry and underfed cattle.

LONDON: TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1891.

THE CENTRAL ASIAN DANGER.

THE Anglo-Indian Press, it is easy to see, is at the present moment more than usually perturbed at the prospect of a Russian advance in Central Asia. Not so many years ago, any symptom of uneasiness in this quarter would have been derided as Nervousness, or as indicating nothing more than the readiness of a military community, tired of inaction, to scent the battle from afar. But the day has passed when Russophobia was regarded as a peculiar form of lunacy. Both in England and in India it is recognised that the proximity of the Russians to the British frontier, or to the frontiers of States under British protection, constitutes an ever-present menace to the peace of the British Empire. It is of the utmost importance that the development of the situation should be most carefully watched; that we should be unceasingly on the alert for any fresh enterprise or activity on the part of our rivals, and that no decided move should take us unawares. Of late there have been quite a variety of reasons for believing that something like another Central Asian crisis is at hand. In the first place we have the uneasiness shown, as already noted, by our Anglo-Indian contemporaries, some of whom have published articles—more or less inspired, we are inclined to think, by the Indian Foreign Office—which deserve even more than the attention they have received from journalists and statesmen in this country. Many rumours of Russian activity have reached Bombay, Calcutta, and Allahabad; and although we are aware how easily news from Central Asia is sometimes concocted in Indian bazaars, the articles referred to are obviously founded on far more trustworthy information. In the next place, the anxiety of observers in India is coincident with a similar anxiety in well-informed circles at home. The report that the Russians contemplate the construction of a branch line of railway from Dushak on the Trans-Caspian line to Sarakhs, first reached the ears of the English public; while it is from the Allahabad Pioneer that we first hear of GENERAL KUROPATKINE's recent intrigues in Herat. The story about the despatch of a Russian expedition, one part scientific and three parts political, was told almost simultaneously in England and in India. The Russians, indeed, seem to have made no mystery of this enterprise; though it is curious to note that the Russian papers as a rule are saying very little just now about the progress of affairs in Turkestan and the Trans-Caspian. The Journal de St. Pétersbourg, the recognised organ of the Russian Foreign Office, has maintained an unusual reserve for some time past.

We are inclined, however, to lay most stress, not on such news as has actually transpired in regard to Russian activity in Central Asia, but on the symptoms, everywhere apparent, of general uneasiness in Europe. We must argue from probabilities. If the state of European politics points to international tensions, we may predict with confidence that Russia is more than ever on the watch for an opportunity in Asia. And indications of such tension may be seen everywhere. The Franco-Russian rapprochement, the keen attention paid in St. Petersburg to the GERMAN EMPEROR's latest utterance, the stories of Russian intrigue at Constantinople, and the reports from more than one source of military and naval preparations in Southern Russia, all point in the same direction. That Russia will not be in a state of perfect readiness for war for another two years or more is of course generally admitted. But it does not follow that she will be able to wait and to hold her hand until she is ready; nor is it by any means certain that it would be to her advantage to wait. Right or wrong, Russian politicians may prefer not to give other nations time to perfect their preparations. Moreover, we must always take account of the possibility that Russia may be induced to precipitate the crisis, not by considerations of expediency as regards her readiness or unreadiness for war, but by the pressure of internal commotion. On the whole, then, there are grounds for saying that the present state of European politics points to a possible and even probable disturbance of the peace of Europe, and for expecting, as a necessary result of such disturbance, a development of Russian designs in Central Asia; while at the same time we have independent evidence to show that such a development is actually in progress.

To descend, however, from generalities, it may be as well to consider for a moment the more immediate significance of the report that the Russians are preparing to construct a railway to Sarakhs. It is a feasible project, and there are no great engineering difficulties in the way. The whole country has been thoroughly explored and surveyed; and the work might be completed in a few months. It has been talked of at odd times for the last five or six years. It does not follow, however, that the line, when made, will be used for no other purpose than for the conveyance of troops, or that the Russians will straightway get ready to carry out their designs on Herat. Russian railways in Central Asia are not purely strategic lines; and even if the CZAR's anxiety to secure peace were sincere and could be realised, we should still believe that sooner or later the railway to Sarakhs would be constructed. It would be used, if not for strategic purposes, as a commercial line; and as a commercial line it would pay. It would enable Russia to command more certainly than now the markets of Northern Afghanistan, and it would be a notable step towards the extension of her influence by pacific means, in the dominions of the AMEER ABDUL RAHMAN, as well as in Persia. What is to be England's reply to this move? Whether we regard it as strengthening Russia's military power or as giving her a commercial advantage, there is no doubt that something ought to be done. There are two projects which we ought not to lose sight of. There is the Candahar Railway and the railway to Seistan. In the House of Commons, when the subject was recently ventilated, only the Candahar Railway was mentioned, and there is no doubt that the Indian Government would be in a stronger position, from a military and political, as well as from a commercial point of view, if the rails could be laid down between Chaman and the city of Candahar. But there may also be reasons why this project should be kept on the shelf till the season appears more propitious. It has been said in the House of Commons and elsewhere, that since the AMEER ABDUL RAHMAN draws a lac of rupees a month from the Indian Treasury, and since he has been encouraged to rely on English aid against external aggression, we should be justified in insisting on his consent to any measure which may be likely to promote our interests. It appears to be forgotten, however, that our bargain with the AMEER has always been in some respects a one-sided bargain. We are only bound by the agreement made by LORD RIPON, and that agreement has rather tied our hands. It does not permit interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan; and while we can only mildly protest when the AMEER puts a heavy transit duty on Indian merchandise, we cannot insist on the construction of the Candahar Railway on the ground that it would be an advantage to British commerce. When it is required for strategic purposes it can be laid down at a moment's notice, and with the knowledge of this fact we must rest content. But there is another railway project to which the AMEER could have nothing to say; we mean the project for a railway from Pishin to Seistan, which would take a route outside Afghan territory. This has been advocated by high authorities both in England and in India, and it is curious that it should not have been referred to, in the recent discussion in Parliament, as a means of counter-acting any injury we might suffer by the extension of the Russian railway to Sarakhs.

This would be a good opportunity perhaps for adding a word on the necessity of caution in dealing with news of Russian movements in Central Asia. Some of our Anglo-Indian contemporaries are a little too ready to publish intelligence which can only tend to obscure the situation. What is needed is trustworthy news, checked, where possible, by a reference to reports received from official sources. The HON. GEORGE CURZON, the other day, explained that his knowledge of certain events in Central Asia was derived, not from confidential despatches, but from the Indian papers. It is to be feared that this was anything but a guarantee of accuracy.

OUR NORTH-WEST FRONTIER RAILWAYS.

As our readers are aware, frontier officers in India have been convinced for some time past that we ought to have an alternative route to Quetta; a line which could be used in the event of breaks on the Hurnai and Bolan lines. Nor has the Government of India been blind to the necessities of the situation, and various projects have been carefully considered. The Bolan Pass railway has always been more or less of a makeshift; and it is extremely doubtful whether the Scind-Pishin railway can ever be protected from all possible risk of damage by floods. A summary of the various proposals that await a final decision was recently communicated to the Pioneer, by a correspondent signing himself "BALOOCHEE," whose letter we reprint in another column. The same journal had previously announced that Government has decided to relay the Bolan railway as a temporary line, and to maintain it until a new line can be constructed either along the Mashkaf route, or through the Zhob valley. "BALOOCHEE's" letter seems to have seriously alarmed a writer in the Standard who, in an article published by our contemporary in its issue on Monday, represents the Indian authorities as altogether overwhelmed by the apprehension of an imminent and unforeseen danger. Our railway communications with Pishin—"far from being perfect and secure, as had been supposed"—were sadly defective; and the British public would learn the real truth with dismay. As we have explained, however, no unforeseen danger has suddenly become manifest, and the Indian Government cannot be justly accused of ignoring obvious duties. It is not improbable that the best route may be found through a region only brought under British influence the other day. Possibly the writer in the Standard is unaware that serious breaks may sometimes occur on the main lines of railway in Northern India. Only a few years ago the capital of the Punjab was cut off for some days from all communication by railway with the North-West Provinces. The rails were either swept clean away by the flood or hung in festoons, and any movement of troops would have been impossible. It is, perhaps, to be regretted that before publishing such an alarmist article the Standard did not refer to the report issued recently by the Director of State Railways, who, besides describing what has been done to perfect the railway system on the Indian frontier, also indicates the nature and extent of the various improvements and extensions that are considered desirable. We must not let our Russian rivals imagine that, owing to accidents and blunders, the money spent on strengthening the defences of the north-west frontier has been thrown away to no purpose, and that we have nothing to show for all this expenditure but collapsible railway bridges and soluble embankments.

We fear that the inquiry set on foot by the late Postmaster-General as to the practicability of opening up the Salonica route for the passage of the Indian and Eastern mails, will lead to no satisfactory result for the present. Last Saturday week an attempt was made to throw the Vienna-Salonica train off the line near the station of Kaprulu, not far from Mitrovitz. It was discovered that ten metres of rails had been pulled up. Though a hundred cavalry soldiers have been scouring the country, no trace has as yet been found of the perpetrators of the outrage. Clearly the Porte is not able to give the requisite guarantee for the safety of the route, and until that can be assured it is premature to talk of using it for Indian mails and passengers. The Journal d'Italia says that the English Government has assured the Italian Cabinet that, even if the Anglo-Austrian negotiations with regard to the passage of the Indian mails end favourably, their passage via Brindisi will also be retained by England, as she desires to have a double postal line, making a junction in Egypt.

News travels slowly towards Printing House Yard, especially from the Far East, but it is some satisfaction perhaps to our fellow-subjects out there to learn that it sooner or later reaches its destination. In Friday's Times a paragraph refers to a very strong censure on the notorious and oft-condemned inertness of the present British Minister at Peking in regard to complaints addressed to him by British traders in China, which was contained in a despatch sent direct to LORD SALISBURY by the Chamber of Commerce at Amoy. The despatch in question was published in the Hong Kong Daily Press of June 2, and reached this country on July 22. The despatch was reproduced, with a note upon it, in the Homeward Mail of the latter date. The Times refers to it to-day as having been "recently published in the East." Better late, perhaps, than never, but had the Times published its paragraph a month ago the subject might have been mentioned in the House of Commons before it rose. Yesterday the Times published a telegram from Vancouver reporting a typhoon at Kobe, in Japan, "on the 16th instant," in the course of which it is alleged the British gunboat Tweed sank. The Tweed must be like a cat with a number of lives. She sank in Kowloon opposite Hong Kong on July 19, and the news came home in the papers by last mail. It was, besides, anticipated by telegraph.

In connection with the forthcoming penny ocean mail post, the P. and O. steamer Ravenna has, the Press Association says, been fitted up with a most elaborate travelling sorting cabin, where the mails will be sorted en route between Aden and Bombay. The Ravenna will afterwards be placed on the China station for a year, and the mails between the various ports will be sorted on board should the new arrangement answer. The mail-room occupies the place of what was formerly the second saloon, and every attention has been paid in the fitting up to the comfort of the postal officials.

COMMERCIAL.

AN ordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay was held on Aug. 6, when the Hon. Mr. L. R. W. Forrest, chairman, made a lengthy report on the bank's affairs. It came upon them, he said, as a pleasant surprise that they had been able to declare a dividend of 5 lacs, equal to 10 per cent. per annum on the capital, to place 50,000 rs. on the reserve fund, and to carry forward 1,48,451-15-10 rs. to the current half-year. Notwithstanding their large cash balances, they had earned a dividend that compared most favourably with that of their sister institutions in the other Presidencies. Attention was also called to the small record of losses incurred, which this year was under 3,000 rs. Private current accounts, for which no interest was paid, had increased some 75 lacs during the past twelve months, which was evidence of the confidence of Government and the public as well; but Mr. Forrest thought they deserved it, for their reserve fund now stood at 34 lacs, which was 34 per cent. of their capital, while that of the Bank of Bengal was only 24 per cent., and the Bank of Madras 28 per cent.

CALCUTTA, August 10.

The Directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on Aug. 4 reduced the rate of interest 1 per cent., making the official minimum 2 per cent.

The Bank's statement for the week ending August 4 shows the following changes in figures:—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 8,58,925		Decrease
Do. at Branches	8,99,555		Increase
Other Deposits	23,98,824		Increase
Post Bills	34,164		Decrease
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	2,14,917		Decrease
Loans	1,25,935		Decrease
Accounts of Credits	99,465		Decrease
Mercantile Bills	8,38,796		Decrease
Cash at Head Office	13,16,573		Increase
Do. at Branches	23,37,222		Increase

Analysis of the above figures shows a further decrease of over 34½ lacs in the public demand, made up as follows:—By an increase of nearly 24 lacs in "Other Deposits," together with a decrease of 1½ lacs in "Loans," about 1 lac in "Accounts of Credits," and over 8½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus a decrease of about ½ of a lac in "Post Bills." The Treasury balance at head office stands reduced by about 8½ lacs, while at the branches it is increased by nearly 9 lacs. The Bank's investments were realised to the extent of over 2½ lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 13½ lacs in the cash at head office, and of 23½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 7,00,83,165 rs., equal to 70·1 per cent. of the liabilities, as against a proportion of 68 per cent. last week.

EXCHANGE.—On France commercial bills at six months' sight 1·86½ fr. and 1·85½ fr. for three months' sight; on Mauritius private bills at sixty days' sight 2 per cent. discount. Rate for thirty days' sight mercantile bills on Hong Kong 2·18½ rs., and on Singapore 222½ rs. Bombay telegraphic transfer is quoted at par, and sixty days' sight bank drafts at 5/16 to ¾ per cent. discount.

TEA.—At the auctions held on Aug. 6 13,300 chests were sold. The commoner grades of Souchongs and broken teas were rather lower; other kinds fetched about the previous week's prices.

JUTE.—The market is in a very peculiar position just now. Prices of loose jute are daily advancing, and as a result balers are asking higher rates; while the home markets, although slightly better in tone, are fully 1 rupee below our parity. The unusually low state of the rivers is keeping back supplies, and in addition there is not sufficient water to steep the jute properly, hence nervousness of balers in selling. It now remains to be seen whether trade will improve in Dundee, and enable spinners to make higher bids. Meanwhile they are well supplied with old jute.

GUNNIES.—The market remains quiet, with only a moderate business passing.

HESSIANS remain firm. Sales of cloth are reported up to June 1892 at 6-8 rs. for 8 oz. 40", and 8-6 rs. for 10 oz. 50."

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—A fair amount of business has again been put through, and the market continues to maintain its healthy tone. The Presidency Banks have reduced their rates of interest to 2 per cent., a limit almost unprecedented in the annals of banking in India, which shows the abundance of unemployed capital; and on the face of this it cannot be expected that good sound stocks will fall; on the contrary, the wonder is that they do not increase in value.

In Jute Mill scrip the larger portion of the business reported has been confined to Fort Glosters and Howrah Ordinaries. On the opening days they showed signs of easiness, only to be followed by a renewed inquiry, and prices close firmer than ever.

In Gold scrip there has been quite a flutter over Sonapets, and prices have been fluctuating with marvellous rapidity, for scarcely an hour has the same quotation held good. A good report on the Patkoom Prospecting Syndicate property has been issued to shareholders, and these shares, as well as Patkoom Indigo and Tradings, are slightly stiffer. In tea Bengals appear to be in good request, and shares have been taken up as high as 70 rs. Jetinga Valleys, too, have still further advanced to 82 rs. There is also an inquiry for New Mutuals. Nothing of importance has been done in miscellaneous stocks, which are more or less firmly held as investment. A parcel of landing and shippings changed hands at 94 rs., and Bengal Paper Mills at a decline of 4 rs., owing to the report that they will not pay a dividend for the past half-year. In cotton Bowreahs have been asked for, and have firmed up some 3 rs., at which price transactions have taken place.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 per cent.

BOMBAY, August 13.

Trade in all directions remains without animation, and the quite exceptional cheapness of money continues to be a noticeable feature even in this dull season of the year. A moderate business in the aggregate has been done in cotton by local spinners, but purchases for export have been upon a very small scale. The wheat and seed markets have been steady in tone, but without much doing in either. In presence of falling silver, rates of exchange have been weak and declining; but they have latterly recovered from the lowest point touched, and close on previous level for Bank Bills, and 1-32d. lower for Private Paper. Government Paper is unchanged in Four per Cents. The demand for tonnage has increased, and the freight market has been firm in tone at advancing rates. Less has been doing in imports than previously, and the arrival business is still slow; but prices generally are maintained.

Imports.—PIECE GOODS.—Although advices have been received of some improvement at Manchester, no effort whatever has been produced in Bombay. Dealers are still willing sellers, but they have refused to make any reduction in prices of grey goods in presence of a falling Exchange and the rather better market on the other side. Meantime stocks are increasing daily.

YARNS.—Imported twist has again been taken to only a small extent in a quiet market; but prices show no change from those quoted on Aug. 6.

Imports of Piece Goods and Yarns.—The monthly figures show the shipment of plain cottons to Bombay during the month of July to have been over 4 million yards more than in June, but no less than 22½ million yards less than in July last year. In coloured and printed cottons also the shipments last month had been heavier than for June, but lighter, to about the same extent in the aggregate, than those for July 1890. In twist there was a decrease of 50,000 lbs., as against June's missions, but a like increase compared with those in the same month last year. The totals for the seven months of the present year show the large falling off of 44,300 yards in shipments of plain cottons, while coloured and printed cottons have been short shipped, compared with last year's missions, to the extent of 17½ million yards and 2½ million yards respectively. Shipments of twist have been half a million pounds in excess of those for the first seven months of 1890.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done in copper, and the price has advanced 4 a. per cent., but the tone of the market has been quiet. Yellow metal has been taken to only a small extent on the basis of previous rates in a quiet market. Iron has been steady at last rates, with a moderate business passing. Coal is easy.

Exports.—COTTON.—A moderate business was passing in this staple for local account when last mail left, but with hardly any demand for export, and the week closed with a quiet feeling, and less doing by the mills, but with prices quite unchanged. On the resumption of business on Aug. 10, no transaction took place for shippers' account, and demand from local spinners was slack, but the tone of the market was steady, and prices were put up 1 r. to 2 rs. per candy; and on the following day there was a better inquiry from the mills and a little from exporters. Thereafter, however, demand fell off again, and only a small business was done, the market remaining steady at previous quotations.

WHEAT has not attracted much attention from shippers, notwithstanding the tenure of the more recent advices by wire from the other side, and only a moderate business has been passing from day to day. Prices, however, were quite unaltered till the 12th, when an advance of half an anna per cent. in Delhi took place.

SEEDS also have been steady on most days, with business on a small or moderate scale.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

The Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep, WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cures short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—THE IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBSTANTIAL IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, St. Russell-st., W.C.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Aug. 18; Madras, Aug. 19; Bombay, Aug. 21.

Although the mail was due at the Post Office at four o'clock this morning, our files were not fully delivered until midday.

There will be no Chapter of the Star of India or of the Indian Empire at Calcutta this cold weather.

A Reuter telegram says the Viceroy will leave Simla on Oct. 14, and will return to Calcutta at the end of November. Lord Harris's visit to Simla is of a purely personal character.

The Government offices are ordered to close at Simla on Oct. 29, and to reopen at Calcutta the following week.

The Simla Fine Arts Exhibition was opened by Lady Lansdowne on Aug. 17, General Brackenbury delivering an interesting speech on the occasion.

Lord Wenlock, speaking at Perampore on Sept. 4, a Times telegram says, said that, after a minute and careful inquiry, he was satisfied that the condition of the people in the distressed districts was much better than had been represented. He had found no signs of famine, though in many places there were scarcity and distress. He severely criticised Mr. W. S. Caine's letter to a London evening paper on Aug. 10, saying that from personal inspection he was able to assert that almost every word was absolutely and wantonly untrue, and he did not know whom to blame most, Mr. Caine or his correspondent. He thought it wrong for public men to sit down in England and write such things of the Government in a time of great anxiety.

The Madras Mail gives a direct contradiction to the statements regarding the condition of the people in Chingleput and North Arcot which were made in Mr. Caine's letter. The Mail characterises them as false in very emphatic terms.

General Prendergast's successor in the Mysore Residency has not yet been settled, but we (Pioneer) believe the choice lies between Colonel Henderson, superintendent of the Thaggi Department, and Mr. Cuningham, deputy secretary in the Foreign Department. It would be difficult to replace the latter at present. The vacancy will not occur until October, so a decision may possibly be delayed.

Dr. Rake, of the Leprosy Commission, has returned from Cashmere, and, together with Dr. Buckmaster, leaves for England shortly. Dr. Kanthak remains at Simla to complete the report, which is making satisfactory progress.

Lady Havelock has applied to the Dufferin Fund for a female doctor for Ceylon. It is desired that the lady appointed should know Tamil.

Much regret is felt at the sudden illness of Captain Willcocks, who recently arrived at Simla. Captain Willcocks was Chief Transport Officer of the Manipore Field Force. He has been promptly attended to, and the best hopes are entertained of his early recovery.

The younger Raja of Calastry has filed a suit against the present Raja for partition of property.

The Mohurum in Bombay and Calcutta passed off quietly.

A big conference, it is said, is shortly to be held by the Public Works Department and military authorities with reference to the future operations which Government intend to carry out on the frontier so far as military and defensive works are concerned. It is an open secret, asserts the Lahore paper, that opinions on the subject are by no means in accord; so the sooner the various questions are settled the better.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times says an adjourned public meeting of the inhabitants of Madras to protest against the Small Cause Court Bill, held on Sept. 4, was marked by great unanimity. All the resolutions were passed, and there seems to be no doubt that the measure is disapproved either in toto or in its present form.

What promises to be a sensational case, the same correspondent says, began at the Calcutta Police-court on Sept. 4. On the application of counsel for the Nizam of Hyderabad, a warrant was issued for the arrest of Mr. Jacob, a dealer in precious stones, the charges being criminal breach of trust and criminal misappropriation in respect of moneys intrusted to him for the purchase of the diamond known as the "Imperial," and valued at 46 lacs of rupees. A warrant was also issued to search the house and office of the accused at Simla for the stone.

The Secretary of State some eighteen months ago gave sanction to the railway programme up to March 1894, but, owing to certain changes, the programme is now being reconsidered in Council.

It is probable that a railway will be made from Moghul Serai to the Soane river. The question of its extension onwards to the Palamow coalfields still remains to be settled. The bridging of the Soane will involve an outlay of 25 to 30 lacs.

From the close of the monsoon an accelerated time-table will be introduced on the Bengal-Nagpore Railway, enabling the Calcutta-Nagpore mails to travel to and fro on the direct route. The Bombay and Calcutta through mails will be carried on this line sooner or later.

It is likely that the branch line from the Rangoon Mandalay Railway to Myingyan on the Irrawaddy will be taken in hand next cold weather if funds are available.

A remarkable increase occurred in the land trade of British India during the month of April as compared with the corresponding period of previous years. Whereas in April 1889 the total trade amounted to 64 lacs and in April 1890 to 69 lacs, in the present year it rose to nearly a crore—an increase of about 33 per cent. In Bengal alone the expansion of trade amounted to over 4 lacs; but the greatest relative increase was in Sind and British Beloochistan—from less than 2 lacs in April 1890 to over 11 lacs in April 1891.

According to a Dalziel telegram, the final forecast of the Agricultural Department on the jute crop states that, owing to the extremely unfavourable weather, the quantity of jute that will be available for export is estimated at 35 per cent. less than that of last year.

The rainfall returns up to Aug. 13 show how unequally the monsoon has extended to the Himalayas. Darjeeling, on the above date, was still nearly 19 inches below its normal fall from June 1, and Mussoorie had a deficiency of some 25 inches. Simla, in consequence of the late heavy rain, showed but the small deficiency of 3 inches, while Murree was short by over 9 inches. Ranikhet, on the other hand, was 3½ inches in excess. Since Aug. 13 there has been almost continuous rain in the eastern and central Himalayas.

An Allahabad correspondent writes on Aug. 20:—Everything is quiet on the Sarna Range, but reports are still current of the Mudalis trying to excite disaffection among the Afridis, but fortunately without success.

The Coorg Planters' Association is trying to obtain through the Government the services of a specialist to report on the mineral resources of the province.

The following candidates were successful at the recent examination for appointments in the Indian Medical Service:—

The Kunwar of Rajpipla—one of the native States in the presidency of Bombay—has just returned to London from Scotland, and has left for the Continent, en route for India. The Prince expresses himself delighted with his trip, and looks forward to paying another and a longer visit to England.

Prince Damrong, brother of the King of Siam, arrived in London on Sept. 3.

Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, who came home on leave to attend the marriage of Prince and Princess Aribert of Anhalt, and afterwards went to Germany, is expected to proceed to India shortly in order to rejoin the 1st battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps.

M. Baross, the Hungarian Minister of Commerce, says a paragraph in the morning papers, on Sept. 5 received Colonel Rich, the English Railway Inspector, and Mr. H. B. Harvey, in charge of the Indian mails, in order to discuss with them the proposed new route for the Indian mails via Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Salonica. The English Post Office will want six railway carriages a week for this purpose, and, of course, stipulates for a regular service. Minister Baross promised every support in his power, and the English delegates are now going on to Salonica, which, in the event of the arrangement being carried out, would eventually acquire great importance, taking the place hitherto filled by Brindisi as the extreme European port of arrival and departure for the mails for India, Australia, China, Egypt, and Eastern Africa.

Colonel P. D. Jeffreys, late Connaught Rangers, left England on Sept. 4 for India, to resume duty as Assistant Adjutant-General at Quetta.

Miss L. R. Cooke, a lady holding high medical diplomas, sailed on Sept. 3 for Seoul, the capital of the Corea, where she has undertaken to open, in connection with the mission there, a hospital and dispensary for women and children. Such an institution is, it is said, much needed there, as nothing of the sort exists at present.

The member for Battersea, Mr. Octavius Morgan, will make another trip to the East in the autumn. According to present arrangements, he will embark for Calcutta on Oct. 1, returning to England early next year. Mr. Morgan has, it is said, travelled all over India at least twice previously, but he is not given to pose in the House of Commons as an authority on the difficult problems of British rule.

The London Chamber of Commerce is already making arrangements for the Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, which is to be held in May or June of next year. It will be the second of its kind, the first having been held at the time of the Colonial and Indian Exhibition of 1886. The Chamber has caused letters of invitation to be despatched to all our colonies and to the Indian Chambers, and circulars are in course of preparation addressed to the Chambers at home. It is proposed to discuss, among other topics, the commercial relations of the mother country with the colonies, boards of conciliation for labour disputes, the codification of the commercial law of the empire, emigration and colonisation, and an imperial system of penny postage.

The Parsee colony in London intends to celebrate by a dinner the pateti, or New Year's Day, which falls on Sept. 17, in Bombay, where the bulk of Zoroaster's followers reside. The pateti is observed by Parsees with great rejoicings, accompanied by much almsgiving. The pateti, which literally means "fallen into repentance," was originally kept on the last day of the year. Mr. Dorabhoj Framjee, author of "The History of the Parsees," says:—"On this day the Zoroastrian rises earlier than usual, makes ablutions, sometimes even undergoes the ceremony of purification called the nahan ceremony, dresses himself in new clothes, and offers prayers, imploring the mercy of Ahura Mazda, and beseeching the divine blessing upon himself and his family. He begins his prayers by extolling the powers of God, and then asks forgiveness for his bad actions during the past year; and, finally, with offerings of sandalwood he attends the Atash-Behram—the chief fire temple—and again prays to recover the love and mercy of the deity, who is ever beneficent towards his faithful creatures. His prayers over, he offers alms to the poor priests and indigent people. The rest of the day is spent in enjoyment with the other members of the family. On this day visits of New Year's congratulations are paid and received." At the visits spoken of by Mr. Dorabhoj the hamma-i-jour, or joining of hands, is invariably performed.

The Malabar, which takes out two batteries of artillery to India on Sept. 16, made a successful trial of her engines at Portsmouth yesterday, with ordinary coal and stokers, after repairs. In addition to being fitted with new indiarubber valves, she has had her boiler tubes made good and the leaks in her furnaces caulked.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

We have received the following telegrams from the India Office for publication:—

"From Governor, Madras, Sept. 4.—Good rain fell at the beginning of this week in several of the districts which have given most cause for anxiety. Ganjam and Anantapore are practically safe, and Nellore much improved. Worst parts of Cuddapah, Chingleput, and North Arcot received fair rain, which will improve pasturage and water-supply, and enable ploughing and sowing to progress. Much change in condition of people not to be expected until character of north-east monsoon declares itself. Parts of Bellary, South Arcot, Coimbatore, and Salem still give cause for anxiety; and season unfavourable in dry parts of Tanjore and in Madura. Season fair or good in other districts. Seven thousand two hundred and twenty employed on works in Chingleput, 14,845 in North Arcot, about 5,000 in Coimbatore, 3,763 in Nellore. Number on gratuitous relief 1,729 in Chingleput, 3,597 in North Arcot. No material change in prices."

"From Viceroy, Sept. 5.—Agricultural prospects. Weather seasonable generally. Agricultural operations generally progressing favourably in most provinces. There is cause for anxiety regarding Ajmere. Decided improvement in Upper Burma. Good rain has fallen. Affected districts Madras, Hyderabad, show signs of improvement. Prices rising or stationary."

THE Madras Times Ooty correspondent confirms the news printed a day or two ago in the Daily Telegraph. He writes:—I hear on the best authority that an engagement is given out between Miss Mary Dormer, daughter of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and Mr. Rees, C.I.D., Private Secretary to his Excellency Lord Wenlock. The engagement is one in every way approved of by all parties concerned, and the marriage is to take place next month. We may, therefore, hope to see a pretty wedding up here shortly. It is many years since a daughter of a Commander-in-Chief was married from Ootacamund.

At St. Michael's, Polwate, Ceylon, on Aug. 8, Edward Lambert Boyd, eldest son of Dr. J. Boyd Moss, of Brighton, was married to Ethel Isabel, second daughter of Major-General and Mrs. La Touche, of Nelledith House, Bambalapitya. This was one of the largest and most beautiful weddings that have taken place in Colombo for many years, the guests numbering over 150, among whom were many up-country friends. The bride arrived a few minutes after two o'clock, accompanied by her father, the general, in full uniform, who gave her away, and followed by her three bridesmaids. Miss Havelock, the chief bridesmaid, was beautifully dressed in white silk, trimmed with pale yellow, and wore a wreath and veil. The other two, Miss Alice and Miss Ethel Patterson, had on very pretty frocks of white cashmere and green silk, with large hats. They all carried baskets of roses. The best man was Mr. Felix Broun, Mr. A. S. Berwick and Mr. Crawford Hill being groomsmen. The bride, who looked extremely well, wore a lovely gown, the bodice and train of which were composed of white satin, with embossed velvet design, the front of the skirt being of satin and watered silk in stripes. The high Medici collar was finished off with a frill of chiffon, as was also the bodice, and the skirt was edged with a thick white silk cord. She carried a magnificent bouquet, and her ornaments consisted of a diamond bracelet, the gift of Lady Havelock, and a blue sapphire and diamond brooch and pendant, the gift of the bridegroom. The bride's mother wore a very handsome dress of dark blue duchesse satin and brocaded silk, and a bonnet to match. After the ceremony a reception was held at Nelledith House, the residence of Major-General La Touche. Sir Arthur Havelock, being unable to attend, the duty of proposing the health of the happy pair devolved on the Rev. C. T. Boyd.

The marriage of Miss Mabel McIver and Mr. E. C. Pottinger, R.A., was celebrated on Wednesday, Aug. 5, at St. Andrew's Church, Kurrachee. By half-past four, the time appointed for the ceremony, the church was full of people, and shortly afterwards the bride, followed by her two little nieces as bridesmaids, came up the aisle on the arm of her brother, Mr. Charles McIver. She looked extremely well in a very pretty dress of white satin, trimmed with orange blossoms and a tulle veil and orange-blossom wreath. The bridesmaids wore dresses of white China silk and hats covered with drawn silk, the same as their dresses. After the ceremony Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played with great spirit by Mrs. Watson, and the bride and bridegroom left the church in a carriage drawn by four Artillery horses, with two of the Royal Artillery officers on the box and two riding postillion-wise on the near horses. The wedding party assembled at the house of Mr. D. McIver, and, after the large collection of handsome presents had been duly admired, Mr. James, the Commissioner, proposed the health of the young couple in an excellent speech, in which he referred to the great military reputation of the bridegroom's great-uncle, and said he felt sure that Mr. Pottinger would follow in the steps of his illustrious relative. Mr. James also said that the latter had been specially noted for his modesty and his pluck, but that the bridegroom had shown a great deal of the latter quality and not much of the former in carrying off from Kurrachee one of its most charming unmarried ladies. The Commissioner also spoke of the great affection and respect with which all the inhabitants of Kurrachee regarded Mrs. McIver and her family.

On Aug. 18 a native entertainment was given by Lord and Lady Harris at Ganeshkind. About 300 guests were present, including about forty Europeans. Among the latter were Major-General and Mrs. Blundell, Major-General and Mrs. Budgen, Lieutenant-General and Mrs. Pottinger, Colonel Westmacott, C.B., D.S.O., Colonel and Mrs. Heath, and the other European officers of the several native regiments in the station, with their families. The guests commenced to arrive shortly before 9.30 P.M., and were received by the aide-de-camp in waiting, and presented to their Excellencies Lord and Lady Harris in the large and handsome ball-room; which was brilliantly lighted. The native officers were presented by regiments by their respective commanding officers. They carried their swords in their hands, and his Excellency touched the hilts, the ceremony being exactly like what one sees at a regular Levée. Rao Bahadur Y. M. Kelkar, the Oriental Translator, presented the other native ladies and gentlemen. His Excellency's band was in attendance, and played a capital programme of music. The grounds were very prettily illuminated with Chinese lanterns, &c., and altogether the scene was one of much brilliancy. The guests strolled about the grounds and listened to the music. A refreshment buffet was laid out in the adjoining verandah. The guests departed at about 11.30 P.M.

From Darjeeling the Pioneer correspondent writes:—We have Mr. Hart and the Chinese Embassy here still. The negotiations are most decidedly of a protracted and evidently of a somewhat complicated nature. People who ought to be well up on the subject say that the Chinese diplomatic swell, when he is in his own country, is about in power and official rank equivalent to a third grade deputy commissioner in the Indian Civil Service. They say the Chinese hinted at closing the "treaty ports" if the negotiations did not result in the Sikkim and Thibet trade compared with that of Hankow, Canton, &c. At all events, the negotiations are hanging fire very considerably. The purely local question is not a very big one by any means; but, as Mark Twain wrote, the "Heathen Chinese," as a general rule, has a card up his sleeve, and if his manners are childlike and bland, he is a very slippery customer to have any dealings with. Our Australian fellow-subjects, as well as our American cousins, found that out long ago. We Britishers appear to be rather slow in realising the true bearings of the situation, and not particularly astute withal.

From Quetta the Times of India correspondent writes (Aug. 8):—On July 14 we had a Fancy Dress Dance at the Institute. It was supposed to be in calico; but so many people had already got good dresses—and the rest, of course, got newer ones out of rivalry—that, considering the number of those present, the scene was as brilliant and various as at any balls I remember. The census showed a total of eighteen ladies and fifty-three men. It was one of our eight-anna weekly shows—such is the modest sum we subscribe to assist the Amusement Committee, who deserve the greatest praise for their exertions. Though nominally a Cinderella Dance, no one would consent to leave till half-past two. With regard to the dresses, being ignorant of the technique of millinery, it is with great diffidence that I select Miss Brooke-Meares's costume for first mention. She was a Greek Goddess straight from Olympus. Mrs. Bigg-Wither as Polichinel was excellent. Mrs. Dyson disguised her sex completely as a Bluecoat Schoolboy. Mrs. Barnes as a Peasant Girl looked worthy of a throne. Mrs. Peyton was a good representation of Mistress Priscilla. I must not omit mention of Mrs. Russell as an Incroyable. Among the men there were plenty of Fishermen, Captain Nugent and Mr. Buck being the smartest. Mr. Eardley-Wilmot challenged Mrs. Grundy as Lady Macbeth, in a robe de nuit, night-cap, and huge flat candlestick. Mr. Cubitt as a Polish Hussar and Mr. Roberts as a Pathan were good; and Mr. Hickie was a Nautical Sailor.

On the 27th, most of the station turned out for Lady White's birthday picnic, held in a grove four miles from Quetta. We enjoyed romping games before dinner and sit-down, though really no less romping ones after, the colonels showing themselves younger than the subalterns. Suffice it to say that we all enjoyed ourselves so much that it was very late before we bade our kind hostess "Good-night."

Someone writes of Bangalore, in the Madras Times, evidently in a pessimist vein. He says:—People are very fond of talking about Bangalore as "the Garden of India," about its lovely climate, its healthiness, its general advantages as a place of residence. The consequence of this is that Bangalore has obtained a reputation throughout India as one of the most desirable places you can possibly select to spend one's leave or holidays in. It would, however, be just as well if intending visitors knew a little more about this delightful Bangalore climate that they so yearn for. Let them ask some military doctor "who knows," what about the health report of the troops, and whether the hospitals have to be closed as entirely unnecessary in so charming a climate? His answer to you if he spoke out would be that Bangalore is, at the present time, and has been for several months, full of enteric and every sort of fever which it is possible to acquire, that there are no lack of small-pox cases, with an occasional dash of cholera, and that most people who spend any time in the "health resort" of Southern India complain of feeling what is best described as "cheap." There is no lack of amusement in Bangalore. Bands play almost every evening in Cubbon Park. Occasionally a band does not turn up; that is a nuisance; it has gone to play the "Dead March" in front of some soldier who has fallen a victim to the "healthiness" of the climate. You may hear this same "Dead March" more often than is pleasant nowadays in Bangalore. It is not one of the joyous echoes of the season; but, still, there it is. Civilians don't have a band to play in front of them to the grave, and so they are buried quietly, and, beyond perhaps a line in the paper, we don't hear anything about them. But still they die, and if Bangalore wasn't such an astonishingly healthy place we would say they are dying in rather large numbers at present. It is not pleasant work croaking, but even Mark Tapley was at length driven to declare that Eden wasn't "exactly healthy." Bangalore is not Eden any more than we are Mark Tapleys in a capacity for making the best of things. But one word we will speak to the wise and otherwise. Go to Bangalore for amusement, go there to spend your superfluous cash, but for Heaven's sake don't go for health, for they don't keep that article on the premises.

A correspondent sends the following to an upcountry paper, which he guarantees to be a verbatim et literalim copy of an estimate and bill of fare for a dinner for twenty persons sent to him by a khansama at a hill-station:—

Honoured Sir,—I will give this is article for dinner for all gentlemen, but each gentleman I will take 2 rs. and 20 gentlemen for ever I will give dinner if being 16 after account I will do charge 20 gentlemen, and if from 20 gentlemen more, I will taking extra charge 1-8. After some study the meaning of "Foling Baking" was ascertained to be Fowl and Bacon, whilst "Max pay" was found to mean nothing less than Mixed Pie. Two other well-known dishes have also been transformed from their ordinary names of Sardine Toast and Anchovy Eggs.

The Maharajah of Cooch-Bihar, in distributing the prizes to the students of the State College the other day, laid great stress on discipline. His Highness said:—"Most of our kindred institutions in India are, I fear, very badly disciplined, and our own here are no exception. Defiance to constituted authority; indifference, if not positive disrespect, to the master; rude, off-hand manners, showing no respect to age or to superiors, whoever they may be, are all very common nowadays. I have often noticed this myself, and whether it arises from the inherent shyness of nature, or from whatever cause it may be, it is a fact that most of you students take no notice whatever of persons who are your superiors socially or otherwise. It is impossible to think you really mean to be rude; but your want of manners leads one to suppose that such is the case. To this I wish to draw your particular attention."

PERSONAL.

WE (Times of India) hear that Lady Morland will bid farewell to Bombay on Sept. 24, when she will sail by the P. & O. ss. Ravenna for Melbourne. In Australia, which she visits so as to pick up her little daughter, she will only remain a fortnight, and will then proceed to England.

Mr. Krishna Row has been appointed sub-judge of Bangalore, vice Colonel Hill, retired.

Mr. Melhuish, Telegraph Department, has recovered from an attack of typhoid. He has returned to duty.

Mr. Trevor Plowden has accepted the acting appointment at Hyderabad. He takes six weeks' leave in Simla, and returns to Berar to make over charge.

Mr. F. Gladow, Deputy Conservator of Forests, has been attached to the office of the Conservator of the Forests, Northern Circle.

The directors of the Royal Alfred Sailors' Home at Bombay have elected Mr. F. W. Stevens, C.I.E., as their President, vice Captain Sir Henry Morland, Kt., deceased.

Mr. A. W. Cosserat, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, on leave, is posted to the headquarter station of the district of the 24-Pergunnahs.

Mr. J. L. Loushington has been appointed Divisional Inspector, Land Records and Agriculture, Southern Division, in room of Mr. F. W. Francis.

Mr. A. W. Crawley Boevey, C.S., has been appointed to do duty as Collector and District Magistrate, and District Registrar, Thana, and to be President of the Local Board. Mr. E. M. Pratt, C.S., also has been appointed to the same offices until relieved by Mr. Crawley Boevey.

When Colonel Skinner, Deputy Judge Advocate-General, returns from leave, and Colonel Prideaux, who is officiating, reverts to his appointment at Poona, Colonel Sheppard goes back from Poona to Allahabad. Colonel Chaplain, at Mian Mir, will then probably go on a year's leave.

Mrs. De Soysa, widow of the late C. H. De Soysa, has been granted by the Queen the rank, style, and precedence of a Knight Bachelor's widow. This honour is bestowed as a recognition of the liberality and benevolence of her late husband, and is a happy solution of the difficulty raised in Mr. De Soysa having died before he could receive the honour of Knighthood. Lady De Soysa has received the congratulations of a large number of native and European friends.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

The Hon. Robert Baillie Hamilton, of Langton, died at Langton House, Berwickshire, on Sept. 5, after a protracted illness extending over a period of two years. The hon. gentleman had been suffering from a chest affection which necessitated his spending the winter and spring in France. In July he returned to Langton in a very weak condition, and was seldom afterwards able to leave the house. He was the second son of George, tenth Earl of Haddington, by Georgina, daughter of the late Venerable Archdeacon Robert Markham, and was born in 1828. He entered the Army in 1847, serving in the Rifle Brigade during the Kaffir War. He was afterwards in the 16th Foot, and passed from that regiment to the 44th Foot, with which he served in the Crimean Campaign in 1854, receiving a medal with three clasps and Turkish and Sardinian medals. He subsequently served in India on the staff of Sir Colin Campbell and General Spencer, and took part in the China War in 1860, and retired as major in 1864. In 1861 he married Mary Gavin, eldest daughter of Sir John Pringle, Bart., of Stichill and Newhall, who, at the death of her mother in 1878, succeeded to the Langton estates. In 1874 Mr. Baillie Hamilton contested Berwickshire in the Conservative interest against the late Sir William (then Mr.) Miller of Manderston, who had sat for a few months in the Liberal interest, and defeated him by a majority of 74 votes. But in 1880 he was in turn defeated by Mr. Marjoribanks, the present member, by a majority of 278 votes. The deceased gentleman was much devoted to his Parliamentary duties, and took an active part in carrying through the House of Commons the Bill for the Abolition of Hypothec. He was amiable and universally esteemed. For ten years he was joint master with his brother, the Earl of Haddington, of the East Lothian and Berwickshire Foxhounds. The deceased gentleman, who is survived by Mrs. Hamilton, leaves no issue.

In Mr. J. H. Todd, who died at Tanna on Aug. 14, there has passed away one of the very ablest Revenue officers in the Bombay Civil Service, and (says the Times of India) one who, at the same time, succeeded in inspiring a feeling of regard and confidence in the minds of the various native communities amongst which it was his lot to be thrown. Educated at Eton, he passed the open competitive examination, at the early age of 18, in the year 1867, and two years later witnessed his arrival in this country and the commencement of his official career as a young Assistant Collector in the very same district and station to which, after many years of service in the Coast and Southern Districts of the Presidency, he returned but two or three months ago as Collector, and in which he died last Friday. A man of large brain and warm heart, and of singularly clear judgment, he was yet, perhaps, from his unobtrusive disposition, less known to the members of his own service and to the general public than might have been anticipated; but no one could look on his massive face, no one could listen to his discussion of any more or less knotty question, no one could hear his intimates speak of him and fail to realise that intellectually he was a man above the common, and one who possessed the power of inspiring a feeling of warm-hearted affection towards him on the part of those to whom he was best known. In Tanna Bazaar, when on Friday the news of his death became generally known, many of the shops were closed for the day; and the large and orderly native crowd which thronged the Tanna Cemetery on the occasion of his funeral on Saturday morning, when he was followed to the grave by a number of friends, including eight members of his own services, was an eloquent testimony to the fact that, short as had been his recent residence in the station in which he died, he had already in Tanna, as in other parts of the Presidency in which he had been stationed, established his reputation as a kind-hearted and just man; one who did his duty by the Government which he served, and by the District which as Collector he was sent to administer.

The death is recorded of an old and well-known resident of Bombay, Mr. T. M. Major, late Assistant Commissioner of Customs, who died at his residence in Nesbit Lane, Byculla, on Aug. 14, and was buried in the enclosure of the Roman Catholic Chapel at Sewree on the following morning. The deceased was well-known to the congregation of St. Mary's Church for his many charitable works in connection therewith, and his death (says a Bombay paper) will be regretted by the Roman Catholic community of Bombay. The funeral left his residence at eight o'clock in the morning, headed by the band of St. Mary's School playing the "Dead March in Saul," and followed by a large number of the priests and congregation of St. Mary's Church. The funeral service at the cemetery was read by the very Rev. Father Dalhoff, and was of a most impressive character. The coffin bore the following inscription, "Thomas Martin Major, died 14th August, 1891, aged 72 years."

Mr. Fowler, of the Indian Forest Department, has died at the General Hospital, Colombo, where he had been lying ill for some time.

Miss Kate Bromley, a young lady well known both in Bombay and Poona for her skill as an artist and her taste as a floriculturist, died on Aug. 17, at the Sassoon Hospital, Poona, of acute dysentery. For some time past she had supervised the business of her father, Mr. T. Bromley, an old and respected citizen of Bombay, and many of his private and public floricultural triumphs at shows, dinner-parties, &c., were the result of the exquisite taste possessed by the deceased lady. Great sympathy, says a Bombay paper, was expressed in Poona and in this city also, where the young lady's kind and genial manner had won her a host of friends, for her father and his family in their bereavement. The funeral was largely attended, among those present being noticed Mr. Lee-Warner, General and Mrs. Pottinger, and Colonel Hibbert.

THE PRESS PROSECUTION IN INDIA.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times of India writes, under date August 12 :—The Presidency Magistrate having refused the application made on behalf of the printer, the publisher, the manager, and the editor of the Bangabasi that they should be enlarged on bail, the four accused moved the High Court to-day for an order that they should be released on bail pending the proceedings instituted against them by Government. After counsel had been heard on both sides the Chief Justice, Sir Comer Petheram, passed an order that bail should be allowed; each of the accused on his own recognisance for 10,000 rs., with two sureties of 10,000 rs. each. This, for the four accused, means altogether recognisances to the extent of a lac and 20,000 rs., and is in its way an exceptional bail for India. Though the prosecution appear confident of success, the public, as a rule, seem to be of opinion that a jury would find it hard to convict; but the action of Government, if eventually ineffectual, will be found to have exercised a sobering influence on the vernacular press, as may even now be judged by the alteration in their style. On dit that a sum of 50,000 rs. has already been subscribed for the purposes of the defence, and that the required recognisances will be forthcoming. [They were subsequently found.]

The genesis of the Bangabasi case, says the Times of India, is said to be somewhat curious. A question having arisen whether the existing law furnished an adequate means of dealing with sedition, a legal member, contrary to general opinion, maintained the affirmative. It was thereupon resolved to take it as a test case, Sir A. Miller being allowed to select the subject matter for an action. In the event of failure of action, it is understood that the law will be altered, the change probably taking shape of a modification of section 124 of the Penal Code.

In reference to the above, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on September 6 :—Sir Alexander E. Miller, Q.C., the legal member of the Council, has written a letter to the Times of India contradicting a statement which has been made about him. He had nothing to do, he says, with selecting the articles which formed the subject of the recent press prosecution, and did not know that the Bangabasi was to be prosecuted till he saw it in the newspapers. It is unusual for a member of the Supreme Government to write to the press on public questions, but it may be pointed out that the letter need not imply, as might appear from a casual reading, any difference of opinion between Sir A. Miller and his colleagues. The prosecution was conducted under orders of the Bengal Government, and although, no doubt, the Supreme Government sanctioned the institution of a test case, the selection of the particular paper and articles was left to the local authorities and their legal advisers. There is reason to believe that an arrangement may be arrived at which will be thoroughly satisfactory to the Government and enable them to stay further proceedings.

THE "BANGABASI" ARTICLES.

FROM the complete text of the articles on which the Bangabasi prosecution was based, we have selected some extracts which indicate the general tendency of the argument—if argument it may be called—and are sufficient to give a general idea of the whole.

The first article is headed "Our Condition." It begins by pointing out the complete subjection of the Indian people to the English ruler, and goes on to say that the Viceroy, "Governor-General Lansdowne Bahadur," "in outspoken voice, loudly, with swelling bosom" had said in effect in the Legislative Council that they—the "uncivilised, barbarous, materialised Hindoo community"—are subject to the English race "who are civilised, full of manhood, devoted to religion, &c.," and must give way to their ideas, even if it involves the destruction of their religion. The writer then proceeds :—

A MODEL SOCIETY.

"The matter is serious : the Devas were defeated by the strength of the Danavas—is it by brute force that the English rule in India? We are always willing to honour the English because they are our rulers; we are always ready to obey their behests because they are royal mandates. We are capable at all times of showing our loyalty to the best of our ability. But, say, O English ruler! do you gain anything by inducing insincerity to enter into our loyalty? Your duty is to please the subject people. What object can you realise by rendering the subject Indian people to be discontented?—none, we know. Then say, O Prabhu! why hast thou planted in our life that poignant shaft, and so tried to diminish our esteem for you? You are now in the place of the King; you are therefore the King. Be he a barbarian, or a savage, or a person who behaves like a brute, still he who is in the place of the King is for the time King. We regard you as King; and of course we feel no inclination to call your nation a barbarous or a brutal one.

"But, O, Englishman, King of Kings! whether you permit us or not to say that we are superior to your nation in good morals, in gentle conduct, and in good education, our pride in our greatness in this will not easily leave (us). You also know it, and knowing it, does envy arise in your heart? The subjects are civilised, the subjects are well educated, the subjects are members of a model society, the subjects may not be superior to you in brute force, but they are superior to you by the might of their religiousness, of the organisation of their society, and of their usages and conduct. O King of Kings, Lord of the King of Kings, are you grieved to think of this? Say, say with openness of heart, is it for this that you are strongly desirous to destroy that civilisation of your subjects, that good education, that social organisation, and to place them on the same level as your own nation? If it is so, O Prabhu! then (better) declare it openly, and then destroy our all : destroy our caste, religion, and society; then we shall understand from what motives, for the accomplishment of what object, you are carrying out these measures. Otherwise, if you plant a sharp dagger in our breasts, under the influence of compassion and virtue, under pretence of doing good to others, under pretence of doing good to the subject people, we become bewildered, we cannot decide in what light to view you, how to understand you, how to contemplate your form."

WE ARE SLAVES, BUT LEAVE OUR RELIGION ALONE.

"And if, O Prabhu! such envy has not arisen in your mind, if you have entered on encompassing our ruin, only with the object of attaining your virtuous ends and of making your sway in India permanent—even if so, O Prabhu! we clasp our hands and entreat you to say so plainly. We will execute bonds binding ourselves to permanent slavery; you will not interfere with our religion, usages, observances, or society, and we shall be your servitors from generation to generation, for all time. Does such an apprehension arise in your mind that so long as the Indian's belief in his religion remains unshaken, unshakeable, your sway in India will never become permanent? You may by various means, by the deep-laid designs of politics, diminish the strength of the bonds of Indian unity, but you shall never be able to destroy them so long as the religion remains unshaken."

Next follows an article on

who is certainly not painted in flattering terms. In enacting the Age of Consent Act, it says, the English have been obliged to cast off the mask, "Now stands before us the severe, terrible, disgusting naked form of the Englishman. . . . As Seta was stupefied on seeing the great ascetic, wearing the garb of a mendicant, transform himself suddenly into the ten-headed, twenty-eyed King of the Rahshasas, so we have been stupefied by fear, by wonder, by contempt, by insult." "O Rama! O Rama! what terrible form! How fearful is its attitude! And in that attitude, how violent the dance and how deadly the subdued laugh which reverberates through half the universe! The leering eyes perpetually revolve like the burning wheel in the potter's kiln. And with a thousand tongues, in Mlechchha languages, with such words as please it, it is roaring incessantly. Oh! Madhu Sudana, King of Kings, is this our Ruler? Where are your right arms, carrying fearlessness, blessings, and mercy! This (form) is 'armed with a sharp sword, deadly like a comet.' This is all rifle and bayonet, spear and lance, thunder and Brahma's weapon. The musketry thunders, the cannons roar, and awful shrieks mingle with the subdued laughter proceeding from the terrible open mouth! What fearful combination, concordant and discordant, of the heroic, the disgusting, the wonderful, the terrible, and the severe! Is this the form of our Ruler?"

GENTLE IRONY.

The writer then proceeds :—"O Lord of Gods! or Lord of the Danavas, Dweller in the Universe, Brahma-Rakshasa, Fear of the World, how shall I address you? I do not know what form of address will conciliate you. O Englishman! you who hold yourself civilised from pride of the power of your arm! you who slander the Hindoos from the might of your gun! you who are utterly indifferent to your own improvement, who are eager for the improvement of others! we are sorely aggrieved! From mercy, from your 'humanity,' conceal your monstrous, terrible, revealed form, the terror of all! We cannot bear it. O English, be conciliated, show us your Divine form. We love your simple manifestation, your mild, beautiful form; your terrible revealed form we cannot bear. Show us any of your forms familiar to us, whether that of the Infinite Sucker-up of an infinite income and of an expansive trade; or that of the Governor, including all from the constable Bechu Ray to the mighty Viceroy, or that of the Protector of the Religion of the subjects in proclamations full of policy. The habit of a hundred years has taught us to endure these; but this new, fearful, deadly dark form of the Reformer of India we cannot bear. O Lord of Gods and Danavas! conceal this form; cover it with the mantle of toleration."

The Hindoos are afraid lest their religion should be destroyed, but the followers of the Sanatana religion can entertain no such fear; though the "conjurer and wielder of might has cast off his mask," the readers of Bangabasi are assured that their religion "the Great Destroyer cannot destroy." The attempt to destroy it has made clear the policy of the English—a supreme gain. The Hindoos are therefore entreated to "arise, stand up in front, say in ten million voices—'Prabhu, not knowing your true glory, I have called you Friend, Krishna, Iadaba.' Forgive me—you are the immeasurable." O Englishman, you are the immeasurable! Forgive me."

AN OUTSPOKEN POLICY IS THE BEST FOR UNCIVILISED PERSONS.

In the third article, English rule is charged with responsibility for famines, the extension of fever, cholera and other severe diseases; owing to the English having put up embankments only on one side of a river or in few places, inundations have occurred; the law courts impoverish the natives; the other year many "gentle families belonging to Calcutta met with death, in a steamer managed by an Englishman ;" lamentable accidents have occurred to railway trains managed by Englishmen ; many subjects have been groaning for want of drinkable water. The English hear of these things but never come forward to make arrangements for the permanent removal of these troubles. "But all the tears the great English had, flowed, his compassion gushed forth, and his recollection that he belongs to the race of the Wilberforces and Howards rushed in, for the protection of girl-wives from the imaginary outrages of their husbands." The English make canals, railways, &c., "govern rigorously, suck up extraordinarily, but do not rid us of our chief troubles." The writer then goes on to relate, by the way,

A TALE OF WOE.

"We shall here narrate what we personally observed one day. It happened long ago. We were in the train from Azimgunge to Nalhati. In a higher class compartment were the humble nameless writer of this article, a well-known English manager, and his blue-eyed lady. The train left Azimgunge. Boys and girls, seven, eight, nine, or ten years of age, nearly naked, withered in figure and poor, ran on both sides of the train crying 'Huzoor ! give me a pice.' The Sahib, in his own Bengali, continuously instructed them to work and to labour in the factories. Madam had in the interim brought out copper coins worth about a rupee or a rupee and a quarter, and arranged them in the form of a solid roller, which she held firmly between the thumb and the middle finger of her right hand. The train was running, and the boys and girls were running also. The lady hit forcibly one of these girls on the head with her column of copper. The head was broken, and blood gushed out in the stream to the height of seven or eight cubits. The other boys and girls stood spell-bound. The wounded girl fell down. I would have considered myself saved had the lady smiled to see that her aim had been accurate, or if she had knitted her brows to think that the girl had got her deserts, or if she had laughed subduedly like the Female Destroyer of the Danavas. But the pupil of her blue eyes was not displaced even a little ; the eyelids did not move even a little ; the lips did not incline to the side of either 'good' or 'bad.' The immovable pupils of the blue eyes of that statue of white stone remained fixed on me. I was petrified, helpless. I seemed to sink under the distress. I collapsed. When I regained my senses my brain became filled with the sense of the difference between white civilisation and black barbarousness."

THE RULER DOES NOT UNDERSTAND US.

"Even if we do not understand the civilised feelings of the Englishman, the Englishman may perhaps understand our uncivilised feelings. At least there is no harm in hoping so. But it will not do to adopt civilised language and civilised methods in order to comprehend our uncivilised feelings. We should explain our feelings openly in Bengali, Hindi, and other barbarous languages. It would be well if henceforth all will unite in endeavouring to do this. Look at this instance of the new law. Many things were said by many persons in roundabout ways, after the civilised fashion, but it was never said, in uncivilised fashion, in Bengali, that 'you are rulers of another religion, of another nation, and another country. You have conquered us by brute force, but not by the force of your (superior) morals. You have no right to interfere with our customs and usages.' To address the king in this strain some people consider to be a display of want of civilisation. We say we are uncivilised. Why should we stick at a display of our want of civilisation ? Rather it is better that we should give expression to our undisguised feelings. The ruler will then gradually understand us. We have not understood the ruler. We should now try that the ruler may understand us."

The fourth article is on—

THE MOST IMPORTANT AND THE FIRST IDEA OF THE UNCIVILISED HINDOO.

Some people fear that if we uncivilised people criticise the proceedings of Government in a candid spirit, the English may perhaps take us to be rebels. But we see no reason for such an apprehension.

If we except the soldiers, there is no probability of any rebellion among the ordinary inhabitants of India. We do not make such a genteel statement as that it would be improper and sinful for the Hindoos or Mussulmans of India to rebel against the rulers, who are of another religion, of another nationality, and from another country. What we say is, that a subject population who are from day to day becoming exhausted and famished, who are without effort, without arms, without any training in war, are not likely to rebel against the English rulers of high prestige, always armed and accoutred for battle, of matchless valour, and with an army skilled in the artifices of war. The rebellion of Gangananda or of Titu Miah was merely the madness of mad men.

It is best, the writer argues, to be outspoken and let the civilised Englishman know what the uncivilised Hindoos or Mahomedans think of him. "The English ruler will not think of us as rebels merely on account of our crying for what we want, or our bragging."

MAKING A CLEAN BREAST OF THEIR UNCIVILISED IDEAS.

"It is best that we make a clean breast of our uncivilised Hindoo ideas. Our chief idea is that, although the English have conquered us by brute force, they cannot approach near us if judged by our ethics. This statement may be rude, but it is perfectly true. You have your cannons, and you make them roar ; you have your prisons, and you can put us in fetters. My spleen may be ruptured by the blows of your shoe ; the tax-collector sells my cups and drinking-vessels ; you take to England twenty crores of rupees, while we five crores of people can get but only one meal a day. All these are formidable indications of your monstrous power ; we see it, know it, and suffer from it every day. But of benevolence, virtue, faith, affection ; love, reverence, kindness, filial affection ; of the householder's duties, hospitality, worship of ancestor's names, rendering them satisfied (tarpana) ; religious ceremonies, worship, homage ; of Yoga, asceticism, renunciation (sannyasa), and spiritual communion with God (samadhi) ; of charity, things to be given away, proper living, and purity ; of modesty, the power to feel shame, chastity, (wife's) devotion to (her) husband—have we anything to learn from you ? To teach me morality, you have imported societies for prevention of cruelty to animals, and according to their laws it is a punishable offence if one carries a hen with its head hanging down, but none to slay it for slaughter. Cheer this 'morality' ; let us die for its sake. But, good sir, this civilised morality will never pass current in this uncivilised country."

RESTRICT YOURSELF TO GOVERNING AND SUCKING UP.

In conclusion the writer says :—"We are weak in brute force ; brute rebellion is not in our power. We do not know it, and we will not do it. Therefore in our plain language there is no possibility of rebellion. It is specially necessary that you should listen to our plain speaking. If you do you will abstain from efforts in spheres which are not yours. You will then restrict yourself to governing and sucking up—you will not attempt reformation. . . . Therefore I say, Prabhu ! do not make yourself ridiculous, for you are in place of the king : conclude your task of reformation at (? with) the first performance. We are weeping and wailing again. We have lost our honour ; now lend an ear to our lamentations, and preserve your own honour, the honour of loyalty."

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Commander-in-Chief's Tour.—Besides the visit to the Samana outposts, as far as anything can be definitely settled just yet, says the Times of India, the following will, it is reported, be found to be a fairly accurate programme of the Commander-in-Chief's winter tour. His Excellency will leave Simla somewhat early in October, proceeding through the hills to Chakrata and Landour. Thence he goes to the Murree Gullies, and November will find Sir Frederick Roberts at the Khojak, where he may, after all, open the tunnel. He will be present at the Manipori Camp of Exercise in December, arriving in Calcutta the same month. As was to be expected, the Commander-in-Chief will most likely go to Manipore. From Manipore he proceeds to Burma, and from Burma to Madras ; thus completing his last tour in this country.

The Madras Deputy Adjutant-Generalship.—In reference to this matter, as to which a paragraph appeared in last week's Homeward Mail, a correspondent, writing from Secunderabad, says :—"It is rumoured here that Col. G. Simpson, assistant adjutant-general, Secunderabad District, is most likely to succeed Col. Hope in the appointment of deputy adjutant-general, Army Headquarters, on Col. Hope's transfer to the Military Secretaryship in October next. Failing Col. Simpson, Col. W. L. Ranking, commandant of the 13th Madras Inf., and who some time ago officiated as deputy adjutant-general, is the next on the list. The appointment is always held by a full colonel, and this precludes Lieut.-Col. M. H. Wratishaw, assistant adjutant-general, from being promoted. The same ruling holds good with the nomination of Lieut.-Col. D. J. S. MacLeod, district staff officer."

The Indian Staff Corps.—The despatch in connection with the recent warrant amalgamating the Presidency Staff Corps has been sent home. It relates mainly to the procedure to be followed in regard to promotions, leave, and transfer of officers from Presidency to Presidency.

The Lieutenant-General's Establishment.—The establishment of lieutenant-generals on the old local list has now been reduced to its future maximum of three. That of the Staff Corps also is expected shortly to sink to its new limit under the Royal Warrant of Jan. 28 last. Some considerable time must elapse before the establishment of major-generals can be similarly reduced by absorptions and retirements.

Mess and Band Funds of the "Converted" Regiments.—The arbitrary treatment of the officers of the "converted" regiments in the matter of the appropriation of their mess and band funds, the Pioneer has reason to believe, has been very fully impressed upon the India Office. Questions were to have been put in the House of Lords also, but that the Secretary of State, whose attention had been drawn to the matter through Mr. King's questions in the Lower House, volunteered such assurances that the matter would be looked into that further pressing became superfluous. It may be gathered, too, from the manner in which Sir John Gorst answered Mr. King, that his view of the subject cannot be much in agreement with the line taken by the military authorities in India.

Examinations in Pushtu.—It having been found that young officers of the Bengal Army whose regiments do not happen to be serving in the Punjab, or who are not otherwise employed in that province, will in many cases have to travel long distances in order to pass the obligatory examinations in Pushtu, the extension of the concession made to the officers of the Bombay Army has been made to them, until such time as Pushtu is more commonly known and the difficulty of arranging examinations at military stations other than those on or near the North-West frontier is thereby obviated, and they will be granted free passages by rail, if successful, on all occasions when it is found impracticable to assemble a board for the examination in the North-West or Lower Provinces.

Musketry in Central India and Rajpootana.—The corps under the Government of India in Central India and Rajpootana have been noted for some time past for their proficiency in musketry, and this year they have sustained that reputation excellently. The Bhopal battalion heads the list of native infantry shooting with the Snider, with a figure of merit of 114.24, and the Merwara battalion is third. These are fine results for corps which have only four British officers apiece. But the Bhopal battalion has musketry enthusiasts in its commandant, Lieut.-Col. Ransford, and its adjutant, Lieut. J. H. Pollard. The early issue of Martinis to these corps might be suggested, says the Pioneer, as a suitable compliment upon the zeal and energy with which they have used their Sniders.

The Frontier Force.—The question of raising the 4th Punjab Cavalry and 3rd Punjab Infantry has now become one merely of ways and means, the Pioneer says. It is generally admitted that the Frontier Force, since the reduction of its strength by the disbandment of these two regiments, has been overworked, and if the outposts along the North-West frontier are to be maintained in a state of efficiency more men must be forthcoming. The occupation of the Samana Range has increased the duties devolving upon the Force, and the usual leave cannot be granted to the sepoy. They are thus deprived of the privilege which they prize most highly, and a continuance of the present state of affairs will undoubtedly have an effect upon recruiting. It was a mistake ever to have reduced the strength of the force, which is always ready for service, and which has been used almost with prodigality on the expeditions of the last twelve or thirteen years, and the time seems most opportune for again raising it to its old numbers. There would not, we believe, be the slightest difficulty experienced in obtaining the fifteen hundred men required for the two regiments disbanded some nine years ago.

The Miranzai Expedition.—Sir William Lockhart, in a supplementary despatch on the Miranzai Expedition, brings to notice the services of Vety.-Surg. Crow and Lieut. Parker of the Derajat Mountain Battery. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief endorses the favourable mention of these officers.

The Occupation of the Black Mountain.—The question of the retention of troops in the Black Mountain during the winter will shortly be settled. It is impossible that all the present posts can be held, as supplies could not be forwarded after the first snowfall to more than one of them.

The Manipore Expedition.—A supplementary despatch is published from General Collett, in which he acknowledges the services rendered by the Telegraph and Postal Departments in the Manipore Expedition. Great credit is given to Mr. Pinhey, assistant superintendent of Telegraphs, and his subordinates, for the energy and resource displayed in the reconstruction of the line between Mao Thana and Manipore. The Postal Department is said to have been somewhat longer; but the services are acknowledged of Mr. F. P. Williams, the superintendent in charge, and Mr. Pilkington, Deputy Postmaster-General in Assam.

The Cannanore Sepoy Riot.—A Madras paper learns that the trial of the sepoys concerned in the Cannanore sepoy riot case, which began on Monday, Aug. 3, was brought to a conclusion on the 10th. The district magistrate sentenced eight of the prisoners to six months' imprisonment, and the other ten were acquitted. The evidence adduced at the trial very clearly showed that the so-called riot was merely an ordinary quarrel, the account of which was subsequently considerably exaggerated. It is understood that the ill-feeling stated to have existed in and around Cannanore against the 29th Madras Inf. has disappeared, and no further troubles as the outcome of this disturbance need be anticipated.

H.M.S. "Clive."—The Indian Marine steamer Clive, Capt. B. P. Creagh, sailed on Aug. 13 for Kurrachee with the following details:—Lieut. Harold, 1st Belooch batt., 10 men (Europeans), 1 native officer, 11 men (natives), 10 followers, and 1 horse from Kurrachee. She will proceed to Bushire.

The Times of India's correspondent at Quetta wrote on Aug. 8:—Rumour hath it that the divisional troops will be exercised this cold weather in the New Chaman plain. I know there is some foundation for this report.

Sir James Dormer has recommended to the Government of Madras the advisability of arming the 3rd Madras Light Cavalry with lances. If the Government of India sanctions the proposal, the regiment will be called the 3rd Madras Lancers.

The Calcutta Naval Volunteers have arranged a trip to Chittagong during the Poojahs, in her Majesty's Indian Marine steamer Guide. The present crew will be put ashore, and the vessel will be officered, engineered, and manned entirely by the corps. The trip will last a week.

News of a somewhat alarming nature reaches Ceylon from Pondichery, to the effect that cholera has made its appearance on board H.M.S. Blanche, and that two deaths have occurred. Commander Lindley, it seems, has wired to Admiral Robinson to know if he is to return to Trincomalee. No further particulars are to hand.

Work is at once to be commenced on the new artillery range that has been selected and approved of in the Chingleput District. About 5,000 acres of scrub jungle is to be cleared and relief labour employed thereon. Lieut. Stokes Roberts, R.E., executive engineer, Military Works, will for this purpose shortly visit the village of Kolatur, where the site is situated.

Sir J. C. Dormer, Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, will tour this year both on the West Coast and in Burma.

Major-Gen. Sir John Hudson, commanding Meerut, will be promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general a few months hence, and will have to vacate on April 1.

The Bangalore command will go, it is now stated, to Brig.-Gen. Faunce, and not to Col. Gossett, who will succeed Brig.-Gen. Faunce at Belgaum.

Lieut.-Col. Cole, R.E., is transferred from the Mooltan Division to the office of superintending engineer, Sirhind and Lahore command.

Sir James Hanbury, surgeon-general, British Forces, Madras, whose term of office expires in January, has applied to be relieved in December, with the view of taking short leave prior to retirement. He was appointed in June 1887.

Col. Brereton proceeds to England on leave on the recommendation of a medical board.

It is probable that Sir H. Prendergast will receive an extension of two months, and no fresh appointment will be made at Mysore meanwhile.

Major Hobday, who recently left Bangalore on six months' leave for England, has been recalled, and ordered to proceed to Mandalay to attend a General Court-Martial in connection with the Card Scandal Case.

Captain H. R. L. Holmes, 36th Sikhs, has been permitted to resign the service.

Captain Dun, D.A.Q.M.G., is appointed officiating A.Q.M.G., vice Sawyer, resigned. Captain Mason, R.E., officiates, vice Captain Dun.

Lieut. Powney, 3rd Grenadier Guards, to be A.D.C. to Major-General Lord Frankfort, commanding the Presidency Division.

BENGAL.

OUR advices from Calcutta are to Aug. 18.

Anxiety at Calcutta.—The Pioneer correspondent writes on Aug. 16:—Last night many people spent an anxious time. Rumours were abroad that a serious rising of Mahomedans was imminent, and it was said that opportunity would be taken during the processions which concluded the Mohurram last night to break out. The police were again armed and reinforced. The Calcutta Volunteer Rifles were warned to be in readiness to assemble at headquarters on hearing the alarm sounded. The Naval Volunteers went further, and a strong contingent spent the night on board the headquarters brig Chinsurah. They landed at eleven P.M., and marched to the fort and got their guns ready, and when their preparations were completed, returned aboard the Chinsurah. The whole manœuvre was carried out in perfect silence. The words of command were given by signals.

The Howrah Tragedy.—The following further particulars have been gathered regarding the Howrah mystery:—On his arrival at Patna Inspector Todd interviewed the local police authorities, who had taken up the inquiry on the receipt of a telegram from Howrah, which was strengthened by the report made by a Mahomedan woman that her daughter had been missing from the night of Aug. 4. After a rigid inquiry the Patna police received information that a woman named Mussamat Lurwan had been to the house of Abdullah, a bookbinder. This woman, at the time of leaving her mother's house, had on her person 400 rs. to 500 rs. worth of gold and silver jewellery. She had given the man Abdullah the sum of 200 rs. to carry on his business. The Patna police on going to the house of Abdullah found that he had left. He was, however, traced to a village near Patna, and was arrested in a grocer's shop. On being taken into custody he denied all knowledge of the murder, but admitted having brought the woman to his house on the night of the 4th from her mother's place. He stated that she left his house abruptly, and he was in search of her. Subsequently paper shavings similar to those found in the wine-case were discovered in his house, together with medicines and some packets of arsenic. The accused said he was in the habit of selling medicines, and arsenic was an article used for his professional purposes. The police then succeeded in tracing the woman who carried the wine-case (which she identified) from Abdullah's house to the Patna railway-station, where it was booked to Howrah. She, together with the booking clerk, established the identity of the accused as being the man who accompanied the box and booked the same. The accused was placed before the local magistrate, and has been remanded in police custody for further inquiries as to the missing jewellery of the deceased.

The Census of Calcutta brings out a remarkable fact. The total female population of the town is shown as 234,812, and of these 64,152 are under the age of fifteen, leaving 170,660 females above that age. The number of unfortunates over fifteen is shown as 19,944, showing that in Calcutta out of eight or nine females one belongs to that class. In addition there are 182 under the age of fifteen.

A native paper states that at a recent meeting of the General Committee of the Calcutta Corporation, a native Commissioner asked for information regarding the amount of work done by the Chairman and Vice-Chairman. Mr. Harry Lee, the Chairman, is reported to have got into a towering passion, styling it an insult offered to him, and a piece of impertinence emanating from the India Club clique, and abruptly left the room.

The Hindoo god Juggernaut is said to have grown tired in his dilapidated temple at Puree, and has gone for a change to Santipore. A vernacular paper says that the migration was foretold by an old woman to whom the holy Juggernaut himself mentioned the matter in a dream. A temple is being built for him at Santipore, and two Pandas have been taken to the new shrine from Puree.

In consequence of the pending prosecution of the Bangabasi, and the threatened proceedings against the Indian Mirror, the members of the native press in Calcutta held a meeting at the British India Association Rooms. The proceedings have not been published, but it is stated that it was resolved to start a Native Press Defence Association, and the details of the scheme were settled.

On Aug. 13, at the Calcutta High Court, the Government Advocate applied for a rule calling on the editor and proprietor of the Indian Mirror to show cause why he should not be proceeded against for contempt of Court for criticising on the Bangabasi case. The Court thought the criticism referred rather to the action of Government than to the case. Ultimately the rule was refused on defendant undertaking not to refer to the matter again till the case was concluded.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Aug. 19.

Agricultural Banks in Madras.—Replying to an address presented to him at Hospet by the local Union, in which, among other things, the Government have been requested to start agricultural banks, Lord Wenlock said he had appointed a gentleman to inquire into and report upon them. The Governor thought if these banks could be established on sound financial principles, they could successfully be established in this country. He thought if people would deposit their hoards of gold and silver in these banks they would materially benefit themselves. The Madras Mail states that it is an open secret that Mr. Nicholson, Collector of Tinnevely, is the gentleman appointed to inquire into the question. He is now on leave in England.

The Madras Small Causes Court Bill.—The Madras Mail publishes the correspondence that passed between the Chamber of Commerce and the Government of Madras with reference to Mr. Hutchins's Small Causes Court Bill of 1889, wherein the Chamber conditionally approved of the Bill at first, but subsequently wrote to say that if it had seen the correspondence on the subject it might have formed a different opinion. Mr. Hutchins's statement that the Chamber approves of the present Bill is not correct, for the present Bill differs in many points from its predecessor. The conditional approval of the proposal to extend the jurisdiction of the Small Causes Court to 2,500 rs. was withdrawn in July, on the Chamber being placed in possession of full information which Mr. Hutchins admits the public had not hitherto enjoyed. The Times correspondent's telegram, as to a great meeting in Madras on this subject, will be found on our front page.

Mr. Fischer's Case.—It will be remembered, says the Pioneer, that Mr. Robert Fischer, barrister-at-law, practising at Madura, was some time ago tried, convicted, and sentenced by the Sessions Court of Madura to pay a fine of 1,000 rs., and to be imprisoned till the rising of the Court for a certain offence against the Indian Christian Marriage Act. Against this conviction he appealed to the Madras High Court, and the appeal was heard by a full bench, consisting of the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Shephard, and Mr. Justice Muthusawmy Aiyer, who after hearing the Hon. Mr. H. G. Wedderburn on behalf of Mr. Fischer, dismissed the appeal and upheld the conviction. Before appealing to the Privy Council against this decision the case was put before Mr. J. D. Mayne, the famous lawyer, for his opinion, and he has given it as his opinion that the decision of the Madras High Court is correct, and that the word "knowingly" upon which so much stress was laid, only applied to ignorance of a fact, and not of law. The case was then submitted to Sir Edward Clarke, the Solicitor-General, who agreed with Mr. Mayne in his opinion.

The Inquiry into the Coffee-leaf Disease.—On account of an application made by the coffee planters of Southern India for the services of a specialist to inquire into the coffee-leaf disease, which year by year is making its presence more felt on the plantations, the late Dr. Barclay was to have been sent to Madras at the end of the year to make an exhaustive investigation into the subject. The question now before the Government is who is to succeed Dr. Barclay? Dr. D. D. Cunningham, now at home and on the Hygiene Commission, would be an excellent man, says the Englishman; but he prefers pure physiology and work among disease germs, and it is doubtful whether he would give up his own line. A very rising scientist is Dr. Alcock, of the Bengal Medical Services. Wallace, following Darwin in the newly-established evolution of plants and animals, acknowledged a distinct break between fishes and mammals that was not yet bridged. Dr. Alcock, by his careful investigations, has found the links so abundant between these classes, that Professor Huxley has noticed his researches, and European savants have taken up the subject, and consider Dr. Alcock's work of the first importance.

The Distress in Madras.—A correspondent writes from Bellary on Aug. 17:—Very good rain fell all over the Nellore districts on the 10th and 11th inst. The condition of Nellore is now very satisfactory. The Governor, accompanied by Mr. Rees and Captain Baring, arrived at Bellary yesterday morning. The arrival was private. The Bellary Municipal address which was presented to the Governor referred to the "sore famine" in certain districts in Madras. The Governor, in replying, said that this was too strong an expression, and, though there was unfortunately scarcity and distress in some districts, yet the recent rains which had fallen in the tracts most affected could not but produce considerable improvement in their condition. His Excellency also stated that no distress existed with which the present arrangements did not adequately cope, provided only that the north-east monsoon did not fail. His Excellency saw no reason to anticipate any greater trouble than was being experienced at the present time.

The Madras Government is doing all in its power to encourage the construction of wells in the distressed districts. Loans, to be repaid on easy terms, amounting to over 2,62,000 rs., have already been granted for well sinking in the districts of Chingleput, Tinnevely, Cuddapah, North Arcot, and Coimbatore.

The Triplicane double murder case was decided at Madras on Aug. 13. It is believed to be the first case at the Madras High Court for twenty years in which a prisoner has been convicted of murder. He was sentenced to death, but died of cholera in the gaol.

The Mysore Government recently offered rewards for the destruction of rogue elephants in the Kakenkotte Forests. Major Pigott, of the 21st Hussars, and Mr. Theobald, who went after them, have succeeded in bagging two in the course of a couple of days; one of these was identified as the famous man killer. The above sportsmen were after two other rogues, which they would no doubt account for in a few days.

In order to protect from damage the numerous ancient Buddhist mounds which exist in the north-eastern districts of the Madras Presidency during the construction of the East Coast Railway, the Government has, at the instance of the Archaeological Surveyor, drawn the attention of all officers concerned to the rules regarding the preservation of ancient monuments. Steps are at the same time to be taken to investigate these ancient mounds at the rate, if possible, of two or three a year.

A Madras correspondent writes on Aug. 16:—Cholera is raging badly in the city. There have been several deaths among the general community, and large admissions into the General Hospital and other hospitals. The appearance of the disease in the Penitentiary has resulted in the temporary suspension of the High Court Sessions, and measures have been taken for removing the convicts into camp. The 25th Madras Infantry will also probably be removed into camp, owing to the prevalence of cholera in the lines.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Aug. 21.

The Reay Museum at Poona, which so far is the most tangible outcome of the movement towards industrial revival which has been started in the capital of the Deccan, is able to give a satisfactory report of the first year of its existence. It is a sale-room as well as a museum; it is intended to give help 'on the commercial as well as on the technical side to Indian industries, and the report before us, says the Pioneer, shows that it has already brought makers and buyers into relationship. The number of articles exhibited is now little short of ten thousand, or more than twice as many as there were a year ago. About three thousand persons paid an anna admission fee, and sales were effected to the value of over 4,000 rs.

Presentation to a Police Officer.—In recognition of the services of Inspector A. L. Butterfield, of the Bombay Police Force, who was successful in investigating a recent extensive robbery of jewellery worth 7,200 rs., Colonel Wilson, Commissioner of Police, on Aug. 14 presented that officer with a valuable silver hunting-watch at the offices at Byculla.

The Depression in the Cotton Trade.—We (Bombay Gazette) understand that some of the leading mill-owners of Bombay are about to ask the Mill-owner's Association to call a general meeting of its members to consider the present position of the principal cotton industry in view of the great depression that has prevailed in the yarn market here and in China and Japan for some time past. The export of Bombay yarns to foreign ports exceeds 350,000 bales a year; but since the end of last and beginning of the present year, though exports are as brisk as ever, the sales have been very limited, and the consequence is that there are at the present moment more than 125,000 bales in Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Japan, either unsold, or sold but uncleared. In like manner the godowns of some of the local mills are quite full, and it is feared the article will soon be a drug in the market. The matter is of course one that the millowners themselves must decide. But those who ask for the closing of the mills say that the supply is greater than the demand; and that unless the mills are worked short time and production lessened, the consequences will be very unfavourable to the cotton industry. A proposal is likely to be made to stop the mills for eight or ten days in the month.

Primary Education in Bombay.—The members of the Bombay Municipal Corporation, at their meeting on Aug. 13, adopted the following motion, which had been submitted by Mr. P. M. Mehta at the previous meeting, several amendments which were proposed being rejected:—"That the Corporation regret the attitude taken up by Government regarding the State grant towards the maintenance of Primary Education in the city, which is not calculated to promote and encourage the progress thereof. That in hope, however, of a more equitable treatment in future, and in view of the importance of helping the progress of Primary Education, the Corporation sanction the expenditure of the 11,800 rs. set apart in the Budget for that purpose (so far only as the present year is concerned). That, in view of the above contribution, as well as in view of the other questions pending settlement regarding the statutory liabilities of the Corporation in their relation with Government, the Corporation are of opinion that they should at present refrain from sanctioning expenditure, as far as possible, on objects which are not of an obligatory character, and that, therefore, Government should be informed in reply to letter No. 2,327, dated June 30, that the Corporation are not prepared to make any contribution towards the construction of a vaccination depot."

A Mahomedan Convert.—Moulvie Mirza Abdulla Beg, of Poona City, was baptised in St. Paul's Church on Aug. 16, by the Rev. Mr. Deimler, C.M.S., of the Mahomedan Mission, Bombay. The ceremony was conducted throughout in the Hindoostani language in the presence of a large congregation. Police protection was given during the ceremony, and everything passed off quietly. The Moulvie is forty-eight years of age, and is the first Mahomedan in Poona who has accepted Christianity.

Cocoanut Day in Bombay.—On Aug. 19, according to ancient custom, Neptune had considerable homage paid to him by the Hindoo community of Bombay, and the villages contiguous to it, in the shape of an immense number of cocoanuts, accompanied in some instances with flowers, milk, and sugar-candy, &c. Such a course is believed by orthodox Hindoos to propitiate his wrath and gain his good graces in smoothing our angry seas. The date of the Cocoanut Fair or "Balev" is considered to mark the close of the monsoon, and the waves of the mighty sea are supposed to tone down after the stormy season. It was to this sea that the mercantile and other classes of the Hindoo community on the 19th made their devout prayers. To delineate the scene on the Back Bay during the ceremonies, says the Times of India, would be futile, as it has been so frequently described. The thousands of people, gaily dressed and bent on enjoying themselves, with which the thoroughfares were thronged, the life and bustle and good humour of this motley throng, the varied colours of their dresses and turbans playing in a sunlight tempered by a pleasant breeze, and the gatherings everywhere were of the same standard and class as in former years.

The Rajabai Tower Tragedy.—Since the conclusion of the trial of Manockjee Aslajee at the last Criminal Sessions, the Parsee committee, who sent up to Government a memorial said to have been signed by some 40,000 persons in the matter of the Rajabai Tower Tragedy, were understood to be preparing another memorial or letter to be forwarded to Government. Mr. Inverarity was consulted on the subject; and a letter from the committee was taken to Poona on Aug. 18 by Mr. Furioojee M. Banajee, one of the honorary secretaries to the committee, and was presented to Government through Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy. The letter bears the signatures of Sir Jamsetji, Sir Dinsbaw Manockjee Petit, Bart., and nearly all the members of the committee, as well as several influential citizens of Poona, such as Kazi Shahbudin, Dastoor Hoshungjee, and others. The committee express their regret that, notwithstanding the termination of the trial of Manockjee Aslajee in the High Court, the Tower mystery still remains enshrouded in darkness; and the committee therefore trust that, in the interests of justice and the safety of the lives of the citizens, Government will not fail to take such steps as might to them appear proper for the unravelment of the mystery. A meeting of the committee, says the Bombay Gazette of Aug. 21, we hear, is to be held in Bombay this week, at which it is intended to pass a resolution to the effect that, out of the funds collected, after deducting necessary expenses, a large reward be advertised for information which should lead to the detection of the culprits. It is also intended, we hear, by some of the Parsees now in England to appeal to the authorities there.

Murderous Assault and Robbery.—A case of daring robbery has occurred at Vesowa, in the Tanna district, at the house of Mr. Manker, barrister-at-law. On Aug. 12 a party of Bhandaris and Goanese broke into it at night and committed a murderous assault on Mr. Manker's sisters, broke open boxes and cupboards, and carried away a large quantity of clothes, cash, and jewellery. The robbers, a Bombay paper says, first entered the room of a servant of the house, who was sleeping in an outhouse, and tied him up before they entered the house to commit the plunder. Mr. Manker was not at that time in Vesowa, but he went there as soon as he heard of the robbery. The ladies have, it is said, been severely maltreated by the burglars. The Tanna police is active in its search for the offenders. It is stated that one of the suspected persons has been apprehended, and some of the property has been already recovered.

A Curious Case.—The Bombay High Court has just been called upon to dispose of a case which, says the Pioneer, would never have been heard of had the magistrate acted with common judgment. A boy named Bali, about fourteen years of age and known in his native place as a mischievous wight, climbed over the wall of a house and made off with a couple of cooking-pots. It was clear from the evidence—the boy was the first to admit that he had taken the pots, and to laugh at the escapade—that no theft was intended, and the magistrate acquitted the accused of dishonesty. He was, nevertheless, sentenced to two years' imprisonment in a reformatory, and when he slipped his handcuffs and attempted to escape was sentenced to another two years' rigorous imprisonment in gaol. The learned judge (Mr. Justice Jardine) argued at great length to establish the distinction between a dishonest act and a mere boyish prank; but most Englishmen, who have been English boys, ought to have little difficulty in appreciating the distinction. "At the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge," said Mr. Justice Jardine, "and the public schools at home, I believe burglaries are sometimes done by the students on each other by breaking into rooms with intent to annoy; but no one ever thinks of complaining." The sentence on Bali was reduced to three weeks' imprisonment; but it is a pity he was ever entered in the books of crime at all for an offence which merited at the utmost a whipping from his guardians.

The steamer Aston Hall, which was considerably overdue, arrived in Bombay on Aug. 20 with her shaft broken.

The Goa Government census shows a population of 485,175 in Goa, 76,582 in Damaun and Diu combined. The census was taken in 1887, and the result is only now published.

The Industrial Conference of Western India, which was to commence its sittings on Aug. 24, would be held in a large shamiana, erected on the maidan opposite the Reay Market, Poona. About fifty delegates attend.

Rao Bahadur Oodharam Mulchand, whose term of office as additional member of the Bombay Legislative Council expired on Aug. 20, has been reappointed to his seat in the Council for a further term. Mr. J. R. Naylor, C.S.I., has also been appointed an additional member.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

A REUTER telegram of Sept. 2 from Rangoon says:—It is proposed to send an expedition during the dry season for some distance up the Chindwin Valley, and thence to Chittagong. The expedition is to construct a road as it proceeds. The country through which it will pass is wild and unexplored. With the object of finally dispersing the bands of dacoits which have appeared in the Wuntho District, three columns will start from Bhamo, Katha, and Mandalay respectively, and will traverse the whole country.

The correspondent of the Times at Rangoon telegraphs on Sept. 6:—

The crop prospects in Upper Burma have somewhat improved during the last week, owing to rain having fallen in several districts. But in the central region, where it had been impossible to begin ploughing, the amount of rain which has hitherto fallen will do little good. Throughout the whole of the Upper province rain is urgently needed. In Yamethin a water famine as well as a food famine is imminent. In Myingyan, Magwe, Minbu, and Yamethin the prospects continue to be very gloomy. The Chief Commissioner has telegraphed to the Government of India for their sanction to begin the earthwork of a railway line from Meiktila to Myingyan as a relief work. In Lower Chindwin the crop prospects are bad, and relief works are required. Advances are being made to distressed cultivators to enable them to avoid selling their plough-cattle.

Several serious dacoities by armed bands, consisting of ex-Tsawbwas' men, have occurred near Mansi on the border of Wuntho. A body of troops and police has gone in pursuit, but our columns work under great disadvantages at this season.

The general court-martial on an officer in the Madras Infantry, who was accused of cheating at cards, will be held at Madras instead of at Mandalay, as originally intended.

The dispute between the local officials at Bhamo and the Yunnanese merchants and the Chinese residents still engages public attention. It is understood that Mr. Warry, of the Chinese Consular Service, who is stationed at Bhamo for the protection of the Chinese and the promotion of trade with China, supported to a certain extent the original complaints of the Yunnanese merchants. Sir A. Mackenzie announced at Bhamo that he would place police posts where they would be able to check every caravan, and prevent arms or armed men percolating through or infesting the districts north of Mogoung.

The Rangoon Times says that, although it is necessary to prevent smuggling, unless the police officers intrusted with powers of inspection possess special qualifications grave trouble and disturbance, involving possible complications with China, are sure to arise. It adds that the majority of police officers in Burma are more likely to oppress and blackmail the caravans than to honestly carry out the intentions of the Government. The Deputy Commissionership of Bhamo is one of the most important posts in the province, and ought to be held by an experienced officer of proved ability and judgment. At present it is filled by a junior officer who has excited intense hostility among the Yunnanese merchants and the Chinese residents.

HYDERABAD.

THE Pioneer's correspondent at Hyderabad writes on Aug. 14:—The news of Sir Dennis FitzPatrick's nomination to the Punjab has been received with mingled feelings of pleasure and regret—pleasure at his well-deserved promotion and regret at his approaching departure. I am but expressing the opinion of all who are acquainted with the Resident when I say that by his exceptional ability, his firmness of character, his impartiality, and his assiduous application to work, he has won for himself the respect and admiration of one and all. He has not been influenced by any party feelings, and he has most carefully avoided showing either favouritism or bias with regard to the conflicting interests with which he has had to deal. While Sir Dennis FitzPatrick has discharged his onerous and responsible duties with unflinching fairness and rectitude, he has managed to preserve the most cordial and friendly relations both with his Highness and with the Minister, and his departure from amongst us will be deeply regretted by all.

The same paper says:—The mint and the coinage of Hyderabad are anything but creditable to a state of such resources, and the Minister has come to the conclusion that a change is desirable. At present the mint is in an old dilapidated building, "surrounded by noxious drains that poison the atmosphere"; the minting is all done by hand labour, there is no supervision, and the opportunities for fraudulent practices are so numerous that there seems to be little doubt the Government has been regularly swindled. A very comprehensive scheme for the improvement of the coinage has therefore been under consideration, and will, it is hoped, be given effect to shortly, so that the present irregular coin with its docked inscription will soon be left to the coin collectors.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

A VACANT LIEUTENANT-GOVERNORSHIP could not, of course, remain empty for many days without being fitted with imaginary incumbents; but the different names that were started at the last, as being in the running for the Punjab, were guesses pure and simple. There was, as a matter of fact, no running, says the Allahabad paper. As a rule, big appointments are seldom given away before the necessity for filling them arises, but the case of Sir Dennis FitzPatrick was an exceptional one. When, after officiating for a year in the Chief Commissionership of the Central Provinces, he was turned out to make room for Sir A. Mackenzie, and when after that he was ejected from Assam for the benefit of Mr. Westland, and sent to Hyderabad—an appointment which, it was well known, was not in the least a congenial one—it was everywhere understood that this was with the promise of some compensation for disturbance, and that the compensation was the reversion of the Lieutenant-Governorship of the Punjab. So well has this been known all along, outside the official world as well as within it, that rumour might for once have been expected to preserve a judicious silence.

A TELEGRAM from Simla (Aug. 15) says:—Work is progressing rapidly in the catchment area of the Simla water-supply, and connection with one of the principal springs will be established in a fortnight unless another destructive storm occurs.

ACCORDING TO the statistics for the year ending June 1891, the area under cotton in the North-West Provinces and Oude was 1,579,821 acres, and the total outturn of clean cotton amounted to 729,789 cwts. The exports of cotton from the united provinces reached 944,517 cwts., the average prices per cwt. for the cotton exported were 21-1-6 rs. and 23-9-6 rs. for the North-West Provinces and Oude respectively.

FROM ALLAHABAD (Aug. 19) we hear:—Allahabad is experiencing the heaviest rainfall it has received for years. It has poured in torrents for the last twenty hours, and is still coming down a perfect deluge. Ten inches have already been registered. Several buildings in the city have collapsed, and houses and the quarters of the troops in cantonments have been flooded. Every compound is a miniature lake, and kutcha roads are now sheets of water. All the tanks are full to overflowing. The embankment of one, near the railway station, has burst, and a small river streamed in the direction of the city, carrying away many houses in its progress. At four o'clock there is not the slightest sign of the rain ceasing. It is feared that enormous damage will be done in the district by the low lands being flooded.

SEVERAL policemen are now undergoing their trial at Ujjain on a charge of causing the death by violence of the man Bulwant, who was arrested in Gwalior, on a warrant issued by the Central Indian Agency, for defamation. The case, it will be remembered, was mentioned in the House of Commons, and we have published some information on the subject in the Homeward Mail. The deceased, says an Indian paper, was believed to have been one of the instigators of the libels for which convictions were obtained in the Magistrate's Court at Mhow and at Indore. He was arrested on a warrant in-Gwalior territory, and when brought to the railway station at Ujjain in custody, he was suffering from injuries; he died in a few hours. Immediately after this occurrence the Indore durbar expressed its willingness to surrender the policemen belonging to the State who were accused of complicity in it. Three men were handed over accordingly upon a requisition from the Gwalior Durbar. They are now standing their trial at Ujjain, along with men of the British and Gwalior police. The warrant was obtained for the arrest of the prisoner in the hope and belief that his apprehension would lead to the discovery of the writer of the defamatory articles which he had caused to be published in the now defunct Eastern Herald, the proprietor and staff of which have been subjected to long terms of imprisonment. This expectation was, of course, frustrated by Bulwant's death a few hours after his capture.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

It is extremely difficult, says the Pioneer, to obtain accurate news of Russian movements in Central Asia, but it seems quite clear that Captain Grombchevsky has charge of an exploring party, 500 or 600 strong, that has entered the Pamir country. The force under his command is said to be composed of Cossacks and infantry with two mountain guns—more than sufficient to repel any attack that may be made upon him. Grombchevsky, it may be remembered, failed to make his way last year into Afghanistan from the Upper Oxus, and wrote many bitter things against the English officers from India who, he asserted, were seeking to advance British interests on the "Roof of the World." He is now in a position to convince the scattered tribes on the Pamir that Russia is a great military Power in Central Asia, and he is not likely to let his opportunity slip of bullying all with whom he may come in contact. He will, however, scarcely venture south of the Hindoo Kush unless he wishes to come into collision with the Chitralis. His exploration, so-called, is but another sign of Russian activity in the debateable land on the borders of North-Eastern Afghanistan.

A Reuter telegram from Bombay of Sept. 6 says:—No further details regarding the movements of the Russian expedition to the Pamir plateau have been received since Aug. 18, but intelligence that the native rulers have withdrawn detachments of troops from the passes of the Hindoo Koosh on the southern frontier of the country to the valley called the Alichar Pamir, in the centre of the region, has been confirmed.

From Nijni Novgorod comes a telegram, dated Sept. 4:—The Kashgarian merchants, on their visit to the fair here last year, brought goods to the value of eighteen thousand roubles. The consignments, however, suffered damage in transport, and in order not to forfeit the patronage of the Kashgarians, the Nijni merchants took the loss upon themselves. The Kashgarians also attended this year's fair. At a meeting held by the merchants at the fair here, it was unanimously resolved to petition the Government in favour of the immediate abolition of the free port system in force on the Amoor, on the ground of the serious prejudice thereby caused to the interests of the home trade.

Although the Ameer has sent a force against the Dei Zangi Hazarabs, rumour as usual has greatly exaggerated its dimensions. The Dei Zangis live chiefly on the north slope of Koh-i-Baba range near the head-waters of the Balk-ab. A small force is capable of doing all that is required, and there is not the means of supporting a large force in a sparsely-peopled country.

The vernacular papers of the Punjab are noting with satisfaction that certain rich Afghan families on the North-Western frontier are beginning to realise the advantages of English education. In 1889 Abdul Hakim Khan, Raizada of Dera Ismail Khan, went to England to pass as a barrister, and now Muhammad Daod Khan, Vakil and Rais of Peshawur, and others, have elected to send their sons and brothers to England for the same purpose.

The Pioneer says:—The family of the late Sirdar Wali Mahomed, once a prominent figure in Afghanistan until Abdul Rahman appeared on the scene, seem anxious to come under the protection of the ex-Ameer Yakooob Khan. Wali Mahomed's son, Nur Mahomed, is still across the border and in sad straits, for he has utterly failed to raise a revolt against the Ameer, and in his absence the family is without a head. He has left behind him a daughter ten years of age, and negotiations have just been concluded for her marriage with Yakooob Khan. Why the latter, now past his fiftieth year, should desire to take a child-wife is not very clear. He has already a family circle so wide, that the pension allotted to him by the Government of India is scarcely sufficient to cover it. Like his grandfather the Dost, he has sons and daughters literally by the score. One object he may possibly have in view: Wali Mahomed was reported to have left behind him some nine lacs of rupees, and the ex-Ameer may think the dot of the late Sirdar's granddaughter will consist of most of this. Yakooob is free, of course, to take another wife; but it is very undesirable that the Afghan colony in the Dun should be swollen by the addition of the exiles and their followers now residing at Kurrachee. Our own information leads us to suspect that the fortune which the Wali left was not very large; but in any case if this should "meet the eye" of the wanderer Nur Mahomed, he will probably return to British India forthwith, running the risk of a few weeks' arrest in order to save his patrimony from passing into Yakooob's hands. The ex-Ameer and his son, Musa Jan, now grown to man's estate, gave the Political Agent in charge of them considerable trouble last cold weather. They had neglected to provide for some of their followers out of the allotment made by Government, and in consequence of this some small deduction was made from the monthly pension of 5,000 rs. They refused to accept the balance or to draw anything for some five months, but eventually condescended to take everything offered. There is an easy remedy for this kind of behaviour on the part of these deterus. Let the refusal to take payment be considered absolutely final under all circumstances; the taxpayer would benefit by such an arrangement, and certainly no one would pity Yakooob and his family. If the result were to reduce the number of his retainers, who might leave him owing to threatened starvation, it would be a great point gained.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

WE reproduce the following telegrams published since our last issue, with the exception of Reuter telegrams from San Francisco, which have been anticipated:—

SHANGHAI, Sept. 3 (Standard).—In spite of the protests of the European representatives in Peking, and in defiance of the efforts of the Chinese Government to suppress the movement against aliens, the hostile feeling against foreign residents continues to show itself from time to time in acts of violence by the mob. Yesterday there was a fresh riot at the river port of Ichang, situate a thousand miles away up the Yangtse-Kiang. The mob set fire to the dwellings and warehouses belonging to the English and other European merchants, destroying the buildings and all their contents. Although the foreign residents have thus lost the whole of their property, there is, fortunately, no loss of life to record.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4 (Reuter).—A Wuchang correspondent, writing on Aug. 3 to the North China News, which has just been received here by mail, says:—

"The patience of the foreign population is well nigh exhausted by the tardiness of the Chinese officials in punishing the perpetrators of the Wusuch outrages. On the second batch of offenders, eight in number, who were convicted of murder, assault, and pillage, sentences of penal servitude for life, banishment for life, or branding on the face or back were imposed."

The writer, summarising the efforts of the authorities, continues:— "The Customs officer, Mr. Green, and the missionary, Mr. Argent, were killed, and Mrs. Boden, Mrs. Prothero, and Mrs. Warren, with their children, were murderously assaulted on the evening of June 5, the head mandarin refusing to send a single man to quell the riot or protect the foreigners. From June 5 to 8 from twenty to thirty persons were arrested, but subsequently all but five were released. After pressure had been brought to bear five men were rearrested on July 4, and two of the murderers were privately executed at Kuangchi on the 6th, while a subordinate Mandarin was removed from office, but not otherwise punished. The authorities there then professed to regard the matter as closed, excepting the question of pecuniary reparation, but, after strenuous representations had been made, his Excellency Chang-chi-tung consented to reopen the case. On July 29 three men confessed to murdering Messrs. Green and Argent, and two more to beating the ladies and looting the premises, and three to simple looting. The same day—fifty-four days after the riots— notices were posted up for the first time offering rewards for information concerning the rioters. The head Mandarin was still retained in office, although the British Consul was promised that he should be degraded. The prime incentive to the riots at Wusuch and elsewhere was placards against foreigners. These were frequently brought to the attention of the officials prior to the rioting, but no one was punished for issuing them. On July 30 the American Admiral received a telegram from Foochow stating that trouble was feared there and asking for a gunboat and a cruiser, which were immediately sent. The following day the Admiral received another telegram from Foochow, informing him that the Chinese had posted up placards with the words 'Exterminate the foreigners,' and also that 3,000 Hunan soldiers in Foochow threatened to join the uprising. The Russian gun-vessel Sivoutch arrived at Hong Kong on July 25 and was to proceed north to her station, which it was reported would be Hankow. The German gunboat Wolf was to remain at Hankow until required and to winter at Tientsin."

SINGAPORE, Sept. 5 (Times).—Shanghai telegrams state that the Powers are forcing China to recognise Shanghai Armed Volunteers, a body which has long existed on sufferance.

The death has occurred of Changjiv, Governor of Shantung. He was a probable Viceroy.

The report that the Hong Kong Sunday Labour Ordinance had been disallowed turns out to be erroneous. The agitation against it continues to be carried on vigorously.

PARIS, Sept. 5 (Reuter).—Official intelligence has been received here confirming the recent report of fresh anti-foreign riots in China, and the murder of two Sisters and a Belgian priest.

The Shanghai correspondent of the New York Herald has sent the following despatch, dated Sept. 5, to the London office of that journal:—"The latest details received from Ichang state that the Custom House at Ichang is still intact, and that the officials there are preparing to defend the French sisters of mercy who have escaped massacre. The apparent cause of the outbreak is that a Chinese infant was stolen from its parents and taken to the convent by some person who cannot be identified."

PARIS, Sept. 7 (Reuter).—The Gaulois states that the French Government has resolved to take concerted action with the Powers interested with the object of addressing an ultimatum to China on the subject of the anti-European movement in that country. France, it is added, will support this action, if necessary, by increasing her naval forces in the Far East. No confirmation of this report has yet been obtained.

Lord Connemara was in Japan, and had been received in audience by the Mikado.

Not for long, says a Shanghai paper, will the Japanese navy be inferior to that of Japan's formidable neighbour, if the authorities of the Naval Department are allowed to work their will. Next session a scheme is to be submitted to the Diet for the construction of eleven new ironclads, at a cost of 58,000,000 yen, the period of construction to cover nine years, and the orders to be given in 1892. Four of them are to be built in Japanese dockyards, and the others in England and France.

The North China Herald says:—It is reported that a son of H.E. Hsieh Fu-cheng, the present Minister to England, France, Italy, and Belgium, has been arrested on a charge of being a prominent member of a secret society, and is to be tried for the offence. This at least shows that the report was current in China, though it has been since contradicted by Sir Halliday Macartney.

From Wuchang the correspondent of the N. C. Herald writes:—The city is all astir with the news of the rising in the north of the province. The facts are, as usual in China, kept as secret as possible for fear of a panic; but where news is bottled up in forty-eight different yaméns, the cork is apt to come out. Apparently the insurgents started from the Honan border, and have moved through Mats'en Hsien to Chisui Hsien in the Huangchow Prefecture. Amidst conflicting reports it is difficult to sift the true. A Hsien magistrate has been killed, possibly a city wall damaged; probably the insurgents are hungry and are in search of food rather than anything more serious. The leader's name is mentioned as that of the son of one of the better known bandits of the days after the Taiping rebellion, but that may be mere report. Certain it is that a certain number of country folk have fled here for refuge. Soldiers have been sent to the scene of disturbance; no doubt the rising will be quelled with mercifully little loss of life. The bad crops in many parts will render us liable to these outbreaks.

Chinese officialdom is not prone to err on the side of fastidious mercy, says the Herald correspondent. A man was arrested at Wusueh a fortnight ago; he is not supposed to be connected with the riot, but is said to belong to the Kolao Hui. The Huangchow commandant sliced off his ears, and after a day or two sent him to Wuchang with a string through his collar-bone!

The Maxim guns and ammunition have all arrived at Hong Kong, but the China Mail says that there is no chance of the Volunteer corps to work them coming into existence.

According to the Hong Kong Telegraph, the appointment of a Chinese Consul at Hong Kong "was squelched through the influence of Sir Robert Hart."

The Siam Gazette says:—Thursday, July 16, ought to be a red-letter day in Siamese annals. The cutting of the first sod of the Paknam Railway by His Majesty appears to bring within a measurable distance the long-discussed and much debated question of railway construction in Siam. It is true that the Paknam Railway will be but a small local line of fourteen miles in length built to the metre gauge and carrying but light freight and passenger traffic; but it is the beginning, let us hope, of more important work in the very near future, a shadow of the good things to come, and an omen that the riches and produce of Siam will be rapidly opened up to the outside world by the facilities afforded to the people of rapid and cheap communication.

In the course of a description of the inaugural ceremony, the Bangkok Times says:—After turning the sod, his Majesty called upon his Ministers and Commodore de Richelieu to join him in drinking success to the enterprise. It gave him much pleasure, said his Majesty, in an earnest and clear voice, to have put his hand to the first work of railway construction in Siam, as it had always been his dearest wish to see a railway and the many blessings it would bring, constructed in his dominions. In taking part in the ceremony, therefore, he felt assured that he was acting in the interests of all classes alike, and that the time would shortly arrive when they would look upon "steam carriage" as an absolute necessity. After a very careful consideration of the subject and acting upon the advice of those best able to advise, said the King, he had come to the conclusion that there was no possible harm to apprehend from the construction of the railway, and, in fact, instead of harm, the establishment of railways in Siam could only bring incalculable benefits to all. The success of the line, therefore, had his most earnest desires. Then, after again sipping the sparkling wine, and walking round and addressing himself, in perfect English, to several of the Europeans present, his Majesty returned to the Royal Palace by way of the Windmill and New Roads.

On July 15 a meeting of the shareholders in the Paknam Railway was held at the offices of Messrs. Jucker, Sigg and Co. It was notified at the meeting that the capital had been fully subscribed—one-half of the shares having been taken up by the Bangkok public, and the other half by the King. As his Majesty had expressed a desire to be represented on the Board of Directors by the Minister of Finance, the Minister for Public Works and the Royal Private Secretary, these three gentlemen were accordingly elected.

The Singapore Free Press says:—Our readers will be glad to hear that Miss Smith, the daughter of the Governor, is now making good progress to recovery from her severe illness. The greatest sympathy has been felt for Sir Cecil and Lady Clementi Smith in the anxiety they have suffered during the past fortnight. The first intelligence of a distinct improvement was communicated on Sunday, Aug. 9, to Major McCallum by his Excellency in response to a note of inquiry.

THE MISSIONARY IN CHINA.

BY A CHINESE.

III. Works of charity.

This, although surely a well-deserving one, is, it must be admitted, a secular work, and as such must be judged by the balance of merely temporal interests. If the Christian missions in China are to be but a mere scheme of charity, let it be proved that, as a charity, it is worth its cost. No doubt the Protestant hospital and Catholic orphanage are the means of doing good to a number of individual Chinese. But can it be shown that even this amount of good is an adequate compensation for the outlay in money alone, apart from other considerations, which the people through their Government have had to pay for the special protection and indemnification of the missionaries in China? I should think the interest of all the money which has been thus spent alone would pay for an infinitely larger and more efficient staff of mere secular doctors and nurses (European if you will) to do the good which these mission institutions are now supposed to do. If then the Christian missions are to be regarded as a charity for alleviating Chinese suffering, let me ask again, whether the work actually done is worth the enormous sums of money which the missionaries are so loud in proclaiming that they, forsooth, are spending every year for the benefit of the Chinese? Let it be shown, I say, how much of the millions which the people in Europe and America subscribe for the support of the missions goes actually to the alleviating of Chinese suffering, and how much of it goes to the maintenance of the missionaries and their wives, to the building of their fine houses and sanitariums, to the cost of postage and paper for their voluminous letter writing, and to the holding of their conferences and other fads. Considered therefore as a mere scheme of charity, I ask is it not an open secret known to every disinterested foreigner in China, that the whole missionary enterprise in China is but a huge scheme of charity for the benefit of unemployed professional persons from Europe and America?

In presence of this subject of charity one really feels loth to have to speak like this; but I think the truth should once and for all be spoken. Moreover, I would ask the most generous to say, when these men who are paid to bring peace and good will to this nation, now heap insults and cry vengeance upon the Government which, with all its difficulties, is still honestly trying to protect them; when these men, who profess to preach mercy and loving kindness to this people, now threaten them with shells and grapeshot for what, even in these late riots, the most hardened legal prosecutor in a court of justice could prove to be nothing worse than excusable ignorance; I call, in fact, upon the most generous to say whether these men can ask that tenderness should be shown, when one is but speaking the truth to them.

But my object here is not to have the mere wanton satisfaction of speaking home truths to the missionaries. I have now shown you that their work of evangelising is a failure. I have proved that their pretence to teach science and carry intellectual enlightenment is either an imposture or a delusion. I have further shown that, regarded as a mere scheme of charity, the whole missionary enterprise in China, taken at its best, is but a huge scheme of charity for unemployed professional persons and, as such, not worth its cost even in the money spent on its support. And my object in showing this is to ask every intelligent and disinterested foreigner to say, if he finds what I have shown (make what exception and modifications he will) to be substantially correct, I ask him to say whether this huge and worthless scheme of charity should be allowed to imperil—as at this moment it threatens more than ever to do—not only the lives and properties of four hundred million Chinese, but also the large commercial, industrial, and other interests which the people of every nation in Europe and America have now at stake in this country. For it is, I think, not difficult to show that the presence of the missionaries in China is a danger and injury to the interests alike of Chinese and foreigners.

I will now prove that the present support of the missionary enterprise in China by the foreign Governments is both an insult to the Chinese nation and an injury to their interests. I say it is an insult to the nation because, when the high Chinese officials, who now employ a large staff of technical and educated foreigners in their service, see that even these men do not believe in what the missionaries say, what must they think to see the foreign Governments still back up these missionaries as religious teachers sent to raise the morality of the people? I say, further, it is an insult, because while the Consuls are seen ordering up gunboats for the support of the mission cause, the very coolies in their consulates know that the missionaries, as a body, are not looked up to by the better class of foreigners as their moral teachers.

But it is not only as insults that the Chinese people complain against the presence of the missionaries in China. I have already alluded to the vast outlay of money which the people, through their Government, have had to pay for the special protection and indemnification of the missionaries and their property. Moreover, in all cases of these riots the foreign public can only judge from what the missionary, an interested party, has to say on his side of the question, and the people are not heard. Now, on behalf of the people, I think it is but fair to submit the following considerations to every candidate and fair-minded foreigner.

It is, I think, admitted that the only two effective checks upon wrong-doing of every kind are the law and public opinion. But the missionaries here in China, who are allowed to gad about the country with a comitatus of what I have called the outcasts of Chinese society, their converts, have no law immediately before their eyes, because the Consuls are far away and the Chinese have no jurisdiction over them. They have no fear of public opinion, because they are in touch, with few exceptions, only with the Chinese outcasts, their converts. I submit, therefore, before the people are condemned, even in these riots, that it should be shown that the missionaries, without the two restraints which I have said are necessary for ordinary men, are capable of doing no wrong; that they, with their natural partiality for their Chinese outcasts, their converts, and their high notions of their own saintliness, are incapable of insolence and aggressiveness, of high-handed meddlesomeness and petty tyrannies to the Chinese among whom they live. If any one should doubt whether the missionaries as a body are capable of these things, let him read and note the tone and spirit of the public utterances of these men in the newspapers, not only on questions where Chinese are concerned, but on social questions concerning foreigners only, whenever the particular facts and other selfish interest of the missionary bodies happen to be concerned. I say, therefore, before the Chinese people are morally condemned in the court of foreign public opinion, let it be shown that these riots are not the explosions of popular indignation at the accumulated amount of petty insults and injuries, to which the stories about the babies and their eyes are but as matches to set the already heated mass ablaze. (See Foochow Wu-shi-shan riot case, 1879.)

This, then, I say, is the real burning grievance of the masses of the Chinese people against the presence of the missionaries in China; the fact that this class of what I have called the unemployed professional persons from Europe and America, with a comitatus of the Chinese outcasts, their converts, should be let loose upon the country with no other restraint to keep them from insulting and injuring except their mere profession of godliness. This, let me here emphasise, is the root of the hatred of foreigners among the masses of the Chinese people, whereas that which I have shown under II. is the root among the educated classes. The missionaries are thus responsible for these, the only two deep causes of the hatred of foreigners among the Chinese.

But all the miseries which the Christian missions have brought upon China may be summed up in that one ugly diabolic fact—the Taiping rebellion, which I have already called the rebellion of the Chinese Outcasts of the Christian Missions in China. It was this rebellion which has changed the face of what we once fondly and proudly called our Flowery Land as from the face of a smiling maiden into that of an old haggard woman.

I will only here spend a few words to show that the presence of the missionary in China is also a danger and an injury to foreign interests. I need here only ask every intelligent foreigner to consider what an old experienced foreign Consul once said to me—that what permanently injures the Chinese must in the end also injure the foreigners. Therefore, if there is any truth in what I have shown—that the missionaries, instead of doing good, do real harm to the Chinese—it follows necessarily that the presence of the missionaries is also an injury to foreigners. But I have said that the missionaries are also really responsible for the Chinese hatred of foreigners. Now surely the hatred of the Chinese cannot possibly do the foreigners any good. At this critical state of China I maintain that this hatred is threatening to do a great deal of harm to the large commercial and other interests which foreigners have now in China. All silly and sentimental hatreds ought of course to be put down; but the hatred that is just in the core of it, I am convinced, no amount of shells and grapeshot can put down. Those who will try to do it will only demoralise and in the end injure themselves. The missionaries are now clamorous for gunboats, and would lead the foreign public to believe that the officials are merely selfish in asking foreigners not to make a display of gunboats in these missionary riots. But those who know the temper of the people ought, I think, to tell the foreign public that the first shot from a foreign gunboat fired in a missionary cause will be the signal of a war not against the Government—as our foreign wars have hitherto been—but a war against the Chinese people. The missionaries have been loud in their denunciation of the "opium war," but what will they say to a "missionary war," of which we are now on the eve, unless there is enough of common sense, if not the sense of justice among disinterested foreigners, to prevent it. I appeal therefore to this common sense, this sense of justice among foreigners, to say whether the time is not come when the foreign Governments should be asked in the interests alike of Chinese and foreigners to undertake, if not the entire withdrawal, at least some modification of the missionary enterprise in China which I have shown at present to be a mere worthless scheme of charity for unemployed professional persons from Europe and America.

I have now spoken what I have long years meditated and hesitated, from personal and other deeper considerations, to speak. But now I have spoken. So hilf mir Gott: ich kan nicht anders.

A CHINESE.

P.S.—What I have written above applies equally to Protestant and to Catholic missions in China. But I should be wanting in justice and to the cause of truth if I do not append this morceau from the Journal d'un interprète en Chine by Mons. le Comte d'Hérissou. The ardently patriotic Count, I may say here, was the interpreter and confidential secretary of the French General who led the French forces together with the English in their march upon Peking. The Count says:—

"Je manquerais à la fois à la justice et à la vérité si je ne rappelaï pas ici quel puissant concours nous trouvâmes en Chine dans le personnel des missions catholiques. Tous les renseignements qui parvenaient au général—et l'événement démontra leur précision—tant sur les ressources des provinces que nous allions avoir à traverser, que sur les effectifs des troupes que nous allions rencontrer devant nous, lui étaient procurés par l'intermédiaire des jésuites, qui les faisaient relever par des Chinois à leur dévotion. Les rapports confidentiels exigeaient, non seulement une profonde connaissance des hommes et des choses, mais encore ils indiquaient chez leurs auteurs un véritable courage, car ils pouvaient les exposer à des représailles terribles de la part des Chinois quand nous aurions quitté le pays. Les jésuites ont, à cette époque, fait preuve d'un patriotisme ardent et du plus admirable dévouement."

Now I appeal to every foreigner, be he Frenchman, English, or German, to say whether against a body of men who are capable of this patriotisme ardent the Chinese people are not morally right in hurling, as they are now doing with what power they have, their "Ecrasez l'infâme."

THE BANGABASI PROSECUTIONS.

IN another column we print an abstract, with pretty full quotations, of the articles on which the prosecution relied in the case against the Bangabasi. To the ordinary Englishman the articles will appear to be the merest fustian, and he will wonder what the Indian Government advisers can have discovered in them of so perilous a character as to justify a prosecution. The general tone of the writer is less in the nature of an incitement to the native than of an appeal—enforced it is true by extravagantly ironical and satirical reflection—to the English ruler. It is obvious that these attacks on the Government are written under a deep sense of injury, caused by the interference with the religious customs of the people involved in the Age of Consent Act, and by the assumption of the rulers that they had a right to interfere with or suppress any customs, however sacred, which were inconsistent with the ideas of modern civilisation. This assumption the writer deeply resents, and affirms that on a comparison, though the subjects are inferior to the governors in brute force, they are superior "by the might of their religiousness, of the organisation of their society, and of their usages and conduct." He objects to the cruel kindness of a Government which undertakes to improve upon the religious ideas of this superior or model society. They will not, he says, object to binding themselves to slavery provided the ruler will leave their religion alone. This interference has disclosed him to them in a new light; the writer exhausts himself in efforts to depict the terrors of this fresh aspect. To his excited vision the dance is violent, the subdued laugh is deadly, "reverberating through half the universe," while "the leering eyes perpetually revolve like the burning wheel in the potter's kiln." The picture is anything but an attractive one, but a large allowance must be made for satire, particularly when it is Eastern. One would imagine that stuff of this kind might be treated by the Government with contempt, as also the attributing of diseases, floods and other calamities to English rule. The Native is generally shrewd enough to recognise the material benefits of the British occupation, and is not likely to be seriously moved by the allegation that catastrophes which happen to trains or steamboats managed by Englishmen are to be charged against the Government. To the writer's suggestion that it is better to speak out and let the ruler know what they think of him, no objection would be taken in this country, provided the language used is not a direct incitement to disloyalty and rebellion; and this the writer expressly deprecates, if for no better reason than it is idle to attempt it. Setting aside the question of the policy of these Press prosecutions, as to which the Times of India expresses some doubts, it does not seem that the Government has been particularly happy in the selection of these articles for its first essay.

CHEAP PASSAGES FOR GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

THE complaint of the burthen imposed on Military officers travelling to and from India by the heavy cost of first-class passages in the first-class steamers in which they prefer to make the voyage, may be a reasonable one and may be one for which the authorities might with advantage endeavour to find a remedy. But Truth suggests one mode of solving the difficulty which is somewhat naïve. Adverting to SIR GEORGE GREAVES'S dictum that an officer holding Her Majesty's Commission ought to live on board ship in a style befitting his rank, the gentleman who undertakes to regulate the world's affairs through the columns of Truth, admits that if SIR G. GREAVES be correct, "it is the business of the Government to give the officer the means of doing so." Thus far we may say with the judge, "the Court is entirely with you." But when the writer goes on to suggest that reduced fares might be established, not at the cost of the Government, but of the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company, we are compelled to part company with our bright but too ingenious friend. "I think," he says, "and think very strongly, that the Government, which is paying a very large sum per annum to the P. and O. Company, might reasonably stipulate that its own servants should be carried at cost price, or might, if necessary, pay a few thousands a year more in the way of subsidy in order to obtain specially favourable terms for them." Of the alternatives thus suggested the second would be in every way fair, but the first will not bear inspection.

It is not "reasonable" to expect that a steamship company, because it gets a subsidy from Government for certain services, of which it must be presumed the cost is carefully adjusted to secure the State a fair performance at the minimum rate, should therefore perform another service gratuitously. Clearly, if the Company agrees to carry military officers at cost price, it may "reasonably" expect the loss of profit to be made up out of the other branch of the contract, and in effect the State will have to make the difference good. The French Government no doubt has to do this in one way or another in its contract with the "Messageries Maritimes." It will therefore be necessary to fall back on the second alternative, and, if cheaper passages are to be granted, the Government must pay the "few thousands a year more in order to obtain specially favourable terms" for the Military officers, and of course the Civil Servants also, as Truth equitably proposes, "with their wives and families." The order, however, seems to be a large one, and seeing that the greater part of the passenger traffic consists of the classes to be benefited, would we fear lead to an expenditure by the State very far in excess of the "few thousands" of which the writer so airily speaks. The question may be brought on in the House of Commons by friends of the Indian Civil and Military Services, and will no doubt "receive a fair hearing," but a fair hearing implies fairness to the contracting Company, as well as to the country, and it may safely be premised that the House will not undertake the impossible feat of forcing the P. and O. Company to run its steamers at a loss.

AMONG the many matters to be brought before the Trades Union Congress, which began its session yesterday at Newcastle, is the subject of the Indian Factory Act, and we learn that there is little doubt about the passage of a resolution in favour of more stringent regulations. The motion to be submitted is in the following terms :—

Resolved—That this Trades Union Congress, in view of the rapid growth of factories and workshops in India and the present notorious inefficient protection given to the working classes in that country, hereby instruct the Parliamentary Committee to take the necessary steps to ensure such an amendment of the India Factory Act [as will secure, without fail, for the various classes of operatives in India an amount of security for the health of women, young persons, and children, not inferior to that which is afforded by the law of England.]

It will be remarked that the words which we have bracketed are quoted from LORD CROSS's despatch to the VICEROY in relation to the Indian Factory Act of 1891. Considering that the Indian Government, after careful inquiry, have only just passed an Act for placing the employment of the factory workers on a better footing, the reference in the resolution to "the present notorious inefficient protection given to the working classes in" India is a bold flourish. The draughters of the motion probably rely on the general ignorance of the delegates as to the conditions of Indian factory labour.

MR. KING's question to the Under-Secretary of State on the subject of the inequality of the privilege leave rules, as affecting officers in stations distant from Bombay, when they desire to take their leave to Europe, appears to have been generously considered, at all events as regards officers serving in Burma. The Rangoon Gazette announces :—

A welcome concession is to be made to officers serving in Burma. As regards privilege leave, they will be put upon the same footing as those in the Andamans. Whereas at present only three months' privilege leave can be accumulated by officers in Burma, under the rules applicable to officers in the Andamans privilege leave can be accumulated to the extent of three months and fifteen days.

THE BASIVIS.

MR. F. FAWCETT, on July 29, read a most interesting paper before the Anthropological Society of Bombay on "The Basivis of Bellary and Madura." It is the custom in that part of India for certain sections of the people on the failure of male issue to dedicate a daughter to a god (nearly always Vishnu), and she forthwith becomes invested with all the rights of manhood, and with freedom from the chief feminine conventional restraints. It becomes her object to give birth to a son for the purpose of perpetuating the family, performing her father's obsequies, and propitiating the Manes. She is entitled to use her best endeavours to effect that purpose, and she is therefore given authority to choose any man temporarily, and to change him for another as often as it may appear to her desirable. Should circumstances be adverse, and only daughters result, the Basivi (or dedicated girl) is, by legal fiction, accounted a son, and performs herself her father's obsequies and inherits the family property. It must not be thought that this custom sanctions unrestrained license; on the contrary, there are well recognised limits to the freedom accorded. A Basivi who transgresses those limits forfeits her respectability. Basivis never marry, the dedication to a god being regarded in the light of a marriage, and the ceremony itself even partakes of that character; but they may, and often do, form alliances for more or less protracted periods, which sometimes endure through life. As long as a Basivi acts within the prescribed limits she has all the respect and dignity of a wife; her children are regarded as legitimate, and no case has even been known of collateral members of a family disputing her right to succession to property. Her status being thus fully recognised, it is considered that no feeling of modesty is violated, and no immoral notion attaches to the practice. Mr. Fawcett's valuable paper embraces other allied customs. There are also men who assume the dress of women, and devote themselves to the service of some goddess.

Mr. Fawcett notices that nearly all Basivis are of the Vaishnava sect, and suspects that the custom is a survival from the days of human sacrifices. He does not, however, notice that Basu or Bachu, from whence the word Basivi is evolved, is the Tamil word for "calf" or any animal offered for sacrifice. It is the Tamil way of writing the Sanskrit word Vatsa, which was also applied to a sacrificial animal, and used as a term of endearment. Now the symbol called Sri-vatsa, "the child of Fortune," is the peculiar mark of Vishnu, and therefore an offering to Vishnu would not inappropriately be considered a Basu. A Basivi, therefore, by her very name, proclaims herself to be a sacrificial offering to Vishnu. Again, Mr. Fawcett shows how many sets of five are concerned in the dedicatory ceremonies, such as five dates, five nuts, five leaves, &c., and these symbolise the five marks of Vishnu. One of these marks is the conch-shell, and it is called Pāñchajanya, because it symbolises the five classes of men. Vishnu himself is considered to be Purusha, or the Male of Sacrifice, offered in the interests of the five classes of men; and this is why he carries the conch-shell, emblematic of the five classes—i.e., the whole race. Siva, we know, represents the lingam or phallus, and Vishnu represents the feminine. The sectarian marks appropriate to these gods are strikingly confirmatory of this identification, and the association of the Bull with Siva, and cow-worship with the Vaishnavas tells the same tale. Brahma, the Creator, symbolises procreation in the abstract; while Siva and Vishnu symbolise the media. This connection of Vishnu with the female principle would readily explain why a girl desirous of offspring should be dedicated to Vishnu, receive his marks, and be termed Basivi, or the calf of sacrifice; and having been allied to Pāñchajanya, she is open to the service of the five classes—that is, to all mankind. Strange as these customs may appear to Europeans, they arise from purely reverential feelings, and are considered not inconsistent with the strictest morality. It is to be hoped that Mr. Fawcett will continue his interesting researches into the customs of Southern India, and lay the facts he may gather before the world in the same lucid manner as that of his present paper.

THE BRINDISI AND SALONICA MAIL ROUTES.

THE Tribuna of Aug. 28 has the following article, which we have had translated for the Homeward Mail :—

During the last few days the question of transferring the Indian mail route from Brindisi to Salonica, a project already once abandoned in 1888, has been so freely discussed that, while quite aware that our Postal Administration is in treaty with the English Government for the continuance of the present London-Brindisi service, we have thought it worth while to go into the matter to see if the adoption of the line of railway crossing Europe from Ostende to Salonica would actually afford the saving of time that is popularly accorded to it.

Our researches, however, give an exactly opposite result, as is shown by the following comparison of the two services :—

Via Brindisi (actual).		Hours.
London, Dover, Calais		4'05
Calais, Modane, Brindisi (kilomètres 2,183)		44'20
Brindisi, Port Said (leagues 308, at 4 leagues per hour)		77'00
Total hours		125'25
Via Salonica (projected).		Hours.
London, Dover, Ostende		6'25
Ostende, Brussels, Acquisgrana, Colonia, Frankfurt, Aschaffenburg, Würzburg, Norimberga, Vienna, Presburg, Budapest, Nisch, Salonica (kilomètres 2,649)		71'00
Salonica, Port Said (258 leagues at 4 leagues per hour)		64'30
Total hours		141'55

It is absurd therefore to say that the journey via Salonica is the shortest, when the passage from London to Port Said by this route takes sixteen hours more than that via Brindisi.

With the new route, moreover, the mail train would pass through five States—Belgium, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Servia, and Turkey—and at each frontier it would be necessary to examine the passengers' baggage and to "load" and "unload" the mail vans, while via Brindisi these operations are only performed at Modane; moreover England would have to pay the right of passage to each of these five states instead of, as now, to France and Italy only.

From Nisch to Salonica there is only a single line of rails and it is doubtful whether its construction would allow of the present rate of speed being maintained. Salonica, too, is in an open bay without any port, only a small portion of the harbour being accessible to large ships, and would not therefore afford the same facilities for embarkation as Brindisi.

Again, should any breakdown occur on the Nisch-Salonica line, the only alternative route would be via Constantinople, necessitating the despatch of the P. and O. steamer to that port, and the effect of this on the punctual delivery of the mails may be well imagined.

The above reasons seem sufficient to show that it could not be to the interest of England to adopt the Salonica route and to abandon that via Brindisi, at once the cheapest, the quickest, and the most convenient.

"F. A. D." writes to the Times of India from Hyderabad, Sind, Aug. 9 :—I would like to point out, through the medium of your columns, that it is very essential that all officers of the Indian Staff Corps not present with their regiments and not doing regimental duty should be invited to support the movement in favour of obtaining quicker promotion. It is suggested, therefore, that each regiment should see that all its officers on furlough, leave, staff, or other employ (civil or military) be written to and asked to forward their memorials and subscriptions either to Messrs. King, King and Co., Bombay, or to Messrs. Henry S. King and Co., 65 Cornhill.

Sir William Robinson, the new Governor of Hong Kong, accompanied by Lady Robinson and his family of one daughter and two sons, will leave England by the White Star steamer Majestic on Oct. 21, and proceed via the Canadian Pacific to Hong Kong. Sir William will catch the Empress of Japan at Vancouver, which is timed to reach Hong Kong on Dec. 10. The new Governor will be accompanied by his private secretary and by Lieutenant Fremantle of the Coldstream Guards, son of the Deputy Master of the Mint, as A.D.C.

SIAM AND THE SIAMESE.

THE Times publishes a long letter on the above subject, evidently from a well-informed correspondent (? Lord Lamington). He says:—

To prevent their country from falling into European hands, the policy of the Siamese is to play off the British against the French. The geographical position of each of these two Powers helps to counterbalance the influence of the other. In the Malay Peninsula, Siam borders with our possession of Tenasserim; further north, with Burma proper; and with the British Shan States to the north-west and north. Further east, on Siam's northern frontier, are States whose future has not yet been decided; in the north-east corner the French are the neighbours, and continue so for the remainder of the eastern and south-eastern frontier. The Menam and Mekong are the two great waterways of Siam, with a general direction of north to south. There is no danger of hostilities, but, while England would never think of acquiring Siam for merely selfish purposes, it is to be hoped that adequate precautions will be taken, while there is yet time, to prevent the country from falling piecemeal into the hands of the French. The latter are rapidly advancing westward from Annam into the Shan States, and the Mekong, as far as Luang Prabang, will be practically a French river, when once their steamers are on it. The intervening territory between the Mekong and Annam is being rapidly surveyed, and, as far as can be learnt, the Siamese do not intend to offer any opposition to the French occupation of this district. For the time being, France will probably be content with the Mekong boundary. It is the advance of trade that will settle the Siamese question, and it is of the highest importance that our Government should be on the watch. England has at present by far the largest stake in Siam, where there are already thousands of British subjects, Malays, Burmese, Shans, Chinese, and Hindoos, and the number is increasing every year of those who look to us for protection. Our Government seems rather inclined to surrender the security that they have enjoyed in the shape of Consular Courts, whereas it would be wiser to have extended and strengthened these useful institutions. A recent regulation insists that every British subject who intends to claim the right of having his case tried in the Consular Courts shall annually register himself, and this is not unnaturally regarded as a great hardship, for in many cases it involves a journey of some hundred miles through the jungle to the registration court. If we are right, as we most assuredly are, in establishing Consular Courts, we ought to see that the right does not become a dead letter for many British subjects.

THE Siam Mercantile Gazette of July 25 has the following article on the present position in Siam:—

There is little reason to doubt that there have been some grounds upon which to base the report that has drawn all eyes to the valley of the Mekong. The activity of the French in the neighbourhood of Lhuang Phrabang has long been known and noted; French explorers with strong escorts have frequently made their appearance in the town and surrounding districts, and merchants under the protection of the French flag are endeavouring to foster commercial relations with the inhabitants of the district. If we further add that there is believed to exist a hostile feeling between the French and Siamese outposts, which has been strengthened by irritating arrests of native carriers in French employ, it will be clearly seen from what causes the report has arisen.

The French are not in Lhuang Phrabang or yet in possession of the Laos States, but that such a rumour should obtain credence among thinking men speaks badly for the Siamese grip on the States of the Upper Mekong.

The Siamese Administration in Bangkok has far from a firm grip on the Laotian States. The people of these regions are attached to their chiefs, look upon them as the only authority which they are bound to obey, and would probably as quickly take up arms against Siam herself as France, at the command of their chosen leaders.

Nor can this be wondered at. The Bangkok Government has no claim on their services, it has done nothing for them: it has imposed upon these people vexatious restrictions, helped them in no way to develop their lands, alternately bullied and cajoled them, and shown very clearly that it looks upon them as taxpaying units. Commissioners have been dispatched to these States to the number of some two dozen, but not to inquire into the requirements of the inhabitants, not to report on trade or probable industries, or to discover by what means the union of these States with Siam proper might be firmly cemented, but to collect taxes. This collecting of taxes would seem to be the beginning, middle, and end of what the Siamese consider the functions of government. France may be a helpless failure in colonising, but she has never been distinguished by her oppression of native races.

And now that there is every prospect of the Laos States changing masters in the not far distant future, we are beginning to hear the Foreign Office trumpeter hinting that the Mekong Valley is barren, sparsely populated and impoverished, in other words it is not worth keeping what must ere long be lost for ever to Siam; that the French are fools for desiring such useless territory, and that the loss of such a large slice of his Majesty the King of Siam's dominions will be a gain rather than a loss and a disgrace.

The policy of the "greatest statesman of the East" would seem to consist in preparing a soft place for the inevitable fall which is expected, in reconciling the Siamese nation to expect the loss of a large strip of territory which is an incumbrance, a rotten limb decayed and worthless, so that when the crash comes the political foresight of Siam's great minister may be no longer disputed.

France is not yet established in the Laos States, and Siam has still breathing time. Let her make use of the very short time at her command, and make an effort even at the eleventh hour to show that there is still some vitality in her putrid veins. Let her make efforts to conciliate and attach the Laos chiefs to Siamese interests by making it worth the while of the Laotians to throw in their fortunes with Siam, and worth their while to remain faithful to her, and she may still be in time to save a part, at least, of one of the finest and most important regions of Siam.

The answer of Lord Salisbury to Lord Lamington's proposal in the House of Lords is well worth pondering on. England and France alone, replied the noble lord, were concerned in the autonomy of Siam, and he had no reason to believe that Siam was seriously threatened from French aggression. Lord Lamington, who has travelled through Siam and Tonquin, thought different, as was evident from his suggestion, but perhaps after all there is more in Lord Salisbury's reply than at first sight appears apparent. What if the partition of Siam had already been agreed upon by France and England? It is not at all unlikely, and the position would be fraught with far less danger to the peace of both countries, than with a petty kingdom between their territories, the native government of which would be a constant source of misunderstanding and irritation as the present case amply illustrates.

THE VICEREGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

THE Legislative Council met at Simla on Aug. 20, his Excellency the Viceroy presiding. The Hon. Sir D. Barbour, in moving that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act of 1880 be taken into consideration, said: It will be recollected that I pointed out, on Dec. 19 last, that the object of this Bill was to assimilate the Indian to the English law in regard to the maximum load lines rendered necessary by the changes made in the English Merchant Shipping Act of 1890. A copy of the Bill has been forwarded through the Secretary of State to the Board of Trade, and that body has no objection to the Bill, and makes no suggestion for an amendment. It is not, therefore, necessary for me to do more than to explain the modifications which the Select Committee suggests. It is provided that Colonial marks relating to deck and load lines recognised in England shall also be recognised in India. It also recommends that power be given to Local Governments to exempt native craft not square-rigged from the operation of the law, and to make rules, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General, for the definition of fair and foul seasons, and the modification of tables of free boards of any class of vessel.

The Bill was then passed.

The Hon. Mr. Hutchins, having moved that the Bill to make better provision for Municipalities in the Punjab be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Honourables Sir A. Miller, Rattigan, and the Mover, asked for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Lower Burma Municipal Act, 1884. In doing so he said that in 1888 the Rangoon Municipal Committee having introduced the system of drainage known as the Shone System, the present Bill was intended to enable the Local Municipality to compel householders to establish the necessary connections, in order to do away with the present removal of offensive matter by carts. The proposed amendments, the Hon. Mover said, would be applicable, not only in Rangoon, but in the whole of Lower Burma. A second section of the Bill would authorise the taxation of all vehicles and animals entering the Municipality; and a third section was framed with the view of giving greater control over the erection of buildings on land belonging to Government or a Municipality, and to prevent the present evident belief among the ignorant classes in Rangoon that a permit to build is equivalent to a grant of the site.

The Hon. Mr. Hutchins's proposal—that the Council suspend the ordinary rules, and at once allow the Burma Bill to be referred to the same Select Committee as that appointed for the Punjab—having been agreed to, the Council adjourned for three weeks.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, August 17.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on Aug. 13, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining at 2 per cent.

The statement of the bank for the week ending Aug. 11 shows the following changes in figures:—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 28,30,764	Increase
Do. at Branches	9,88,629	Increase
Other Deposits.....	15,02,594	Increase
Post Bills	1,18,348	Increase

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	14,96,615	Increase
Loans	2,17,186	Increase
Accounts of Credits.....	2,07,214	Increase
Mercantile Bills	2,26,046	Decrease
Cash at Head Office.....	25,67,003	Increase
Do. at Branches	17,09,098	Increase

Analysis of the above figures shows a further decrease of about 19½ lacs in the ordinary trade demand for money, made out as follows:—By an increase of over 15 lacs in "Other Deposits," and nearly 1½ lac in "Post Bills," together with a decrease of over 7½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus an increase of about 2 1/6 lacs in "Accounts of Credits," and 2 3/16 lacs in "Loans." The Treasury balance at head office stands augmented by over 28½ lacs, and about 9½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were increased by nearly 15 lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 25½ lacs in cash at head office, and nearly 17½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 7,43,59,267 rs., equal to 70½ per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 70½ per cent. last week.

EXCHANGE.—On France, Commercial Bills on six months' sight are 1.86½ frs., and 1.85 frs. for three months' sight; while on Mauritius, Private Bills at sixty days' sight are quoted at 2 per cent. discount. The rate for thirty days' sight Mercantile Bills on Hong Kong is 218½ rs., and on Singapore 222½ rs. On Bombay, Telegraphic Transfer is quoted at par, and sixty days' sight Bank drafts are at 5-16 to ¾ per cent. discount.

TEA.—At the usual weekly auctions, which were held on Aug. 13, nearly 14,000 chests changed hands. Fine grades were again in strong demand, and realised full prices. Common and ordinary weak liquoring sorts marked a slight decline.

JUTE.—By reason of the continued small imports, which appear to be keenly competed for, prices in the bazaar have risen daily, and sellers of baled jute have practically withdrawn in the present discouraging state of the market. The quotation at date for M and similar popular marks is about 28 rs. per bale, and business for shipment is at a standstill. It is reported that a considerable portion of the sales of baled jute made in March and April last has been cancelled by the sellers paying a heavy penalty.

GUNNIES.—The volume of business is small, but the market has been influenced by the advance in the raw material, and rates have gone against buyers.

HESSIANS are firm. Small quantities of cloth have been taken for early at 6-10 to 6-12 for 8/40'.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—In marked contrast to the two or three preceding it, the week has been one of the quietest and most uneventful within memory. The daily lists published show a most meagre record of transactions, and the feeling has been one of general inactivity. Buyers seem to have disappeared altogether, and in their absence it is scarcely possible to expect quotations to be maintained. There has been a fall in prices all round.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 per cent.

BOMBAY, August 20.

By the occurrence of the Mohurram and "Cocoanut" holidays the business days have been reduced to four, during which the principal features have been increased activity in wheat at higher prices, consequent on advices from the other side and a better demand for steamer tonnage at enhanced rates. Seeds also have advanced in value in presence of a much better inquiry for export on some days. Cotton has been quite neglected by shippers, and in small request by local consumers. Exchange has moved but little, and rates only show a decline of 1-32d. in Bank Bills and of 1-16d. in Credits compared with former quotations. Government Paper is ½ per cent. higher in Fours. Freights are quiet but steady. The import market is unchanged in prices generally, though previous quotations for staple goods have been barely maintained, and there has been less doing, both in ready and arrival business.

MONEY.—There was not much change in the position of money during the period covered by the Presidency Bank's statement of affairs issued on Aug. 17, but the Cash Balance showed a rather larger falling-off, at some 10 lacs, than at the close of the previous week, reducing the balance to 314 lacs. The principal item of change, as shown by the return, was in Private Deposits, in which there had been a decrease of 28 lacs, but against this there had been a diminution of 9½ lacs on Loans and of 7½ lacs in Bills Discounted, the net increase in trade requirements being thus represented by about 10½ lacs. Some impetus has latterly been given by advices of the scarcity of cereals in Europe to one branch of export trade; but otherwise business continues to partake of the usual monsoon dullness, and the demand for money is still very restricted. The minimum rate of the Bank of Bombay remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Demand for staple grey goods for the up-country markets has been very small, and stocks in the bazaar are increasing, while rates continue to be barely maintained. The weaker exchange since last mail has, however, prevented any actual downward movement in prices, though dealers are very willing sellers at current quotations, but without meeting with buyers of any importance. A very small business has transpired in bleached goods, and rates are anything but strong, though they show no quotable change, and the same remark applies to Turkey red, dyed, and printed goods. In local goods some Calcutta buyers and bazaar dealers have made purchases of chodas, which constitute the principal business. The clearances of imported goods have been 2,100 bales; those of local goods some 1,000 bales. Yarns imported twist has been dealt in to only a small extent in a quiet market, and prices may be called ¼ anna per lb. lower.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done in copper in a quiet market, and at the basis of previous rates. Yellow metal has also been taken to a moderate extent, and the price has advanced 4 a. per cwt. Transactions in iron have been upon a small scale, and rates have declined 4 to 8 a. per cwt. in a quiet market. Coal is dull, and has been neglected by buyers, no transactions having been reported, prices, in the absence of fresh business, being quoted as before.

Exports.—COTTON.—What with the holidays, the absence of demand from exporters, and the slight inquiry from local spinners, this market has been almost stagnant; but though the tone has been quiet, the few purchases made have been on the basis of previous rates. The mills have taken under 4,000 bales in the aggregate, consisting principally of Oomra descriptions, Dharwar, and Compta Ginned; while for export the only transaction reported was a small lot of Westerns, the business on this line having meantime been nil. The market closes steady, with prices quite the same as they were.

WHEAT.—A moderate business was passing in this staple when last mail left, but the tone of the market was firm, and prices were put up half an anna per cwt. all round, and the week closed with a strong feeling and a further advance of half to one anna per cwt., transactions, however, remaining on the previous moderate scale. Notwithstanding the holidays, a large business in the aggregate has been done in a strong or firm market, and prices were again put up half an anna per cwt. at its commencement.

SEEDS.—A considerable business was done in linseed and rapeseed at the close of last week, and the market became firm at an advance of one anna per cwt. in these kinds, other descriptions being unchanged, and, though the holidays have interfered with business in the meantime, a good deal has been done, and a further advance in prices has been established.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.
 The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL" on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.
II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.
 The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.
III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.
 The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

Sept. 13:—It is not yet known whether the Government intends to proceed to a fresh trial of the Bangabasi case, but it is believed that the chances of a satisfactory arrangement are growing stronger. Meanwhile a new native Press Association has been fully established, and joined by the conductors of nearly all the most important native newspapers in Bengal. Its object is thus described:—To protect, maintain, and further by all legitimate means the lawful interests of the native Press; to improve its tone and status; to preserve moderation in the discussion of all public questions; to take such measures as are necessary to enable the native Press to fulfil its important functions as the educator of the people, the exponent of public opinion, and the faithful interpreter between rulers and ruled.

In the absence of more important topics, the Imperial diamond case, in which the Nizam charges Mr. Jacob, a Simla jeweller, with criminal misappropriation of 23 lacs of rupees, excites much interest, the same correspondent says. The defendant, who is generally believed to be the original from whom the hero of a well-known novel is drawn, on hearing of the issue of a warrant, promptly came from Simla, bringing the diamond, which had been placed in the Bank of Bengal, and surrendered. The magistrate having refused to accept bail, an application was made to the High Court, which, however, declined to interfere at this stage, and Mr. Jacob was sent to gaol. The case came before the magistrate on Sept. 11, when several officials of the Bank of Bengal gave evidence regarding financial transactions with the Nizam. The inquiry was then adjourned. It is stated that the Nizam, having retained nearly all the leaders of the Calcutta Bar, Mr. Jacob has engaged a barrister and solicitor from Bombay to conduct the defence.

Mr. Paul, Mr. Hart, and the Chinese representative were engaged at Darjeeling, when the mail left, on the last point connected with the Sikkim-Thibet negotiations. This is the fixing of the site for a trade mart on the frontier.

Lieutenant Varges, of the Austrian Army, arrived in Calcutta in a very bad state of health on Aug. 26, after riding across India. He left Bombay on May 26, his ride thus occupying ninety-four days.

Arrangements will probably be concluded in the near future, says the Englishman, for an acceleration of the European mail. The special train which has recently been despatched from Bombay on the arrival of the mail steamer is in future to become a permanent institution, and although the cost to the Department is considerable, the change will be warmly welcomed. A reduction in the rates of newspaper postage between India and Europe is also probable.

The announcement that "a big conference" is shortly to be held between the P.W.D. and military authorities, to discuss the programme of military and defensive works upon the frontier, has created some astonishment, the Pioneer says, as well it might, seeing that the Public Works as a Department has nothing whatever to do with the inception of any military works. Of course there is no authority for expecting any such conference, big or little.

An Industrial Conference has been held at Poona, and some valuable papers have been read.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Aug. 25; Madras, Aug. 26; Bombay, Aug. 28.

Our files of papers were not fully delivered from the Post Office until late this afternoon.

It is possible, the Times of India says, that the vacancy among the additional members of the Legislative Council caused by Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter's resignation may not be filled for some months to come, as the services of Calcutta members are not required until the cold weather session.

The Governor of Bombay, Lady Harris, and Staff, were to leave Poona for Simla on a visit to H.E. the Viceroy on Aug. 31, returning to Poona on Sept. 12.

Lord Wenlock was still touring through the distressed districts in the Madras Presidency when the mail left. At Royachoti, where he found great scarcity of water, he also found the people did not take much advantage of the relief works and kitchen, and, in reply to an address presented to him, said Government would require to consider the continuation of them. In the Cuddapah district his Excellency found the distress increasing owing to the crops being attacked by a plague of caterpillars.

The controversy in reference to the distress in Madras between Lord Wenlock and Mr. Caine has attracted much attention during the past week, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Sept. 13. The Madras Press, with hardly an exception, has supported the Governor. The newspapers in the other Presidencies, save a few irreconcilable native journals, express the opinion that Mr. Caine allowed himself to be led into a gross error by placing implicit faith in the statements of an inaccurate native correspondent.

General Lockhard had been at Simla arranging for the revival of two regiments of the Punjab Frontier Force.

It is stated by a Madras contemporary that Sir Arthur Collins, Chief Justice of Madras, is an applicant for the Recordership of London. It is said that Mr. Justice Straight, of Allahabad, is also an applicant for the vacancy.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Gun lascars attached to shore batteries at various sea-ports in India are to be specially trained so as to render assistance to an artilleryman in the manipulating of heavy guns.

An order has been made at Saharanpore for winding up the Himalaya Bank. Depositors are not likely to get much more than 8 annas in the rupee.

At the close of July there was still an encouraging improvement in the traffic returns of Indian railways. During the week ending July 25, State and Guaranteed lines alone showed an excess of about five lacs over the corresponding period of 1890. The improvement in receipts from April 1 amounted at the same date to nearly one and one-half crores of rupees.

The East Coast railway works are said to be progressing very slowly at Ganjam. Beyond the appointment of the railway deputy collectors and the acquisition of lands nothing has been done in that district, while in two other circles a good deal of earthwork has been completed.

The survey of the railway from Palghat to Cochin has been sanctioned, and will shortly be commenced.

An Allahabad telegram of Aug. 24 says:—The Khojak tunnel is now practically finished; indeed, an engine might have been run through it any time the last six weeks. However, as there was no particular reason for hastening the final achievement, the engineers have preferred to go on thoroughly clearing up and finishing off the interior of the tunnel. Therefore, when the first train is passed through in a few days' time, it will signify that the executive are ready to run through traffic uninterruptedly whenever orders for so doing are received.

It was announced yesterday from Bombay that cholera has broken out on board her Majesty's cruisers Blanche and Marathon, which are both there. Twenty-eight cases occurred within twenty-four hours, and six had terminated fatally.

Telegraphing again later on from Bombay, Reuter's correspondents say:—Fifteen deaths from cholera have occurred on board the British warships here. Yesterday, however, only one fresh case appeared. The vessels affected are the Marathon and Redbreast, and not the Blanche, as at first reported.

The cotton area in Lower Burma in the year 1890-91 was 8,418 acres, and the total outturn of clean cotton 6,984 cwts. The total exports of cotton amounted to 24,039 cwts., the whole of which came from Upper Burma.

Statistics of wheat cultivation for the Central India States show that the total wheat area of the agency in 1890 was 2,385,000 acres, and the outturn 789,700 tons. In both the area and the outturn there was an increase compared with 1889.

We have received the following from the India Office:—“From Viceroy, Sept. 11, 1891.—Prospects continue gloomy in most provinces. There is an improvement in Hyderabad, but Madras and Rajpootana in need of more rain. Cattle mortality has been increasing at Madras. There has been rain in Upper Burma, but prospects continue unfavourable in several districts. Prices tending upwards.”

GUP.

THE Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne, says a Simla correspondent writing on Aug. 21, ventured upon the somewhat bold experiment last week of seeking a change at Mahasu, a pleasant spot indeed in the hot weather, but not so cheerful when the rain is pelting down and every hill-top and ridge is wrapped in mist. For three days even Wild-flower Hall must have seemed but a poor substitute for Viceroyal Lodge, but on Monday the weather cleared, and the Mahasu hills were seen at their best. Their Excellencies are now back in Simla, where one is no longer compelled to wait patiently, or rather impatiently, to snatch an hour in the open air after long days spent in watching the shifting clouds, listening to the dreary patter of the rain, and wondering when the next landslide will occur.

A curious phenomenon occurred in Simla recently on two successive nights. This was nothing less than a duststorm in the midst of a heavy downpour of rain, or, rather, to speak more correctly, a shower of mud. A column of dust seems to have been carried up into the higher atmosphere from the plains, and to have been caught and forced down by the heavy rain. In the morning, as a result, all the plants and flowers in Simla were found to have received a thick coating of mud. There could be no doubt that the mud had been rained down, for it was freely sprinkled on plants away from the hillside and at a great height from the ground. Moreover, a deposit of mud was found in the rain gauges in various parts of the station. It is a common thing to see the atmosphere in the hills during the hot season thick with dust from the plains, carried aloft by a strong wind. But the conjunction of rain and dust is an accident of rare occurrence, of which, it is stated, there is no previous record.

A party was given on Aug. 24 at Simla by the Raja of Kapurthala, among those present being Lady Lansdowne, Sir James and Lady Lyall, Sir Frederick Roberts, Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, and Lord William Beresford. An excellent concert was given, comprising of violin solos by Herr Walther and Mr. Muir Mackenzie, and songs by Mrs. Robertson, Miss Ribbentrop, Mrs. Cavendish, Miss Halliday, Mrs. Johnstone, and Major Clarke.

There were no less than three European weddings in Colombo on Aug. 8. The contracting parties were Mr. E. Boyd Moss, of the Forest Department, and Miss E. T. La Touche; Mr. A. J. Rowe and Miss A. Gamble; and Sergeant Langridge and Miss M. A. Crawford. At Miss La Touche's wedding Miss Havelock acted as bridesmaid, while Lady Havelock was a guest, as well as all the best-known people in Colombo, and General La Touche gave his daughter away.

The Affinity Stakes were competed for on Aug. 19, with the rifle at Ganesh Khind by seven teams. The competition was of a very interesting character, and was won by Mrs. Von Donop and Colonel Rhodes, with a score of 86 points out of a possible 100. Miss Croft and Mr. Edgerley were second, with 83. The other competitors were his Excellency the Governor and Lady Harris, Mrs. Blundell and Colonel Wodehouse, Miss Cunningham and Captain Cox, Miss Wodehouse and Dr. Martin, and Mrs. Hensley and Captain the Hon. St. L. Jervis. The conditions were five shots each at fifty yards and five shots at 100 yards.

The annual “Minden Ball” given by the warrant officers, staff sergeants, and sergeants of the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers came off on Aug. 19 at their mess-house at Ghorpoorie, and was a great success. The hall was rather too small for the very large number of guests who attended in response to the invitations which had been issued, but this did not materially mar the pleasure everybody felt in the gaieties. Colonel and Mrs. Goldsmith and all the officers of the regiment were present. The decorations were of the usual military kind, and very effective. Dancing began at 9.30 P.M. and, with an interval at midnight for supper (the tables being laid out under a long line of tents to the south of the building), was kept up till the small hours of the morning.

On Aug. 27, at Calcutta, the Bombay team played the Calcutta Football Club in the presence of an immense number of spectators. No rain fell, and the ground was in capital condition. The game resulted in a win for Bombay by one goal and three tries to nil, the goal being secured by Mr. Walpole with a beautiful drop kick. The Bombay team proved itself the stronger throughout, and kept the ball well in the Calcutta ground, although the Calcutta players made several desperate efforts to avert defeat, and were once or twice very near getting a try for goal. The passing of the Bombay team was much admired, and they played more together than Calcutta.

A field of about sixteen turned out at Ganeshkhind on Aug. 26 to compete in a point-to-point race for the silver cup presented by their Excellencies Lord and Lady Harris. Among the field were General Gatacre, Mrs. Beckham, Mrs. Boorke, Mrs. Turner Jones, Captain Payton, and others. H.E. the Governor and his staff were also riding, but they did not compete, as it was a very damp evening, and just before a start was made heavy rain fell. They started from a point some three-quarters of a mile beyond Banira village, to the west of Ganeshkhind, and finished up on Ganeshkhind Gymkhana course. Captain Anderson reached home a good way ahead of the rest of the field; he rode Make-ship. Captain Fanshawe finished second, and Lieutenant Brown third. Mrs. Beckham was well up, and Major Blomfield, of the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers, well judged. H.E. Lady Harris and several other visitors watched the race from the tower of Government House. The riders reached home in quite a drenched state.

The quiet little station of Sehore was thrown into a state of quite unusual excitement on Tuesday, Aug. 18, says a correspondent, on the occasion of some regimental sports held by the Bhopal battalion, in honour of their being the best shooting regiment with the Snider in the three Presidencies in the annual course of musketry for 1890-91. It was a day of great rejoicing for the regiment, all ranks of which, from the commandant down to the last joined recruit, are desperately keen on musketry, and were overjoyed at their energy and hard work having been so successfully rewarded; the only cause for regret being the absence from Sehore of Colonel Peart, the commandant (now on furlough) and Captain Masters (now cantonment magistrate at Secunderabad, and for many years adjutant of the regiment), both of whom had been with the regiment for many years, and to whose keenness and hard work much of the present success of the regiment is due. The regiment, which, for the last two or three years, has done well at the meetings of the B.P.R.A. and at the Meerut Central Meeting, distinguished itself last year by carrying off the Challenge Cup of the Rajpootana and Central India Rifle Association, which it had then won for three years in succession, the cup now remaining in the possession of the regiment. On Tuesday afternoon the regimental parade-ground, which for the nonce had been converted into an excellent race-course, presented quite a gay and animated scene. A shamiana had been pitched, and all the European and most of the principal native residents had been invited, to whom the officers of the regiment dispensed their usual hospitality, and the excellent band of the regiment performed throughout the afternoon. Prizes amounting to more than 100 rs., which had been kindly presented by Lieutenant-Colonel Ransford and the officers of the regiment, were awarded to the successful competitors in no less than seventeen different events, which, with the exception of the tug-of-war, were all open to sepoy of the Bhopal battalion and sowars of the detachment of the C.I.H. quartered at Sehore. There were, of course, the usual sack, Ghurra, and wheelbarrow races, besides many others, some of which were most amusing. The competitors were very keen, there being no less than fifty and forty entries for several of the more amusing races. The menagerie race, for which a large and varied assortment of animals competed, among them being a camel, two monkeys and a parrot, besides several donkeys, goats, sheep, and dogs, created much amusement, as also did the donkey race, twice round the course, some of the mounts absolutely refusing to budge an inch—their infuriated riders being obliged to get off and in an ignominious manner shove behind. The obstacle race, in which there were ten obstacles, some of them very formidable, attracted no less than fifty competitors, and was much enjoyed by the spectators. The Battle of Armageddon, being a wrestling match on barebacked ponies between two teams of five men of the C.I.H., created much amusement. For the tug-of-war two teams competed, one of ten men from each wing of the Bhopal battalion. All were splendid specimens of the magnificent physique of this fine regiment, the average height of which, including drummers and musicians, is over 5 feet 7½ inches.

A Quetta correspondent writes on Aug. 21:—The cricket team of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers have been defeated in two of the three matches they have played here. The Durham Light Infantry scored in their first innings 173, and second innings 211; the Dublin Fusiliers replying with 113 and 216. The Durham thus won by 55. For Durham Messrs. Luard with 67 and 91 not out, and Baker 28, Corporal Wilson 24, and Lieutenant Buck 19, were the principal scorers. Schoolmaster Wilkins 16 and 111 not out, Lance-Corporal Smith 44, Private Bates 29, Sergeant-Major Crump 21, did best for the Dublin Fusiliers. In their match with the 1st Royal Fusiliers, the Dublin Fusiliers were defeated by 47 runs, the former putting together 207 and 152, declaring their second innings closed for the latter score. The Dublin Fusiliers compiled 142 and 170. For the Royal Fusiliers Messrs. Fitzclarence with 79 and 13, Waller 46 and 40, and Solly Flood 21, Privates MacCarthy and Hunt 30 and 29 respectively, and Colonel Brooke Meares 19, handled the willow effectively; while for the Dublin Fusiliers Sergeant-Major Crump scored 19 and 28. Private Price 43, Schoolmaster Wilkins 10 and 34, Captain Shepherd 51, Private Bates 28, Sergeant Butler 22, Lieutenant Lownders 21, not out, and Lance-Corporal Smith 21. The greatest interest was evinced in both matches, the Gymkhana ground being crowded by the men of the garrison, while during the evening the pavilion was graced with the presence of ladies.

After a long and tiresome journey, extending over a period of ninety-four days, Lieutenant Alexander Varges, of the 79th Austrian Regiment, accomplished his ride from Bombay to Calcutta on horseback on Aug. 26. The Lieutenant set out on his self-imposed journey on May 25 last, having as his companion a Goanese servant of the name of Simon Francisco D'Souza. The gallant officer was himself mounted on an Arab horse, while his servant rode a country-bred pony. To be as unencumbered as possible, Lieutenant Varges decided on carrying as little luggage as he possibly could. This consisted of their saddles, a few cooking utensils, such as would have helped them to boil some tea or cook rice and chappatis, a tiny medicine chest, and a double-barrelled gun. Their collective luggage weighed in all about two maunds, which was very materially lightened by an accident they met with when crossing the River Loriga, where both travellers had the misfortune to lose their saddles, and in fact all their scanty personal belongings. In this predicament they were pushed to the necessity of purchasing some native carpets, which they used as saddles, and thus accoutred they rode on to Calcutta. On the way from Bombay the travellers underwent some strange and trying experiences, having crossed over 120 rivers, large and small, and lived on such scanty fare as they could get from the villagers en route. When they rode into Calcutta they presented such a woe-begone appearance that they were refused admittance into more than one hotel, and finally found shelter at the Bellevue Hotel.

During the occasion of Sir Charles Elliott's laying the foundation-stone of the Girls' School at Burrisal, a memorial was presented to him by the ladies of that place, in which they urge that, as the education of girls had become almost as imperative a necessity among the Hindoos as well as Brahmos and Christians as the education of boys, the Government should undertake the management and maintenance of the Burrisal Girls' School, which, on account of the poverty of the classes whose children resort thereto, is at present far from being in a prosperous condition. The memorialists solicited his Honour's permission also to express their humble opinion that, Government having lately conferred upon the female population of the country a great blessing by raising the age of consent, the full benefits contemplated by the Legislature will not be derived unless suitable provision be made for the furtherance of female education.

The "Life of Her Majesty the Empress Victoria," composed in Sanskrit by H. H. Kerala Varma, the Valiya Koil Tamburan of Travancore, has been translated into Malayalam verse by a conclave of eleven Malayalam poets. The poem, which consists of 108 slokas, depicts the history of our Queen-Empress from her childhood, and is characterised by a poetical splendour of no mean order. The work is likely to prove a useful and interesting text-book in Malayalam for some of the University examinations.

In connection with the legal difficulties arising out of joint property in cocoanut trees in Calcutta, it seems, says an Indian contemporary, that a similar state of things exists in Ceylon, perplexing the law Courts and fostering the native love of litigation. An extreme case that once occurred is pretty well known in which the plaintiff's claim was thus stated:—"By inheritance through my father I am entitled to $\frac{1}{4}$ of $\frac{1}{3}$ of $\frac{1}{2}$. Through my mother I am further entitled to $\frac{1}{4}$ of $\frac{1}{3}$ of $\frac{1}{2}$. By purchase from one set of co-heirs, I am entitled to $\frac{1}{8}$; from another set also to $\frac{1}{8}$; and from a third set to $\frac{1}{8}$ more. Finally, from a fourth set of co-heirs I have purchased $\frac{1}{14}$ of the whole." Contentions are said to be not uncommon over such minute sub-divisions of property as the 199th share of a field or the 50th share of a garden, containing perhaps a dozen palms and a few plantains.

PERSONAL.

DURING the absence of General Elles in Cashmere shortly, Colonel Palmer will, it is presumed, officiate for him.

Surgeon H. W. Stevenson has been appointed Superintendent of Mahableshwar.

Mr. G. R. Irwin, Under-Secretary at the Indian Foreign Office, will shortly take three months' leave. He will proceed on a trip to Japan.

Lieutenant J. L. Harrington, 14th Bombay Infantry, acts as Cantonment Magistrate of Bhuj during the absence on leave of Lieutenant E. G. R. Wilkins.

Mr. H. J. Henderson, Acting Superintendent of Police, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, has been allowed furlough for one year. Mr. F. L. Goldsmid acts for him.

The appointment of Mr. H. A. Acworth, Municipal Commissioner, in succession to the late Sir Henry Morland to represent the Corporation on the Board of the Technical Institute, is notified.

Surgeon-Major F. C. Barker, M.D., F.R.C.S.I., acts as Professor of Ophthalmic Medicine and Surgery and of Comparative Anatomy and Zoology, Grant Medical College, during the absence of Brigade-Surgeon G. A. Maconochie on privilege leave.

Surgeon F. E. Murray, M.D., M.Ch., acts as medical officer to the Political Agency and in charge of the West Hospital, Rajkote, in addition to his own duties, vice Surgeon-Major Barker.

Lieutenant W. F. Tilley, R.E., has been appointed to the P.W.D. as assistant engineer, his services being placed at the disposal of the superintending engineer in Sind.

Mr. Harvey James, the secretary to Government in the Legislative Department, has obtained two months' privilege leave.

Mr. Gantz has finally resigned the presidency of the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association, Madras. The Rev. Mr. Davies, headmaster of the Doveton College, is to be asked to become the president.

Mr. J. B. W. Biddle will act as district superintendent of police in the Bijapore District, during the absence of Mr. F. L. Goldsmid.

Mr. W. D. Shephard, C.S., has been appointed to act as senior collector and district magistrate of Kanara during the absence of Mr. H. Woodward, C.S., who has been granted privilege leave for one month and twenty days.

Mr. J. Monteath, C.S., has been appointed junior collector and district magistrate of Kanara.

Mr. W. L. Harvey, C.S., has been appointed under-secretary to Government, Revenue, Financial, and General Departments, vice Mr. J. Monteath, C.S.

A Funeral Grand Lodge, in memory of the late Captain Sir Henry Morland, Grand Master of All Scottish Freemasonry in India, was to be held at Freemasons' Hall, Byculla, on Aug. 29.

The nominations of Mr. J. B. Naylor, C.S., C.S.I., and the Hon. Rao Bahadur Oodharam Mulchand to be Additional Members of the Council of the Governor of Bombay, for the purpose of making laws and regulations only, is gazetted.

Mr. John Tate is so seriously ill that the opening of the Kurrache branch of the Punjab Banking Company, of which he has been appointed manager, has been postponed.

A project to erect a memorial to the late Sir Oliver St. John has been started among his brother officers. The proposal is that a tombstone be placed over his grave at Quetta and a pulpit in the new Quetta church. The amount of subscriptions is limited to 16 rs. for field officers and smaller sums in the lower ranks, which are payable to Brigadier-General Sandford, R.E., Director-General of Military Works, Simla.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

General W. L. Pogson, who died on Sept. 9 at Brighton, after many years of illness, was one of the few officers remaining who served in the Honourable East India Company's service. He fought as a volunteer in Spain when only seventeen years of age, served during the Indian Mutiny, and also in the Afghan campaign, where he was wounded.

Sir George Abercrombie Robinson died at his residence, Alexandra Terrace, Penzance, on Sept. 9. He had lived quietly in Penzance for several years. Sir George, the eldest son of the second baronet, was born in 1826, and was educated at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. He was major in the 22nd Regiment, serving on the North-Western Frontier of India in 1853-54 (medal with clasp). He succeeded his father in 1855, and married in 1873 Harriet Rose, daughter of the late Mr. Lawrence Gwynne, and widow of Lieutenant-General Young.

Captain Arthur John Loftus, late 10th and 18th Hussars, and Keeper of the Crown Jewels, died at Brighton, recently, aged seventy-four. He was born in 1817, and was the only son of Captain Arthur Loftus, R.N. He served with the 10th Royal Hussars in India and in the Eastern campaign of 1855, and with the 18th Hussars throughout the Indian Mutiny, for which he received the Lucknow medal and clasp. He retired from the Army in 1860. In 1878 Captain Loftus was appointed Gentleman Usher to the Queen, and Keeper of the Crown Jewels in 1883, which latter appointment he held up to his death. Captain Loftus married, in 1863, the youngest daughter of the second Marquess of Ely, Lady Catherine Loftus, and has left three daughters. The funeral took place at the Brighton Cemetery on Tuesday. Letters and telegrams of sympathy were received by the family from the Queen and from Princess Beatrice.

Mr. J. O. Casey, of the Indian Marine, died in Calcutta on Aug. 24. Mr. Casey, who was a first-grade officer, joined the service in 1832, and was promoted to Third-Grade Commander on Jan. 1 last; he was thirty-four years of age on June 29 last. He was a popular man in and out of the service, and a large circle of friends will regret to learn that a career full of promise has been so suddenly cut short.

The last mail from Japan brings news of the death at the age of eighty-three of Shibata Zeshin, the greatest worker in Japanese lacquer that ever lived. From an account of his career given in the Japan Mail of Yokohama it appears that the first of his works to attract attention was painted between 1844 and 1848. It was presented as a votive tablet to the shrine of Inari, in Oji, a village in the suburbs of Tokio, where it still hangs. Shortly afterwards it was seen by a member of the great Matsudaira family, who offered a large sum for it; but the priests did not consider they would be justified in parting with it. Zeshin, as he was generally called, commenced his artistic career at the age of eighteen or nineteen as a painter of fans, and even while pursuing this humble calling his work was of such excellence that the sons of artistic families became his pupils, and many of them gained high reputations afterwards. It is said of Zeshin that when his pupils complained of business being slack he told them they ought to congratulate themselves, for it was only when the pressure of everyday employment was removed that men could undertake works calculated to establish their reputation. He worked up to five days before his death, and was engaged upon a decorative picture painted on silk of the Japanese Elysian Fields, which was almost completed. Examples of his great works in lacquer decoration have been exhibited in Europe, and have given him a position among the greatest industrial artists of his country.

MANIPORE.

THE NEW RAJA.

THE correspondent of the Times at Calcutta telegraphs on Sept. 13:—

The Government has at last arrived at a decision regarding Manipore. A collateral relative of the ex-Maharaja has been selected for the throne, with the somewhat inferior title of raja. He is great grandson of the Raja Nar Singh, and, as he is only five years old, he will have a long minority, during which a British officer will administer the State. As tribute and other incidents of feudatory relationship will be established, it will be impossible again to raise the contention that the State is independent. It may be hoped that Manipore is now about to enter on a period of peace and prosperity. The new Raja of Manipore is named Chura Chand, and will receive a salute of eleven guns. The title will be hereditary, descending in direct line, provided each successor recognises the British Government.

Commenting on the above, the Times says:—Any native Prince entering at once upon the duties which Chura Chand is destined eventually to discharge would find himself confronted with disorganisation of a kind with which nothing but the possession of exceptional qualities could enable him to grapple. But ordinary abilities, coupled with a moderately acute sense of responsibility, will suffice to make of the new Raja a very creditable ruler over a well-ordered State. As a stimulus to worthy ambition the title is made hereditary, descending in direct line so long as each successive Raja recognises the paramount authority of the Government of India. The payment of tribute and other well-understood incidents of political dependency will impress the reality of that authority upon the native mind. In this way it may be hoped that no pretender will again be able to delude himself or the people of Manipore with the notion that he can treat as an equal with the Government of India, or can claim belligerent rights in the event of rebellion.

When it is remembered how strong were the arguments urged both for and against the annexation of Manipore, the Government of India must be congratulated upon having hit upon a settlement which combines in a high degree the advantages of both courses. By investing Chura Chand with the title of Raja, and decreeing him a salute of eleven guns, it establishes the native Government of Manipore upon a perfectly firm and satisfactory basis. That the new Raja is an infant does not matter in the eyes either of his own people or of the native Princes throughout India. They are quite familiar with regencies, and with the assumption of administrative authority by the suzerain, when the heir to a vassal throne happens to be a minor. But while Manipore is, and remains a native State in normal feudal relations with the paramount Power, we practically secure for a period of years the principal advantages of annexation. We do not indeed obtain certain material advantages, to which annexation seemed an easy way, but we have an opportunity to organise the administration of Manipore upon broad and sound lines, to accustom the people to the just and orderly ways of Western government, and, in short, to confer alike upon Raja and people a political education which they will find invaluable. Though we cannot run roads and railways across Manipore with as much freedom as if we had annexed the country, there is every reason to suppose that we shall attain our ends by the consent of an enlightened and well-affected people. There may be some delay, but we can afford to wait; and impatience may be checked by the reflection that but for the accident of the Senaputty's rebellion we should have gone on contentedly enough, in conditions less favourable to our wishes than those which we now obtain. It is not likely that we shall again have to deal with an outbreak such as that recently put down. A sharp lesson has been read to all would-be usurpers, and the relations subsisting between themselves and the Government of India have been brought home to the dullest of the people with unmistakable force and clearness. There is, accordingly, no reason to doubt that Manipore under the direction of a British Resident will make rapid progress.

The great objection to annexation was, of course, a political one. A few who knew Manipore protested against its absorption upon grounds which may be described, without the slightest implication of reproach, as sentimental. They were reinforced by people objecting on general and intelligible grounds to the effacement of all local colour and the introduction of a commonplace uniformity, which are the distinguishing marks of much that we now nowadays call civilisation. But by far the larger part of those who opposed annexation did so on the ground that it would have a bad effect on the minds of the native Princes, and would present the Indian Government in the light of a Power hostile to native independence and ready to snatch at every opportunity to snuff out a native dynasty. Any action of that kind, or even any suspicion that we intend action of that kind, is antagonistic to the general and necessary tendency of our Indian policy. For that tendency undoubtedly is to throw an increasing share of the duties of government, or at all events of administration, into native hands. Whatever may be thought of that policy, no one who understands the nature of the House of Commons, and the ways of thinking of those who elect it, will readily believe in the possibility of returning to older ideas. The practical question is mainly in what native hands we shall place the powers of which we are gradually divesting ourselves. To destroy native governments and abase the native aristocracy, only to hand over the administration of our swollen provinces to the baboos who anathematise us in native newspapers is not at all a wise policy. Notwithstanding the flood of European claptrap, poured over India by the small minority who imagine themselves to have had an English education, India remains an essentially aristocratic country. An overwhelming majority will, for generations to come, yield a ready allegiance to their hereditary rulers, and it is infinitely better for us in the long run to hold the respect and affection of these rulers than to embark upon the unprofitable and futile task of trying to satisfy the measureless conceit and ambition of the aspiring young men who pervert Burke and Macaulay. Sometimes annexation may be quite unavoidable. In this case it has been avoided, and we may congratulate ourselves upon having been able to give a proof that we do not grasp insatiably at every chance of wiping out a native State and dethroning a native dynasty.

LORD LAMINGTON ON SIAM.

THE Daily Graphic publishes notes of an interview with Lord Lamington on the subject of his trip to Siam. He spoke of the affability and intelligence of the King of Siam, but he stated that the Siamese are far from being a progressive people. "They are incorrigibly lazy, and will only work under compulsion. Nearly all the labour is done by the Chinese, who are rapidly increasing in numbers and in wealth." He continued:—

"Chieng Mai is the capital of the Laos country. Laos is tributary to the King of Siam, who of late years has extended his authority over the country. It is a large town and an important commercial centre, the chief trade being in teak, which is exported in considerable quantities. Here I joined Mr. Archer, our Consul, and went with him to Mung Tuen, where we met the Anglo-Siamese Frontier Commission, of which Mr. Archer was in charge. The English Commissioners were Mr. Scott, the acting superintendent of the Shan States, Captain Fulton, of the Goorkhas, as the Intelligence Officer, and Mr. Kennedy, a surveyor. In addition to the Siamese members the Commission included representatives from the semi-independent State of Kyang Tung. From Mung Tuen I visited a cave, the entrance of which I believe to be the largest natural vault in the world. It was a difficult matter to get to it as it involved some of the roughest climbing and scrambling I have ever undertaken, and I had to wade waist-deep several times across the river Meh Hang, which enters the cave and disappears for several

The Commissioners further suggested that the Superintendent of Port Blair should be requested to consider whether the appointment of district superintendent of police in the settlement might not be attached to the cadre of the Commission.

These proposals are accepted by the superintendent with the following modifications :—

(a) He would add the Burma Police to the Police Departments from which assistant superintendents should be recruited.

(b) He would give to the 3rd assistant superintendent pay at 650 rs. a month, the present mean pay, instead of at 600 rs.

(c) He would omit the term "grade," which is introduced by the Commissioners in the designation of the 3rd assistant superintendent and those below him.

(d) He urges that the proposed scale of pay should not injuriously affect permanent incumbents in the appointments already held by them; and

(e) He is not in favour of including the appointment of district superintendent of police in the Commission as recommended by the Commissioners.

The Governor-General in Council will recommend for the sanction of the Secretary of State the scale of establishments proposed by the Commissioners with the above modifications, and accepts the view of the superintendent that the appointment of district superintendent of police should not be included in the cadre of the Commission. He also approves of the method of recruitment and training and the conditions of service suggested.

NEW RAILWAY PROJECTS.

It has been decided to proceed with the Assam-Chittagong Railway by State agency, as desired by the Secretary of State, pending the result of the company's endeavour to float a scheme. The first section to be taken in hand will be from Gauhati to Lumding, near the Naga Hills. The distance is 110½ miles, and the estimated cost 84 lacs. The formal sanction of the Secretary of State is required, but this is certain to be given, as the line is considered to be needed urgently.

On the cessation of the monsoons it is proposed to push on the Kaulin-Katha section of the New Valley Railway extension, covering a distance of 67 miles. Owing to the very heavy earthwork, rock-cutting, and the numerous brick and stone bridges that are to be constructed on this section, the railway authorities are giving timely warning to contractors of the difficulties they will contend with, and the entire absence of local labour, which will have to be imported. The country has been practically deserted after the recent Wunthu disturbance.

The three railway projects considered important by the Government of India, and during next working season to be undertaken, are the Mushkaf line on the Bolan route and the Attock-Mori line, both complementary of the North-West frontier system, and the Gauhati Lumduy line in Assam. The Bhatinda Bhawalpore railway for the present is to be kept in abeyance.

The survey of the new line to Cochin for the construction of a railway by the Madras Railway Company has now been decided to be carried out, and that the point where it is intended to connect the extension with the Madras Railway will be Palghat. Mr. H. J. Parsons, the engineer of the Madras Railway, who has been doing considerable survey work in connection with the extension to Nellore and places beyond, has been again deputed to make the survey from Palghat to Cochin, which will begin at the end of the month.

"A LYING SPIRIT ABROAD."

THE following lively passage occurs in an address which Sir Auckland Colvin recently delivered at the laying of the foundation-stone of the Dufferin Hospital at Cawnpore :—

There is a lying spirit abroad in these provinces, as in other provinces of India, a spirit whose boast is to identify itself with progress and with public spirit, but which is in truth a spirit of envy, and of hatred, and malice. When I say this you will not for one moment suppose that I aim my remarks at any one here present, or that I have in my mind honourable and sincere men who hold their opinions and express them from motives which I understand and esteem. Heaven forbid, for example, that I should say such a thing of my lamented friend and colleague, Baboo Bireswar Mitter, than whom a more enlightened man I have never met in India or out of it. It is not honourable men of whatever shade of opinion I refer to, but men who, under the pretence of disinterestedness, seek to impede good; men whose only method is misrepresentation, and whose only aim is the sowing of discord between the Government and the people of this country. In this matter of your municipal outlay and finance these men have laboured as they labour wherever the foot of the Government is heard. To set class against class, race against race; to plant the bitter herb of mistrust; to hinder a good understanding; to prevent cordiality and co-operation between those whose ears are tickled by their flattery or inflamed by their falsehoods on the one hand, and those on the other who repose confidence in the Government. This is their labour, as misrepresentation and all untruthfulness is their method. These are the men who live under the protection of our strong Government, amassing their fortunes under it, and whom we hear saying that Government is no better than a Moloch. They tell us day by day that famine follows in the footsteps of that Government; that the servants of the Crown are its ministering spirits, furnishing it with hecatombs of Indian lives, and offering a congenial incense of smoking homesteads. I ask you if there is any word of exaggeration in my report of their language. You know that it is absolutely true. These men have lately been occupying themselves with the affairs of your Municipality. You were not altogether able or free to withstand their insinuations, but I am glad to think, and to recognise, that you have made up your minds to put them behind you, and I earnestly advise you, until you have carried out the great works now in progress, to give no ear to anything that may emanate from that quarter, but to cast the unclean thing behind you, and to leave it to wallow in its mire. It is, as I have said, a lying spirit, a spirit which is the enemy of all that it recognises as the superior of itself, a spirit that seeks to sow discord where harmony should prevail, and to delay the coming together and the mutual understanding of those who only need to come together to have a mutual understanding. It was one of these men who characterised these schemes for water supply and drainage as "iniquitous schemes." I commend that phrase "iniquitous schemes" to your consideration. Think of what it conveys, you who know that the object of the schemes is to preserve the lives and health of your fellow-countrymen, and who are aware with what caution the Government has approached the carrying out of these schemes, and with what liberality it has come to your assistance. "Iniquitous schemes!" It is pitiful to see the English language brought to such ignoble use. These men acquire that language as rogues acquire drugs, not for their therapeutic purposes, but for poisonous uses.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL SURVEYS IN THE DECCAN.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—There are certain departments of administration in India in which the most watchful critics of Government expenditure will not accuse them of extravagance. One is the Archæological Survey Department of Western India, the progress report of which for last year would have been a much more interesting document than it is if a moderate outlay had been incurred in illustrating it. Not much would have been required to enable Mr. Cousens to tell the story of his cold-weather wanderings, with the added interest that would have been derived from illustrating at all events the more typical of the monuments that were visited and photographed during the tour. For in this particular tour a special type of buildings engaged the attention of the surveying party. In February last Mr. Cousens started on a tour in the Ahmednagar District, with the special object of surveying the Hemadpanti remains which abound in that part of the Deccan. The survey was left unfinished, and apparently what remains of this class of monuments in the British portion of the Deccan will suffice to occupy him in the coming cold weather, for which he has projected a long tour commencing at Boleswara, about twenty miles west of Dhond, and ending at Tringalwadi, near Igatpuri. We would suggest that as the Hemadpanti remains dominate the programme, an endeavour should be made in the report of the second part of the tour to supply a few graphic illustrations of the characteristic features of this group, which is clearly marked, and which has in it much that claims interest. The buildings belong to the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and are contemporaneous with the shrines of Guzerat which mark the munificence and piety of the Selunkhi dynasty of Unhilwara—the predecessors of the Moslem kings who made Ahmedabad. It is as natural to attribute the temples and shrines of the Selunkhi period to Sidh Raj as it is to attribute the mutilation of many of them to Mahmoud Begurra, for the bullder and the iconoclast alike profit by their fame in other respects, and often get credit either for making or unmaking which strictly belongs to others. Hemadpanti, however—if there ever was such a person—may be presumed to have been a less considerable appropriator of the credit that belongs to others. He had no nucleus of fame around which greater fame than was due to him could gather. It is not even known who he was, and we have our choice between a legend which represents him as a famous physician, who got a wealthy patient to build 300 temples as a thankoffering for a wondrous cure at Hemadpanti's healing hands, and another which makes him the Dewan of one of the kings of Deogadh, long before that place had excited the cupidity of the Viceroy Mahmoud Tughlak of Guzerat, and had changed its name to Dowlatabad. Either way, the story is interesting enough, and thousands of temples and wells of the particular type known as "Hemadpanti" are scattered over the country between the Bhima and the Nerbudda. They have for the most part fallen into disuse and ruin, for they have suffered from the iconoclastic-zeal of competing religionists, who themselves are often singularly indifferent to the preservation of their own shrines. Mr. Cousens reminds us that all these temples cannot have been built by one man. The legend which represents them as a joint tribute to the goodness of Providence and the saving skill of Hemadpanti, the medicine man only associates 300 of these temples with his name. Safer perhaps than the most confident and picturesque legends on the subject would be the general conclusion that these monuments were the products of a wave of religious enthusiasm which spread over the land. They sprang up in a time of peace and of relative prosperity, when Hindooism was exalting in its strength, and when its art-builders were able in leisure and in peace to give themselves to the patient adornment of the monuments of their faith. For the work is of the best. Mr. Cousens tells us of the infinite patience and labour that have been lavished upon these buildings, and in working out the endless and elaborate detail of their walls, and pillars and ceilings. At Pedgaon, which seems to be within easy reach of Dhond junction, the memorials of the two greater creeds stand in curious juxtaposition, inviting contrast between, at all events, the structural work of the Mahomedan and the Hindoo builder. In the precincts of an old fort on the banks of the Bhima, which is said to have been built towards the end of the seventeenth century, there still remain the ruins of five old Hemadpanti temples—one "a perfect little gem," Mr. Cousens says—which have stood, through at least six centuries, while the encircling walls of Khan Jahan's fort have for the most part crumbled away. They knew how to build, these men whom the Hemadpanti movement, whether personal or national or religious, inspired to dot the land with such enduring work. Of this Luxmi Narayan temple, of which the Archæological Surveyor writes with such enthusiasm, ample drawings have been taken, and it might be worth while to include some of these in Mr. Cousens's next report as typical of the Hemadpanti buildings generally. The abundance of graceful and carefully elaborated detail should give a certain technical value to these drawings. Mr. Cousens's report, however, shows that in archæological exploration you must not expect all strata to yield with equal abundance. District officers are expected to supply the Government with lists of the antiquarian remains, in their districts, and the entries, as may be imagined, are of varying interest. A march from Pedgaon to Karjat, east of Sriganda, resulted only in disappointment. The temple there is of no particular merit, and in other places indicated in the list the party found little of note. Needless to say the villagers, are able to give little information concerning the archaeological resources of their neighbourhoods. They are "hommes de leurs clochers," and not always even that. Mr. Cousens mentions as an incident of frequent occurrence the answer of a villager to questions about remains in a place some eight or ten miles off, that he knew nothing about it because he had never been there. Another villager, asked about a temple only four miles away, said he had never been in the village in his life. This, as an illustration of the limitations within which the outlook of the Indian cultivator is confined, is significant. Ahmednagar yielded little to the quest for Hemadpanti buildings, and it affords Mr. Cousens a paragraph into which little that is new has found its way. But he mentions, as a fact not generally known, that Ahmednagar, where Aurungzebe died, has a claim to divide with Roza the honour of being the great Emperor's place of burial. The tomb of Aurungzebe it is true is at Roza, and so is all that remains of his body; but his heart was buried at Ahmednagar, and a large platform with a masonry tomb now covers the spot. But in both places unostentatious sepulture has been given to the great Emperor, and it is not to be wondered at that his Ahmednagar tomb has escaped the notice of most people. Mr. Cousens's notes prepare us for an interesting report next year, and we should be glad to learn that Government had consented to a modest grant being made for the inclusion of a few topical illustrations in it.

THE MADRAS CONGRESS COMMITTEE.

THE Madras Times says:—For some time past we have heard but little concerning Indian reform and the Congress, and the silence which has succeeded the Calcutta meetings is a silence which can be felt. In the interim, however, there has come the bitter cry against the Age of Consent Bill, and a somewhat angry social discussion respecting it, which served to make men forget Congress matters for a time; and later, the passing of Lord Cross's Bill seemed to have the effect of scuttling the ship of Congress agitation. The ship may not have been actually scuttled, but never has there been such a silence on what the "reformers" call important questions as we find at present in South India. It was well that the political agitation should cease, for with the wolf of famine at the door, we have graver problems presented for solution than those with which Indian politicians intermeddle. It is only too evident that the people want rice, it is not evident that they want reform; and as to representation, they neither know nor care what it is, but they are crying out for relief. Just at this juncture there comes to us the Report of the Madras Standing Congress Committee for 1890. The subjects of which it treats are apparently Indian, but they are not connected with the Indians which common mortals see and know. For neither by day nor "in clear dream and solemn vision" does the thought of India skirt the subjects which have been gravely pondered and written about by the Madras Committee. So little do these subjects relate, to the hard and suffering life around us that the India of the agitators is verily an India in the air. "The most important work done during the year by the Committee was the despatch of petitions to the House of Commons, signed by nearly two lacs of people from this Presidency, praying for the reform and 'expansion of the Indian Councils'"—such at least is the Committee's own estimate of its activity. We learn that these petitions were obtained at a cost of 1,500 rs., which sum was spent in various ways for the purpose of obtaining signatures and despatching the petitions. Doubtless a good deal of trouble had to be taken to obtain them. India has reaped no tangible advantage from them, but the Committee have the satisfaction that in this matter they have done all they could.

Judging from the report, the Madras Committee has made no attempt to enlighten the Hindoo community on any political or social subject whatever during the past year. Its interest in the public has been mainly shown by attempts to obtain signatures and subscriptions, both good things, and it has been more successful with the signatures than the subscriptions. Its work is not so vulgar as that of the pedagogue, or if it condescends to instruct, the objects of its instruction are Governors and Members of Council, who, we fear, are dull scholars in Congress subjects, and hold the opinion that they know more than the Congress and its Committees can teach them. In Congress matters Madras has held a high place. Its intelligence and energy have been more remarkable than those shown by other political centres; but this report of the Madras Committee shows us that the enthusiasm once ascribed to them has all evaporated. The forty pages of foolscap which contain its report have no sparkle in them, but are dreary and disappointing, and necessitate a drive to the beach after perusal to get a glimpse of nature again. They show us, however, how the districts of this Presidency stand related to the Congress movement, and to what extent appeals on its behalf elicit a response. No agitation can be carried on without money, and the loyalty of men to any movement may be conveniently tested by noticing how much they will give in its support. The Madras Congress Committee evidently hold this view, and in the report before us we have its financial estimates of the loyalty felt towards Congress by the several districts of the Presidency. When we remember that there is no movement in the Presidency which makes an appeal to the whole of the public, except the Congress, great results should be expected. The fisher has all the sea to himself. Yet the estimates of the Committee were not over sanguine on this account, they expected only the sum of 1 re. per annum to be contributed, let us say, by every 30,000 of the people. But even this was an over-estimate. An allotment of 13,000 rs. to the whole of the Madras Presidency proved to be too high, for the receipts fell short of it by more than 7,000 rs. For the loyalty of North Arcot District, the Committee thought 400 rs. a fair subscription in aid of Congress agitation, but that district thought otherwise, and gave only 1 re. A similar amount was levied on the district of Tinnevely, and the response from thence was better than from North Arcot. Tinnevely remembered Courtallum, and subscribed 14 a. more. Kurnool gave 11 rs. instead of 350, and the Chingleput District nobly subscribed 51 rs. out of 400. Of the twenty-two districts whose names appear the only one who paid up the full amount was Secunderabad, which is not a district at all, as the Irishman has informed us. Madras, generous, enthusiastic, fell short in its response to the amount of some 1,200 rs., and the Committee appear now to be convinced that they have over-estimated the popular interest in their agitation, for the sums allotted for contribution in 1891 have all been greatly reduced.

Such a state of things is truly disappointing, for it gives ample room for the assertion often made, that the Congress movement is not spontaneous and intelligent, but manufactured and mechanical, and must be to the committee, and still more to the leaders of the agitation, an occasion for regret. It appears also from the report, that to obtain even the small sum of 6,000 rs. from 35,000,000 of this Presidency, it has been necessary to employ commission agents, at all events, nearly 10 per cent. of the amount subscribed has been swallowed up by payments of commission and contingent charges, upwards of 6 per cent. has gone for "establishment," and about 20 per cent. for "public meetings, postage, telegrams and stationary." After full allowance is made for the evident difficulty of obtaining money for Congress purposes, we do not think that economy is one of the strong points of the Madras committee. The report contains a criticism of Lord Cross's Bill, but to this we need not now refer, except to say that we think it would have been far wiser to have given to that measure a hearty acceptance, even though it did not fulfil the hope of representation by election. The affairs of Congress, so far as Madras is concerned, do not seem to be in a good way. There is no enthusiasm visible, and there is no programme of reform calculated to generate enthusiasm and heal existing differences. Until such a programme be framed the energy of agitators will continue to pass off in noise and heat, but its political force will be small. To the English leaders of the movement this report must be disappointing, and must awaken in them many misgivings, while it will go far to confirm the conviction held by Englishmen generally in India that the people of the country are by no means so ripe for reform movements as they appear to be.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Commander-in-Chief's Tour.—The Commander-in-Chief leaves Simla on tour on Oct. 15. He inspects Dugshai, and arrives at Kasauli on the 18th, Umballa on the 19th, Rawul Pindi on the 20th, Murree on the 21st, and leaves for Changla Gully on the 25th. He visits Duonga Gully on the 27th, Bagatur on the 28th, Kohat on the 29th, leaves Abbottabad on the 31st for Rawul Pindi, and halts there till the 4th. He leaves for Edwardesabad and halts there till the 6th, and arrives at Payzo the same day, visiting Tonk, Murtaza, Nilai Kash, Mir Ali Kheyli, Brunj, Apozai, Badenzai Gwal, Ismailzai, Gwal Haiderzai, Akhtarzai, Kazhe, Shina, Khulakan, Mhtarza and Khanai. This will take Sir Frederick up to Nov. 24, on which date he proceeds to Quetta, where a halt will be made till the 30th, during which he inspects Khojak, Chaman, Pishin, and the entrenched position. Mooltan will be reached on Dec. 1, and Meean Meer on the 4th, where a halt will be made till the 6th. The 7th and 8th are spent at Patiala. Shikohabad is reached on the 9th, where a halt will be made at the Cavalry Camp till the 18th. Meerut will occupy the time between Dec. 19 and Jan. 3, and Delhi will be reached on the 4th. After visiting the Royal Artillery Camp at Gurgaon, the Commander-in-Chief will return to Delhi on the 6th and 7th, and the arrival at Umballa is timed for the 8th. His Excellency will halt at Umballa till the 11th, and arrive at Bareilly the same day; halt there till the 14th, and reach Lucknow; halt at Lucknow till the 20th, and arrive at Gorakhpur on the 21st. He will halt here for a day, and leave on the 23rd for Howrah, which will be reached on the morning of the 24th.

The MacGregor Memorial Medal.—The Commander-in-Chief has approved of the award of the MacGregor Memorial Medal for the best military reconnaissance this year to Major Sawyer, late of the Intelligence Branch, for valuable work done in Persia. The medal for native soldiers has been awarded to Havildar Ramzan Khan, 3rd Sikhs, for services rendered on the Black Mountain and Hazara Expedition. He served under Captain Mason, Intelligence Officer, on both occasions. During the journey to Thakote in disguise he was exposed to formidable personal danger.

Colonel MacNeill.—Col. D. MacNeill, C.B., commanding the 14th Regt., Madras Inf., Bellary, has been permitted, as a special case, to appear before a medical board with a view to obtaining a wound pension. Col. MacNeill served in the late Burmese War as deputy-assistant quartermaster-general for Intelligence, and at the action at Minhla was severely wounded, receiving two bullets in the right leg. A medical board in Burma then certified that the injuries were nearly equivalent to the loss of a limb, and this officer was consequently granted a year's wound gratuity. In November 1886, however, the medical board in London did not consider the wounds of such a nature as to entitle Col. MacNeill to a permanent wound pension. It was then hoped that the leg would get better in the course of a couple of years, but instead of that it has been getting steadily weaker, and the medical opinion is that the symptoms will increase in the future rather than diminish.

The Imperial Service Corps.—According to the latest returns, the Imperial Service Corps comprised the following troops under training for war service:—Total 46½ squadrons of cavalry 6,918 men, infantry 9,510 men, and artillery 300 men. Details—Cashmere, two squadrons of cavalry, 343 men; six regiments of infantry, 3,750 men; and two mountain batteries, 300 men. Patiala, four squadrons of cavalry, 600 men; and one infantry regiment, 1,000 strong. Ulwar, four squadrons of cavalry, 600 strong, and one battalion infantry, 1,060 strong. Gwalior and Mysore, eight squadrons, each 1,200 strong. Eleven other States have also forces. Bikaner has a camel corps, 165 strong. Selection in the Kattywar States has just begun. The corps will be provided with all proper rules and regulations, transport being maintained, and arrangements made for medical provision and musketry instruction. Col. Mellis, chief inspecting officer, has thirteen officers on his staff. Among other States which will be taken in hand as soon as possible are Hyderabad, Indore, Bhopal, Cutch, and Oodeypore.

Long Service and Good Conduct Medals.—On Aug. 22 a very quiet little parade of the warrant and non-commissioned officers of the Ordnance Department was held in the Fort William Arsenal quadrangle to witness the presentation of a medal for long service and good conduct to Store-Serg. A. J. Dorkins, of the Department. Capt. C. Wood, R.A., Ordnance officer in charge, in making the presentation, first read a memorandum from the Adjutant-General in India to the general officers commanding the Presidency District, requesting that the medal be presented on a parade in accordance with Army Regulations, India, vol. ii., but owing to the present uncertain state of the weather the general directed the presentation to be made on a departmental parade. Capt. Wood spoke very highly of the recipient's conduct since his entry into the service, and of the careful career one must follow who hopes to secure such honourable distinction. Serg. Dorkins is also in possession of the Egyptian medal and bronze star for his services with the Royal Sussex Regt., in which he served for many years as drum-major.

Qualifications for Army Appointments.—It has been decided that the qualifications necessary for appointment to the command of a district of the second class are:—(a) Three years' satisfactory full-pay service in the rank of lieutenant-colonel; (b) five years' service in India; (c) higher standard examination in Hindustani; (d) an officer must not have been absent from India for more than seven years prior to his nomination. In exceptional cases an officer may be considered eligible without qualification (c) provided that one half of the service under (b) has been within seven years immediately preceding nomination, and that the officer has been one year in command of a regiment of cavalry, battalion of infantry, or battery of artillery. The five years' service is reduced to three years in the case of a regimental field officer who has commanded a regiment, battalion, or battery, or has served on the staff as a field officer during a campaign in India, provided that a medal was granted for such campaign, or that the officer was honourably mentioned in despatches. Appointments of assistant adjutant-general and assistant quartermaster-general at Army headquarters will be held by officers who have completed three years' satisfactory full-pay service in the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and have passed the higher standard examination in Hindustani. The appointment of assistant adjutant-general, other than that at Army headquarters, will be held exclusively by field officers, who must also have passed the higher standard examination in Hindustani. No officer will be appointed to the staff at Army headquarters or to the district staff as a deputy assistant adjutant-general who shall not have passed the final examination at the Staff College, or the tests detailed in paragraph 331 of section 263 Army Regulations, excepting officers of proved ability on the staff in the field. The appointment will as a rule be restricted to officers of and above the rank of captain. The following are the qualifications for the appointments of deputy quartermaster-general, Intelligence branch, and assistant adjutant-general Royal Engineers:—(a) three years' satisfactory full-pay service in the rank of lieutenant-colonel; (b) three years' service in India as a regimental field officer; (c) no language test; (d) an officer must not have been more than seven years absent from India prior to his nomination. If an officer nominated as staff officer for the Royal Engineers at Army headquarters does not possess qualifications (a) and (b) he will be appointed as a deputy assistant adjutant-general, but this appointment will be restricted to officers of the Royal Engineers who are field officers and have served three years in India.

Forthcoming Camp of Exercise.—Sanction has been accorded to the holding of a camp of exercise in the immediate vicinity of Poona in January next. The camp will be on a larger scale than that of last year, and the manoeuvres will be of an improved kind. In his speech at the close of the last camp, H.E. Sir George Greaves expressed the opinion that at the commencement of the manoeuvres it would have been better to have had the two opposing forces farther apart than they were for the opening manoeuvres of the last camp, and it is believed that during the forthcoming camp of exercise a portion of the troops will be sent off to Ahmednugger to commence operations from there, and gradually work down upon Poona. The following troops will be engaged in the forthcoming camp of exercise, viz.:—

ARTILLERY.—B batty. Royal Horse Art. (Poona); 26th Field batty. Royal Art. (Ahmednugger); 27th Field batty. Royal Art. (Ahmedabad); 36th Field batty. Royal Art. (Hyderabad).

BRITISH INFANTRY.—1st batt. Worcestershire Regt. (Poona); 2nd batt. Lancashire Fusiliers (Poona); 2nd (King's Own) Royal Lancashire Regt. (detachment in Kirkee, remainder in Nuggur).

NATIVE INFANTRY.—3rd Bombay Light Inf. (Sattara); 8th Bombay Inf. (Nugger); 10th Bombay Light Inf. (Poona); 13th Bombay Inf. (Poona); 25th Regt. (3rd batt. Rifle Regt.) Bombay Inf. (Poona); 28th Bombay Pioneers (Kirkee); three companies sappers and miners (Kirkee).

NATIVE CAVALRY.—2nd Bombay Lancers (from Neemuch); 3rd (Queen's Own) Bombay Light Cav. (Poona); 4th (Prince Albert Victor's Own) Bombay Cav. (Poona Horse) (Sirur).

The Bombay Presidency Rifle Association is apparently going ahead, says the Pioneer, for the prospectus of the next meeting at Poona in November contains the two largest prizes, we believe, ever offered for military competition in India, open to all the Presidencies. The Bombay Army Cup, as it is termed, is the great event. The first prize is 1,500 rs. and the second 500 rs. The distances are 600, 700, and 800 yards, the rifle or carbine to be used, the Martini-Henry, and the position, "any military." The teams competing are to consist of eight of all ranks from any regiment of cavalry, any circle of artillery or battalion of infantry in India, regulars or volunteers. Artillery and cavalry teams may fire with the Martini rifle if they prefer it to the carbine. The first prize will not be given unless six teams in all from the Bengal and Madras Presidencies enter and compete. It is to be hoped that the challenge will be taken up, and a healthy rivalry thus be established. The British corps, including Volunteers, serving in the Bombay Presidency, have subscribed 1,500 rs. towards the cup, and the Rifle Association have in addition thrown open all their best matches at the Poona meeting to the whole of India. These include for teams the Harris Challenge Cup, 50l. and 250 rs.; the Wanowrie Cup, 320 rs.; the Rao of Cutch's prize, 225 rs. For individual shooting seven matches are open with prizes aggregating 2,100 rs. These are confined to the British service. The Native Army is not forgotten, as, in addition to competing for the great prize, soldiers belonging to it can enter for nine other events, all with good prizes. There should be a great gathering at Poona, especially is the meeting will end a fortnight before the opening day of the annual gathering in Northern India at Meerut.

There is just a possibility of the Cavalry Camp of Exercise being held at Aligarh instead of Mainpuri, the former place being in some respects more convenient.

Practically the whole of the Native Infantry of the Bengal Presidency has been now re-armed with Martinis, though two or three regiments in isolated stations are awaiting the close of the monsoon before taking over their new arms.

The establishment of lieutenant-generals on the old local list has now been reduced to its future maximum of three. That of the Staff Corps also is expected shortly to sink to its new limit under the Royal Warrant of Jan. 28 last.

The despatch in connection with the recent warrant amalgamating the Presidency Staff Corps has been sent home. It relates mainly to the procedure to be followed in regard to promotions, leave, and transfer of officers from presidency to presidency.

It is not unlikely that the proposal will be made to the Home authorities to raise the Punjab Frontier Force to the status of a first-class district. The present strength of the force is nearly 12,000; and with the possibility of the 4th Punjab Cavalry and the 3rd Punjab Infantry being raised again, the time is ripe for the command being held by a major-general.

Col. E. Cunningham, Assistant Adjutant-General, Mhow District, has been appointed to officiate as Colonel on the Staff during the time Colonel (Brigadier-General) W. H. Ross officiates in command of the Nagpore District.

Capt. Finnis, R.E., who has been Executive Engineer at Murree, Military Works, for some years, has been succeeded by Capt. Digby.

Capt. M. T. Shewen, Staff Corps, Wing Commander, 4th Infantry Hyderabad Contingent, has been allowed leave for one year.

Lieut. C. Burrard, Royal Artillery, Officiating Wing Officer, 23rd Regt. (2nd batt. Rifle Regt.) Bombay Infantry, has been admitted to the Indian Staff Corps.

Second-Lieut. G. M. Rolland, 2nd batt. Bedfordshire Regt., Second-Lieut. J. H. Peck, 2nd batt. Royal Dublin Fusiliers, and Second-Lieut. W. A. Fisher, Royal Artillery, have been appointed Probationers for the Indian Staff Corps.

BENGAL.

OUR advices from Calcutta are to Aug. 25.

Bengal Marine Department.—The impending departure of Colonel McNeill, says Indian Engineering, possibly at a very early date, revives the question of the appointment of a permanent under-secretary in this important branch, connected with the shipping interests of the largest and most important port and shipping trade centre of the East. The work of the Marine Department cannot be said to be in any way linked with the Public Works Department, and now that it has a defined sphere of action, distinct work to be performed, and is a recognised focus round which mercantile interests revolve, it seems the time has come to transform it into an independent department under its present highly-qualified under-secretary.

Calcutta University Engineering Examinations.—Upon the results of the B.E. and L.E. Examinations held this year, the guaranteed appointments to the rank of assistant engineer in the P.W.D. are bestowed. It is stated that Mr. G. St. C. Sedgely, who owing to his not having taken up the University First Arts Examination, could only qualify for the L.E. degree, stood first among all the B.E. and L.E. candidates, and therefore obtains the single appointment offered this year.

Suit against a Millionaire.—In the Calcutta High Court, on Aug. 17, Mr. Woodroffe applied, on behalf of Baboo Jadoo Lal Mullick, the millionaire, for an order staying certain proceedings against him in the Small Cause Court. Recently the Corporation seized a carriage of his for non-payment of municipal rates, and sold it for 60 rs.; but this amount not covering the sum due, they brought a suit for 1,400 rs., the balance of rates payable. Before the suit came on for hearing the petitioner filed a suit in the High Court, seeking to recover damages of 20,000 rs. for trespass and wrongful seizure. The petitioner had already been asked to deposit the costs in the Lower Court if he wanted proceedings stayed, but he tendered as security Municipal Debentures and Government paper, which were not accepted. Their lordships refused to make the order, referring the petitioner to the Lower Court.

A Sensational Case had commenced at Dacca, in which Annanda Chandra Roy, a pleader of the local Judge's Court, is charged with bribing a juror. One Guru Charan, also a pleader, who sat on a jury which tried the Beliah murder case, alleged that A. C. Roy offered him 4,000 rs. to secure a verdict of acquittal for the accused, for whom A. C. Roy and Mr. M. M. Ghose appeared. Guru Charan's conscience prevailed, and he returned a verdict of guilty, and gave back the money to A. C. Roy. The circumstance leaked out and resulted in these proceedings. The case was creating a great stir in Dacca when the mail left. Messrs. Allen and Hyde, and the local Government pleader were prosecuting, and Messrs. Hill, Barrow, Ghose and native pleaders were for the defence. The witnesses for the prosecution were examined, and the case was proceeding.

Cinchona Cultivation.—The statistics of cinchona cultivation in Bengal for the year 1890-91 have recently been published. During that period the total number of plants, cuttings and seedlings in the Government plantations amounted to 4,749,861, divided as follows:—Plants in permanent plantation 4,515,861, stock plants for propagation 4,000, and seedlings 230,000. The quantity of bark in store at the beginning of the year was 426,256 lbs., while the outturn of bark of the year ending April last was 293,972 lbs., making a total of 720,227 lbs. From the latter amount has been issued for manufacture of cinchona febrifuge and sulphate of quinine, 250,330 lbs., leaving a balance in stock at the end of the year of 469,917 lbs.

The Naval Volunteers.—At a meeting of the Calcutta Naval Volunteers, on Aug. 19, it was decided to form a Naval Volunteers' Athletic Club, embracing all branches of athletics, but for the present turning its attention to Association Football, till the club is fairly started. Some of the best football players are members of the corps.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Aug. 26.

The Madras Lawrence Asylum.—The following alteration and addition have been made by Government in the rules for the Madras Lawrence Asylum. In Rule 4 an alteration has been made in the composition of the Committee, which will in future consist of the General Officer Commanding the Southern District, the Collector of the Nilgiris, the Deputy Adjutant-General, the Deputy Quartermaster-General, the Senior Medical Officer, Ootacamund, the Officer Commanding the Wellington Depot, and of three members not in the service of the Government who are resident for at least six months in each year in the Nilgiri district. To Rule 42 a clause has been added which provides that children of the Roman Catholic faith shall not be compelled to attend divine service of any description conducted according to the rites of the Church of England or to receive religious instruction, except from the clergy of their own faith.

The Madras Music School.—At a meeting of the council of the Madras School for Music on Aug. 24 it was announced that Mr. Grigg had accepted the office of president, and had appointed the Rev. Mr. Elwes, General Van Straubenzee, Fr. Mayer, and Mr. Runganatham Moodliar as members of the council. The Rev. J. T. Lawrence was appointed secretary, and Mr. W. Walker has been asked to become treasurer. A sub-committee was appointed to draft by-laws.

The Proposed Construction of Docks at Madras.—The Madras Government says it has no doubt the construction of docks or inner harbour on the accreted foreshore south of the harbour is practicable at no great cost, but thinks the Harbour Trust Board estimate of the receipts at about 3 lacs annually is too sanguine. The Government does not think coasting steamers, which constitute nearly half the tonnage visiting Madras, nor other steamers calling at the port with small quantities of cargo to discharge, would be likely to enter or make use of the docks. The Government is of opinion that, pending the completion of the harbour, a detailed consideration of the scheme for the construction of docks would be premature, but in order that the subject may be fully discussed, the Government has resolved to communicate the papers on the subject to the Press, the Chambers of Commerce, and several mercantile firms. The scheme includes a graving dock.

Murder and Suicide at Coconada.—A shocking murder and suicide have occurred at Coconada. Mr. Harris, son of Colonel Harris, assistant adjutant-general, now at Simla, first shot his wife and then committed suicide. It is supposed that Mr. Harris thought that his dismissal from his appointment on the East Coast Railway, as storekeeper at Coconada, was imminent, and in desperation he committed the atrocity. Mr. Harris was only married in December. An ayah at the inquest said that on Aug. 15 Mr. Harris and his wife were quarrelling as usual at dinner. After dinner the quarrel became so serious that Mr. Harris knocked his wife down. Mr. Harris then called for a peg, but his wife refused to give it to him. Mr. Harris then ordered the boy to bring some whisky, which he did; but his wife snatched it out of his hand. Mr. Harris then seized a loaded revolver, and shot his wife in the side. His wife called to the ayah to bring her some water. Mr. Harris then shot his wife through the temples dead. Then he shot himself dead through the head. The verdict at the inquest was temporary insanity. Both the deceased were buried together. Nothing of value was found in the house except a brooch and a few annas in the Government cash-chest. The head storekeeper of Waltair, who was investigating the house inhabited by the deceased, said the house was haunted and the natives dare not pass it at night. Another suicide was committed there years ago.

The Distress in Wandiwash is deepening fast, and the people are exhibiting all the marks of famine-stricken cases. The dry crops almost throughout the taluk have been a failure, and the ryots, according to a Madras contemporary, have become so disheartened that they have not enough energy left to keep alive in most cases the ragi plots they have planted out. Almost all the children, who are in receipt of gratuitous meals at the relief kitchens, look famished, and many have developed the characteristic "famine sores." This points to the necessity for a change in the kitchen diets. The usual meal now given is ragi gruel, which is in rare cases changed to rice, which does not meet the wants of bad cases. There is a general complaint that the kitchen ration is insufficient, but in many cases the poor recipients are unable to consume the rations from illness, and these plead for a single meal at least daily of rice congee. The district surgeon has been instructed to visit at an early date the Wandiwash kitchens, and report upon the influence of the sanctioned diet on the condition of those in receipt of gratuitous relief. He has been authorised to order the grant of the special diet prescribed in Section 189 of the Famine Code in cases demanding special treatment under medical care, wherever it is possible that suitable arrangements can be made for its distribution. In cases where the distressed ask for ragi congee or a congee made of a mixture of rice and ragi, the collector has been authorised to issue the ration in this form. The appearance of "famine sores" is a sure indication of the rapid deterioration in the condition of the people and that their physique is considerably below par, necessitating the adoption of active measures of relief.

CEYLON.

Public Works Department.—The Report of the Director of Public Works in Ceylon, for the year 1890, is a highly interesting document. The principal item in Mr. MacBride's report refers to road construction and maintenance, and the works carried out and in progress, and the savings effected by the measures introduced by the director reflect the highest credit on that officer's administrative abilities. The expenditure during the year on these services amounted to 25,62,902 rs., having been less than the year 1889 by 24,039, being a decrease, or rather saving, of 92 per cent. Roads in various and distant localities, and the reclamation of the Colombo Harbour foreshore, have been in active progress, a sum of 3,69,153 rs. having been expended on these works. Apparently there is a "Circular Road" right round the island, of which 330 miles have been completed, and either gravelled or metalled, leaving 420 miles of an old natural track to be completed. This work Mr. MacBride recommends to be put in hand as early as possible. From 1880 to 1884 the road mileage was 2,868, the cost of maintenance having been 68,29,497 rs.; between 1885 and 1889 the mileage increased to 3,150, but the total cost of maintenance fell to 41,43,870 rs., showing a yearly saving of 5,37,125 rs., or a total saving in the five years of 26,85,625 rs. In addition to road construction and maintenance, avenue trees are being planted, and it is believed some three to four thousand young trees were planted on roadsides during the past season. The cost of these operations was charged to maintenance. This present year, however, a special allotment of 1,000 rs. has been entered in the budget for this work. In the important matter of bridge construction, great improvements have been effected. Several new bridges have been completed, and old bridges kept in thorough repair.

BOMBAY.

OUR advices from Bombay are to Aug. 28.

Native Children in Bombay Mills.—Dr. G. A. Maconachie, Certifying Surgeon for Factories, Bombay, supplies the Times of India with some statistics that should be of interest to all concerned with the labour of native children in the Bombay mills. In April, says our contemporary, when the new Act was being warmly discussed, he began to measure the children brought before him, so as to see if Indian children were of the same size as English or Belgian children. So far Dr. Maconachie does not see that there is much difference. In the list given below girls are included, but at the age of twelve they are about the same height as boys. At all events, Dr. Maconachie often found the girls the taller. Of a batch which came for examination he rejected those under 4 feet 5 inches as being unfit for the labour, as latterly he was asked to say if they were physically fit, although for years he passed all with 28 teeth, according to the Surgeon-General's orders. This, however, resulted in children under 4 feet being passed, and he did not believe that they were fit for thirteen hours' work a day. After these introductory remarks, we give the heights of 237 children measured by Dr. Maconachie from April 16 to Aug. 26, 1891, with 28 teeth, officially stated to be 12 years old:—

Ft.	Ins.		Ft.	Ins.
5	0	3	4	5	30
4	11	4	4	4	21
4	10	4	4	3	24
4	9	19	4	2	22
4	8	24	4	1	5
4	6	46	3	10	1

These children at present are said to be able to work from daylight till dusk. Numbers of other children were examined with fewer teeth, who were, however, in some cases 4 ft. 8 in. For purposes of comparison, we append a few figures relating to the average height of English and Belgian children at 12 years of age:—

	Ft. Ins.
English { Males	4 6
{ Females	4 6½
Belgian { Males	4 6½
{ Females	4 4½

Turning for a moment to adults, we quote the following:—

	Ft. Ins.
Average height of English Males	5 9½
Do. Do. Females	5 2
Do. Belgian Males	5 6
Do. Do. Females	5 2

There are, so far as we know, no available statistics as to the average heights of adult natives of India. Indeed, in measuring these 237 children, Dr. Maconachie has begun an experiment that is entirely new in India.

The Bombay Mill Industry.—A meeting of the committee of the Millowners' Association was held on Aug. 21, to consider the propriety of closing their mills eight or ten days in a month, for three or four months at least, in order to check the over-production of yarn. It appears that the committee were not unanimous in their decision, and in consequence referred the consideration of the subject to the members of the association, whose meeting will be shortly called for the purpose.

The Industrial Conference opened on Aug. 24, at Poona, in a mandap near the Reay Market, in the native city. There was accommodation for about two hundred delegates and visitors, and the building was filled to its utmost capacity. Amongst those present were the Chief of Ichalkaranji, the Chief of Vishalghad, the Hon. Mr. Jeverilal Yajnik, Rao Bahadurs Raste, Barve, and Ranade, Khan Bahadurs Kazi Shahbudin and Dorabjee Puddumjee, Colonel Wodehouse, Sir Raymond West, Messrs. Lock and Reid, Major Newnham Smith, Mr. Cappel, Dr. Thomson, Mr. Krishnajeel Nulkar, Mr. Gopalrao Hari Deshmukh, and several others. Captain F. Beauclerk, of Hyderabad, was elected as president, and delivered an address. The proceedings of the Conference were brought to a close on the 27th, after five sittings. Several native manufacturers produced specimens of their products, and explained how they might be improved and what might be done to enable Indian workmen to compete on favourable terms with European workmen. Their speeches were all in Mahratti. The Hon. Rao Bahadur M. G. Ranade proposed votes of thanks to the delegates, to the gentlemen who had read the papers, and to the president. Captain Beauclerk having briefly replied, the Conference was declared closed. The next Conference of the Western India Industrial Association will be held in September next year.

Literature in Bombay.—Mr. G. M. Sathe has issued his report on the condition and progress of the vernacular and other literature in the Bombay Presidency for last year, from which we make the following extract :—On the whole, the literary activity of this Presidency during 1890 was pretty fair. Looking to the quantity and quality of the publications produced during the last preceding five years, the literary progress of this Presidency appears to be slow, though steady. The reproductions are more valuable than the so-called original works. The number of translations from English into the vernaculars is not large enough. India has had much, if not enough, of religious, mythological, dramatic and poetical literature. What appears now to be required most is a literature treating of everyday life and matter-of-fact questions and likely to promote the material welfare of the country. Looking to the relative position of the different languages Marathi and Gujarati appear to have kept their former ground, and on a par with each other; Kanarese, Urdu, and Sindi do not show signs of strong vitality. Hindi is doing better than before. Of the classical languages Sanscrit appears to be the greatest favourite. It is being ransacked and drawn upon very largely, and perhaps it is thought desirable that a country should first take stock of and secure what it has already got and then try for new things. If so it will be long before practical arts are taken in hand. The tone of the publications was generally unexceptionable, though there were occasionally specimens of bad writing. The total number of publications under review (books and periodicals) has been classified into 1,370 original productions, 470 republications, and 204 translations. Of this total 1,186 works were printed at Bombay in 70 presses, 530 printed in Gujarat at 28 presses, 305 in the Central and Southern Divisions at 35 presses, and 23 in Sind at 5 presses. The number of works registered for copyright during the year under report was 356, of which 305 were private and 51 Government publications.

Strange Suicide of a European.—On Aug. 27 about ten o'clock at night a police sepoy heard groans proceeding from a well near the Gymkhana, at Bombay. On looking in the well the sepoy saw a body floating on the surface of the water. A Parsee, who happened to be passing, went into the well and brought out the body of a man attired in European dress, but life was then extinct. Inspector Stanford having received information of the occurrence at once proceeded to the spot, and on searching the clothing of the deceased found a note-book in which orders for bread to be delivered to certain gentlemen were written in English. The book also contained a mysterious note which ran as follows :—"If this is found by anyone it is my last request that it should be forwarded to the following address. The unbearable insanity compels me to commit this dreadful deed, and I hope God will forgive me. Also may He bless you both.—Your brother, JIM." On the following page was written, "To Mrs. Sale, care of S. Buckley, 30 Thrawl Street, Brick Lane, London." The body was removed to the morgue.

It has been decided that it will not be advisable to change the constitution of the Marine battalion at Bombay so as to make the corps available for working guns on the shore defences.

The Bill to amend the law providing for the periodical inspection and the management by competent engineers of boilers and prime movers in the Presidency of Bombay was read a third time and passed at a meeting of the Legislative Council held at Poona on Aug. 22.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

The Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Sept. 13 :—

In upper Burma rain has fallen generally during the past week and the situation is improved in some districts, in others the prospects are still gloomy. Relief works have been started at Ava and Sagaing, where the people are living on food imported from Lower Burma. The numbers employed on the Meiktila and Yamethin relief works are steadily increasing. The food stocks are insufficient throughout Upper Burma. In several districts rice has reached famine prices. At the Ruby Mines, according to the latest official return, rice has risen to the extraordinary price of 50 rs. a bag. This, presumably, is due to the difficulty of carriage.

The situation in Upper Burma is aggravated by the deficiency of food supplies in Lower Burma. Although the harvest is excellent, rice is now selling at an unprecedentedly high price throughout the Lower provinces. In Rangoon, where the ordinary price a bag is 8 rs., rice is now sold in bazaar at 5 rs. a basket, equal to 15 rs. a bag. A further heavy rise in price is probable before the new crop comes in.

The state of affairs in Lower Burma is due to large exports and to cultivators having oversold the paddy crop. The quantity of rice exported from Rangoon between Jan. 1 and Sept. 10 was 100,000 tons in excess of the quantity exported during the same period of last year. Cultivators, tempted by recent high prices, sold all their paddy, and the heavy rain caused the harvest to terminate earlier than was anticipated.

Food stocks are now unprecedentedly low in Lower Burma. The present estimated available supply of rice is 90,000 tons against 240,000 tons last year. Instead of paddy being sent to Rangoon from the country districts, rice is now being supplied to them from Rangoon. For the next three months there will be great deficiency in the food supplies in the Lower Provinces. The prospects of the next crop are excellent.]

Sir A. Mackenzie returned to Rangoon to-day after nearly three months' absence in Upper Burma.

The work of replacing the useless Madras regiments by local regiments is proceeding. The 31st Madras Infantry now stationed at Moulemein and the Andamans are ordered to be mustered out. A new local regiment has been raised instead.

THE INTELLIGENCE BRANCH.

A Madras paper writes :—The Secretary of State for India, in according his sanction in May 1890 to the establishment of an Intelligence Branch for Burma for one year, required a report to be submitted at the end of that period as to the necessity for its permanent continuance. We now learn that this report cannot be submitted without some delay, owing to the branch having started work only in October 1890, and to the several changes which have taken place in its personnel, so that application has been made for the retention, on the basis already sanctioned, of this department as an organised branch of the Quartermaster-General's Department for the next two or three years, with a view of obtaining a thorough knowledge of the country and its various means of internal communications. Major A. B. Fenton, who held the appointment of deputy-assistant quartermaster-general in the Burma Intelligence Branch for some time, and had gained a considerable knowledge of the country during his tenure, vacated in August 1890; having rejoined his regiment at Bellary on succeeding to its command. This officer was succeeded by Lieutenant E. W. M. Norie, who had likewise gained considerable experience in the work of the branch; but he also vacated in November following, having been ordered to rejoin his regiment in the Bombay Presidency. On the departure of Lieutenant Norie, the appointment was held by the late Captain Norman Bray, Inniskilling Fusiliers, a very zealous and energetic officer, who doubtless, had he lived, would have been able to do much towards the preparation of the report on the work done by the Intelligence Branch since its reorganisation. This officer's death on April 5 last, caused the duty to devolve upon Captain Burrows, who has now succeeded to the appointment of deputy-assistant quartermaster-general. Owing to the disturbances in Wuntho, Manipore, along the Chin frontier, and in other parts of Upper Burma during the past few months, the Intelligence Branch has been working under very unfavourable conditions, as it has been unable to carry out any concerted scheme of reconnaissances during this time, but, notwithstanding, it has been doing very good work. The following are some of the valuable compilations :—Diary of an Expedition to the Upper Reaches of the Irrawaddy and subsequently to the Endawgyi Lake, by Major Fenton; Report on the Baungshe Chins, by Lieutenant Norie; Note on the Hukong Valley and Report on the Road over what is usually called the Aeng Pass, by Lieutenant Norie, and the Report on the Road from Akyab to Minbu on the Irrawaddy across the Arakan Yomas via Yanan and Sidoktaya, by Lieutenant Norie.

The Madras Mail publishes some further particulars regarding the work proposed to be carried out in Burma during the approaching cold season. The Chief Commissioner of Burma and the General Officer commanding that district, our contemporary states, have been informed that the proposals submitted have been finally approved of by the Government of India, and consequently the following expeditions, explorations, &c., will be carried out :—(1) Expeditions into the Kachin Hills from Bhamo and Mogaung; (2) expeditions into the Kanhow country in the Chin Hills, in view to operating towards Fort White on one side and Manipore on the other; (3) the subjection of the Tlang Tlangs, and (4) a visit to the Thetta Chins, who were a source of considerable trouble last year. Political officers accompanied by small detachments of troops will work up information and statistics of the whole of the recently-acquired Wuntho territory, and while doing so they will endeavour, with the assistance of medical advisers, to select a site on one or other of the three hills in the State that may commend itself to them as being suitable for the establishment of a sanitarium for British troops serving in Upper Burma. Further explorations will be made of the countries between the Baungshe and Chinbok tribes of Chins. The jade and amber mines on the extreme north of Burma will also be visited, a task which we advocated in our issue of April 22 last. Political officers will also be deputed to visit portions of the Northern and Southern Shan States and the Trans-Salween Shan States, parts of which are still unknown. Two of the chief objects of the cold season's operations in Burma, besides those already enumerated, will be the demarcation of the Burma-Chinese and Burma-Siamese frontiers.

THE DEPARTMENTAL RECEIPTS from State lines in Upper Burma for the first quarter of the official year ending June 30, 1891, are given as 1,66,186 rs., against 1,56,721 rs. realised during the corresponding period last year, showing an increase of 9,465 rs. Receipts in the same period on the Lower Burma lines were 3,70,458 rs., against 3,32,951 rs. aggregate receipts of the same period during the past year, or an increase of 37,507 rs. within the same period. The working expenses on the Upper Burma lines are set down as 72,759 rs., against a Budget proportion of 2,82,500 rs.—showing a decrease of 1,14,741 rs., and a comparative expenditure of 83,175 rs. within the same period in 1890. In Lower Burma 1,86,758 rs., against a Budget proportion of 5,50,000 rs., or 1,63,743 rs. expenditure during the past year, showing a decrease of 3,63,242 rs.

THE RIFLEMEN of Burmah have just founded a provincial association on the lines of the older organisations in Bengal and Western India. The new Association is to hold its first annual meeting at Mandalay on Dec. 21 and days following. The prospectus shows a list of some thirty matches, and there is quite enough money available for prizes to ensure a successful start.

CASHMERE.

RAJA RAM SINGH, Commander-in-Chief of the Cashmere Army, marched on from Gilgit to Chaprot on Aug. 6, wherefrom the Commander-in-Chief intends to proceed to Hunza and Nagar. After visiting these principalities he will go to Chitral, and then return to Srinagar by way of Askardu.

THE REFUGEES from Poonch who had emigrated into Cashmere in order to live under a better form of government, are being requested to return by officers sent for the purpose by Raja Moti Singh on the promise of kindly treatment henceforth; 5 rs. per household for travelling expenses is also allowed. Whether they return or remain, it is a valuable testimony to the reality of the administrative reforms in Cashmere that the refugees should have fled thither.

HYDERABAD.

ON Aug. 21, in the unavoidable absence of his Highness the Nizam, Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick distributed the prizes at the Nizam College, in the presence of Nawabs Sir Asman Jah and Vikar-ul-Oomrah, and several nobles, and a crowded assembly of European gentlemen and ladies and native officials. The large College hall was beautifully decorated. Business commenced with recitations by the kindergarten class. The little ones acquitted themselves very well. This was followed by recitations in Arabic and Persian. Mr. Hodson, the principal, then read his report for the year, after which the prizes were distributed by Sir Dennis, who spoke a few words of encouragement or congratulation to some of the deserving boys. The Director of Public Instruction, Nawab Imad-ul-Mulk, in reviewing the work of the year, regretted that so few of the nobility and gentry were represented in the school, for whom alone, or chiefly, the expenditure was justifiable to the boarding house established during the year. He hoped Government would send all the minors of the Court of Wards; and to mark his satisfaction with the field sports, he promised a triennial silver cup for an annual cricket tournament. The Resident then rose, and said that last year he had the pleasure of saying a few words on behalf of his Highness the Nizam, whose absence on that occasion they regretted; but to-day it fell to him to speak for himself. He was glad to be able to congratulate Mr. Hodson and the college staff on the good record of work done. There were successes, though not many, but among them he was glad to see representatives of the class for whom the school was more immediately founded. He was sorry to hear that among them the desire for education was by no means as general as he could wish. He really did not know what would become of the nobility and gentry of the Hyderabad State if they did not qualify themselves to assist their sovereign in the administration of the country.

The twenty-third annual meeting of the Hyderabad Rifle Association was formally opened by Miss FitzPatrick on Aug. 21, in the presence of the Resident, General East, commanding the district, and a large gathering of officers and ladies. Miss FitzPatrick scored a bullseye at 500 yards. In point of entries the meeting compared unfavourably with last year, but in other respects there was no material difference. In spite of the attractive prizes only four regiments from outside had been induced to compete. They were the Cheshire from Belgaum, who entered for the Secunderabad Cup, and the 17th, 14th and 6th M.I., who compete for the Deccan Cup. The remaining competitors represented local regiments.

The 2nd battalion Bedfordshire Regiment, stationed at Trimulgherry, leaves for England in the Crocodile, sailing from Bombay on Jan. 15. Captain Pickard-Cambridge and Lieutenant Minchin, with thirty-seven rank and file of the regiment, are to be transferred to the 1st battalion, in view to their remaining in India.

The 19th Hussars, on their arrival at Bombay on Oct. 2, will go on to Secunderabad as soon as possible, to relieve the 7th Queen's Own Hussars, who leave Secunderabad on Oct. 15 and 16 in two wings. The absence of the 7th will leave a gap in society and sporting circles, which, says a correspondent, will not easily be filled. They have been the backbone of sport, and, from the colonel down to the trooper, they have by their geniality made themselves universally popular.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

THE CIVIL SUIT in which Mr. Warburton claims 50,000 rs. as damages from Sirdar Dyal Singh on account of the private as well as the alleged public libels, came before the District Judge of Lahore for the purpose of framing issues on Aug. 18. Mr. Gouldsbury appeared for Mr. Warburton, who was also present in Court, and Messrs. P. C. Chatterjee and J. C. Bose for Sirdar Dyal Singh. After hearing counsel on both sides as to the matter of the plaint, the Court framed a number of issues, and Nov. 6 was fixed for the hearing of the case.

THE REPORT by the directors of the Punjab Banking Company for the half-year ended June 30, 1891, has been circulated to the shareholders, and is of a very satisfactory description. The net earnings have amounted to 19,251-14-8 rs., being at the rate of fully 13½ per cent. on the paid-up capital of the Bank, or, say, at the rate of fully 26½ per cent. per annum.

THE APPLICATION of the Himalaya Bank to be admitted to liquidation took place on Aug. 21 by the Judge of Saharanpore, who, after sitting from eleven to six in the evening in the Court, decided the company should be wound up; and, after a long debate in respect to the appointment of an official liquidator, the Judge eventually decided to place the liquidation in the hands of the Alliance Bank of Simla, giving notice that he would call a meeting of shareholders on Nov. 21 to give them another opportunity of expressing their wishes in the matter. From results disclosed at the meeting, it appears probable that depositors will not receive more than eight annas in the rupee.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE correspondent of the Standard writes from Odessa:—I have before called attention to previous expeditions leaving European Russia for the exploration of Thibet and the territory along the northern frontier of China, and now another expedition is being arranged for the so-called exploration of that country. At St. Petersburg it was stated a short time ago that the policy of China towards Russia was increasing in aggressiveness, and as a proof of this assertion it was pointed out that the Chinese Government had given its assent to the construction of a railway from Peking close up to the Russian frontier. At a special meeting of officers at the headquarters of the General Staff at St. Petersburg a few days ago the military position of China was discussed, and one of the generals who took a prominent part in the meeting stated that the Chinese Army numbered nearly one million five hundred thousand men. Whether these proceedings have any connection with the sending of ten cruisers from the Black Sea ports, heavily charged with heavy guns, ammunition, and other warlike material, for Vladivostok, during the last three months, it would be interesting to know. One thing is certain, that, in the event of any war taking place in the East, Vladivostok has been lately so well fortified, upwards of seven million roubles having just been expended on fortifications there, that its position is considered by the Russians to be impregnable, and it will form a base for any operations that Russia may wish to carry out in the East. It is to be hoped that all these preparations are not lost sight of by the authorities in India, and especially in China, where Russia is likely to make her next move when dealing with matters in Asia.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Sept. 13:—It is understood that the Ameer of Cabul is taking steps to obtain from England a geologist, a chemist, two miners, and a number of mechanics.

The formal betrothal of the Ameer to the daughter of Mir Abu-Talib Kazilbash, which has just taken place, has proved extremely acceptable to his Highness's Shia subjects.

Of the troops sent out by the Ameer to enforce his revenue dues against the Hazaras in the Upper Helmund Valley, one column is under Col. Farhad, himself a Besud Hazara, and another under Sirdar Abdul Kuddus Khan, Governor of Bamian. Both columns joined forces at Bodasia, a village in Besud, and thence advanced on Garmab. It is not likely they will meet with serious resistance both at Cabul and in the Pughman hills.

We (Pioneer) see that mention is made of a mission to the Ameer of Cabul being again within the range of possibility. Statements of this kind have cropped up periodically ever since Abdul Rahman returned to Cabul from Afghan Turkistan. If the Government of India is ever so ill-advised as to lay itself again open to the humiliation of having its arrangements upset by the whim of the ruler of Afghanistan, it will certainly not get much public sympathy. Let the Ameer be bidden to India by all means as an honoured guest; let pressure even be put upon him to make Lord Lansdowne's acquaintance, just as he did Lord Dufferin's; but let abortive missions be eschewed. It is not consonant with the dignity of a great Government that it should ever be placed in the false position of instructing its officers to await the pleasure of a semi-barbarous ally.

Nothing has been heard of the attempt of the North-West India tea-planters to open negotiations with the Ameer in regard to the prohibitive taxation of tea in Afghanistan. His Highness probably did not desire to discuss the question, being ignorant of the fact that the person most injured by the high duties on tea in Afghanistan is himself.

From Yokohama to London in Twenty Days.—The mails from China and Japan forwarded by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's Royal Mail steamer Empress of Japan, which left Yokohama on Aug. 19, were delivered at the General Post Office, London, on the morning of Sept. 9. Taking into consideration the time of arrival at Queenstown and the usual time occupied in transmission via Dublin and Holyhead to London, it was confidently expected that the mails would arrive in London within the twenty days, but owing to missing connection at Queenstown and delay caused by fog in the Channel, in transit to Liverpool, that time was somewhat exceeded. The Empress of Japan made the fastest record across the Pacific to Victoria, and the remainder of the journey was covered by special train over the Canadian Pacific route from Vancouver to Brockville, thence to New York, connecting at that port with the steamship City of New York, which arrived at Queenstown after an exceedingly fast run across the Atlantic. These mails were conveyed from Liverpool by a special London and North-Western train, which reached London in three hours and forty-nine minutes.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been published since our last issue :—

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The Department of State has received a cable despatch from the United States Minister at Peking, announcing rioting at Ichang and the destruction of an establishment belonging to American missionaries. No further particulars have been received. It is uncertain whether this despatch relates to fresh rioting, or to the recent outbreak.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 10.—The foreign residents in Ichang, with the exception of the Consul and the Customs officials, have left that town, and taken refuge at Hankow. The gun-boats despatched to restore order at Ichang find it impossible to get there, owing to the low water in the river. Some attempt to cause a riot was made at Hankow on Tuesday, but the disorder was quelled without any actual fighting, thanks to the promptitude of Commander John Ferris, of her Majesty's ship Archer, in landing a party of bluejackets with Gatling guns.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 13.—The steamer Ella has been chartered at Hankow by the British Government, to proceed up the Yang-tze-Kiang to Ichang, where the latest outbreak of the Chinese mob against foreigners took place, and a Christian mission station and all the property of European merchants were destroyed by incendiaries. The Ella will convey to Ichang a number of men and arms, including a Gatling gun, from her Majesty's cruiser the Archer.

SINGAPORE, Sept. 12.—An inland letter, dated Aug. 20, gives details of the way in which Mr. Greig, the medical missionary, was shamefully maltreated for hours by the personal bodyguard of the Governor-General of Manchuria. Mr. Greig was afterwards imprisoned for three days in Kirin, the gaolers pleading the direct orders of the Governor. Papers up to Sept. 3 contain indignant appeals to the Governor-General, who had suppressed the imperial edict protecting foreigners. His dismissal is demanded.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—The latest advices received here from China state that Sir John Walsham, the British Minister, had protested vigorously against the dilatory way in which the Chinese Government dealt with the recent riots, and asked the Government—(1) Why the edict relating to the riots was not telegraphed throughout the Empire; (2) Why the Wuhu magistrate who attempted to stop the riots was degraded, while his superiors who did nothing were not punished; and (3) Why the punishment of the persons concerned in the Wusueh riots was delayed. The Chinese Government sent these questions to Li Hung Chang, who replied that it was not the custom of the Government to telegraph edicts; that the magistrate was degraded for other reasons; and that the Wusueh rioters had been punished, two of them being hanged. The North China News regards the replies as unsatisfactory. England's action was backed by the other Powers, and it was thought force would be used unless China adopted a conciliatory attitude.

The Wunchang correspondent of the North China Herald writes on Aug. 3 :—We have reached another stage in the settlement of the Wusueh outrage. The leaden foot of justice had well-nigh worn out the patience of the foreign onlookers, who are all directly interested in the issue. Almost immediately after I despatched you my last letter, information began to reach me that sentence was being pronounced upon the second batch of offenders. In all eight more, convicted in various degrees of connection with murder, assault, and looting, have come under the pronouncement of the Chinese penal code. The various sentences include penal servitude for life, banishment for life or a period, beating, branding on face or back, and police surveillance. So far, so good. Branding, thoroughly Chinese, and just by law and usage, may yet revolt the sense of Christian justice, which aims after all not only at the security of society but at the reformation of the individual. But apart from this, the sentence may be accepted as the best guarantee against future violence; and the extra severity, if as a Christian nation we might desire to temper it with mercy, is yet a severity erring on the right side. The provincial gazette confirms the appointment of a successor to the deputy prefect, a successor who is known to be friendly to foreigners. The question of money compensation will, no doubt, present but little trouble. We hear that quite recently one of the most prominent literary officials in Changsha itself was implicated in the issue of the incendiary and lying placards. For the future safety of foreigners in China, and therefore for the future peace of China's foreign relations, these wicked editors of scurrilous literature must be punished, and must be prevented from future crime. The imperial edict ought to be universally published in Hunan, and the authors of the placards arrested. This will probably be the crux of the whole.

PARIS, Monday Night.—The eldest son of the Duc de Chartres, Prince Henri d'Orléans, whose recent tour in Central Asia, under the guidance of M. Bonvalot, attracted considerable attention, publishes in the Soleil a letter to the proprietor of that paper, M. Edouard Hervé, complaining that the Chinese authorities on the borders of Tonquin exclude all traffic of French vessels except those employed in the transport of the sick on the waters of the Song-ka, which belong to China, whilst the French authorities permit Chinese junks to navigate French waters without let or hindrance. The Prince, who seems to a certain extent to have been affected by the present epidemic of Anglo-phobia, hints that the churlish behaviour is traceable to English influence. He remarks :—"It might possibly be interesting to investigate the history of our relations with the Tsung-li-Yamen, and the part taken in it by England. It might then, perhaps, be seen that it is not only at the hands of the Chinese that we have been duped. It might possibly be discovered that we make a mistake in taking as our intermediaries between Peking and Paris Custom-house officials and merchants in the pay of China, who offer us their assistance to protect their own property (leur propre argent) by upholding the interests of the 'Celestial Empire.' Prince Henri then indulges in a strong attack on the French Ministers. His conclusion is, that if the Chinese are considered as a civilised nation, the conventions with them should be enforced, and that strict reciprocity should be practised towards them. If, on the contrary, they are regarded as barbarians, then, says Prince Henri, French diplomatists should be withdrawn from Peking and be replaced by soldiers, who would use the bayonet as a convincing argument with the Tsung-li-Yamen. He winds up with the following fling at England :—"But whether we have a civilised or a barbarous people to deal with, it is high time for us to act if we are to retain any influence in the Far East. We should also distrust the advice of nations having interests in China, who possess the wealthiest factories, are at the head of the Customs, command the trade of the country, and will not at any price hear of an intervention which would cause them the most serious detriment. These people (ces gens-là) despatch men-of-war which present an equivocal attitude while Europeans are being massacred. They permit the appointment of a Chinese Consul at Singapore, and accept a contract to supply the Peking Government with 100,000 rifles. J'ai nommé les Anglais."

The Indo-Chinese mail steamer Salazie, which arrived on Sept. 12 at Marseilles, brought important information in regard to the spread of piracy and brigandage in Tonquin. The bands are composed half of Chinese, half of Annamites, and there have been several bold inroads made by them, in which many have been killed on both sides.

The Pekin Customs Gazette for the April-June quarter, 1891, shows that the total collection at the nineteen treaty ports this year was 6,390,057 tls. against 5,498,299 tls. in the same quarter of 1890; at the three Korean treaty ports it was 129,891 dols. against 154,911 dols. in 1890; at Kowloon and Lappa it was 290,608 tls. against 253,881 tls. in 1890; while at Lungchow and Mêngtze it was 18,551 tls. in the first quarter of 1891 against 12,597 tls. in the first quarter of 1890.

In Hong Kong an Arms Ordinance has been read a first time. By it no person may carry arms without a license, except the military or navy, justices of the peace and jurors, and junks that have given security to the harbour master. Importers and dealers in arms are to register themselves and furnish returns. On suspicion of possession of arms for Chinese bands a search-warrant may be issued. The master of every ship about to leave the waters of the Colony may, without warrant, search for arms and arrest offenders.

The Hankow correspondent of the Shenpao writes that telegraph lines have been completed in Hupeh and connections were to be made in Hunan. As soon as the line party arrived at the borders of that province, the inhabitants rose against the invasion by telegraph poles of the most conservative province of China. Over 10,000 people gathered, and in a short time 2,000 poles were consigned to the flames. Then a sort of vigilance committee was appointed to watch over all the watercourses and creeks, to prevent foreign engineers and telegraph materials being smuggled into the province. The line party, of course, could do nothing against so overwhelming a force, and made their way back to report the state of affairs. Though everything betokens no further disturbance, still it is doubtful whether for some time to come telegraph enterprise will be practicable in Hunan.

I understand, says a correspondent, that a French gentleman, who has been staying in Chefoo for some time past, has successfully completed his negotiations with the authorities for the supply of Chinese labourers for New Caledonia. In all, 2,500 coolies will be required, and it is probable that they will be shipped south in batches of 600. They will be employed in the nickel mines of that far-off French possession.

The Japan Mail tells us, under the heading "Banks in Japan," that the Nippon publishes a remarkable article on the subject of banks and companies. It takes a very gloomy view of the present situation, predicting that the failures which have already occurred are only a prelude, and will be followed shortly by others. The whole blame is laid on the shoulders of the Government, which is accused of discharging its duties of superintendence in an inefficient and perfunctory manner. It is competent for the authorities to inspect the banks either at regularly fixed intervals or unexpectedly at any moment. The Nippon claims that the power thus conferred is not duly exercised; that the condition of many banks is known to be unsound, but that the Government refrains from exposing them by sudden inspection. On the other hand, the banks go on presenting rosy returns and declaring big dividends. There is no concealing the fact that the market price of their shares is steadily falling, whereas the banks pay as big a percentage as ever on their capital. The Nippon urges that if official superintendence is not thorough, it becomes a mischief rather than an advantage.

The census report of Perak is issued. The total population is 214,254—156,408 males and 57,846 females. The increase in the last twelve years is 164.23 per cent. The Malays are the most numerous portion of the population, with 96,719, or 45.14 per cent. of the whole. The Chinese number 94,345, the Tamils 13,086 and the aborigines 5,779, the latter being principally located in Batang, Padang, Kinta and Kuala Kangsar. The Europeans number 366 and the Eurasians 289.

It is reported from Bangkok that the French force marched to Bata-bong and arrested the local authorities there, and then returned to Cambodia, taking with them the chief of Batabong. The cause of this aggression on Siamese territory is not stated.

If any proof is required of the existence of the wave of commercial depression which is now passing over Bangkok, in common with many other cities of the Far East, we have it, the Siam Mercantile Gazette says, in the gradual withdrawal and sale of many of our local liners. Messrs. Windsor Rose and Co. have just parted with their steam lighter the Chamraen to the Siamese Government, and 'we learn that another well-known boat, the Sury Wongse, which until quite recently had been running between Bangkok and Singapore, has been sold to a Japanese at Kobe for 30,000 dols. She is a vessel of 895 tons burden, and was built at Newcastle in 1885.

Of the nine candidates who appeared at the recent preliminary examination held in Singapore for the establishment of a medical school, Henry Edward Boudewyn is declared to have passed highest with a percentage of 72.9 marks, the qualifying percentage being 66. The second candidate fell short of this by a trifle less than a mark. Boudewyn being thus the only successful candidate, it is stated that there is no present likelihood of a medical school being opened. It is believed, however, that the candidate in question will be sent to study at the Madras Medical College in October, his examination at Singapore being a sufficient qualification for admission into that institution.

According to news received at San Francisco (Reuter telegraphs) Raja Brooke, of Sarawak, Borneo, has proclaimed his son Vyner Brooke as his successor, and has decreed that he shall attain his majority at the age of seventeen. Serious disturbances have occurred at Sintang in Dutch West Borneo between Dyaks and Malays. Three thousand of the former are in arms against the Malay Raja. Several men were killed in a fight between the contending parties. The country is suffering from famine, which is believed to be at the root of the trouble. Some soldiers have been sent to the district.

The last issue of the official gazette of North Borneo, published at Sandakan, the capital of the company's territory, contains some interesting statistics respecting the growth of North Borneo trade. The following table shows the development of imports and exports during the past six years:—

	Imports. Dollars.	Exports. Dollars.		Imports. Dollars.	Exports. Dollars.
1886	849,116	524,724	1889 ...	1,799,620	701,434
1887	958,643	535,267	1890 ...	2,018,089	901,290

The chief imports of 1890 were:—Cloth, 130,659 dols.; rice, 302,532 dols.; and treasure, 330,870 dols. The chief exports were:—Tobacco, 396,314 dols.; treasure, 99,074 dols.; and timber, 44,584 dols.

The N.C. Herald of July 31 says:—Mr. August H. Maertens, late manager of the Government silkworm nurseries in Corea, is at present in Shanghai, and will leave for Europe next week by the Sachsen. A representative of the North China Daily News interviewed him the other day, and in the course of conversation Mr. Maertens drew a decidedly gloomy picture of the kingdom which he has quitted for good after a residence in it of six or seven years. Speaking first of his own speciality, Mr. Maertens said:—"All that the Government has done to encourage silk cultivation has ended in failure. At the present time there is only one Government silk-weaving establishment in Seoul. It employs a few Chinamen, and simply turns out a little silk for the use of the Queen. The Coreans have not the patience to carry a commercial enterprise through; they want immediate results. The cultivation of mulberry trees of course demands time, but the Coreans could not see this, and soon got tired of the whole affair. Under instructions from the Government, I imported half a million mulberry trees. I had to pay most of the expense myself, and it was two years before I got anything back."

Asked to describe the general position of affairs at the capital, Mr. Maertens said:—"The King is about thirty-six years of age. He is a well-meaning man, but entirely under the thumb of the Queen and his ministers, who do not allow him to know more of what is going on than suits themselves. His foreign advisers are General Legendre and Mr. C. R. Greathouse, late American Consul-General at Yokohama. They are both Americans, and so are all the foreign military instructors. Of all the representatives of other countries the Chinese Resident seems to have most influence. He is certainly received with less formality than any one else in audience with the King. The Russians are increasing their influence beneath the surface. As to the Corean officials, they are masters in the art of 'squeezing.' Some years ago it was decided to construct a mint, at an estimated cost of 60,000 dols. The ministers made the bill foot up to 600,000 dols., and soon after the machinery arrived the place was shut up. It has lately been reopened, I hear, at the instance of Mr. Greathouse; but in the meantime the machinery has no doubt been allowed to spoil, and what has not spoiled has been stolen."

Interrogated about the prospect of railways, Mr. Maertens said nothing had yet been done, though their introduction has been talked of for years. At Chemulpo, he said, where the trade is rapidly increasing, there is one German firm and one American; all the rest of the trade is in the hands of Chinese and Japanese.

Cyprus.—Royal Eng., Army Service Corps, Ordnance Store Corps, Medical Staff Corps. Total—809 men, 26 women, 49 children.

In the coming Relief Season, says the Pioneer, three troopers will visit Kurrachee. The Euphrates will arrive on Dec. 8 with the 47th Field Battery and drafts; the Malabar on Dec. 22 with the 2nd batt. of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders; and the Serapis on Jan. 19 with the 1st batt. Royal West Kent Regiment. Thus out of three British infantry regiments arriving in India during the cold weather two will be disembarked at Kurrachee. The troopships on their return voyages will take home details of various corps, the Euphrates also carrying the 28th Field Battery. It is extremely desirable that Kurrachee should become a regular trooping port for Sind, Quetta, and the greater part of the Punjab, for a great saving in distance will thus be effected, and a reduction in travelling charges must follow as a matter of course. The troops will travel on State Railways only, as the North-Western system now stretches from the sea to New Chaman in one direction and to the northern confines of the Punjab in another. This season the men will be put into a standing-camp at Kurrachee, but next year in all probability huts will be built. In case of war it will be a great gain to have the Kurrachee route to Quetta and the Punjab in working order, since reinforcements from England would then be able to avoid the present long detour from Bombay through Lahore.

The Korkus.—One more of the hill dialects of India has been reduced to writing, and an elementary grammar, with a vocabulary of 1,500 words, has just been issued from the press. The people are the Korkus, who inhabit the Nerbudda division of the Central Provinces and the Melghat taluk of Berar, numbering about 14,000, and the author is the Rev. E. F. Ward, who has been among them a number of years. From a short account of the Korkus included in the little book, says the Englishman, they seem to have the same custom as our nearer neighbours the Looshais, of moving their villages from one site to another every few years, and like the Santals, they build their huts in two rows, with a street between them. A village consists of from thirty to forty huts, which is larger than the villages of some tribes, but much smaller than those of others. In appearance "the average Korku has a round face, rather wide nose, but not flattened like the negro, cheek bones prominent, scanty moustache, and head shaved after the Hindoo fashion. In colour he is a shade or two darker than the Hindoo, and many have a decidedly Tartar-like expression in their faces." The Korkus do not practise infant marriage, and a good sum of money is paid to the bride's father, which the bridegroom works out if he cannot otherwise meet the demand. The chief objects of Korku worship are the sun and moon, after which they regard certain stones or heaps of stones, sometimes daubed with red paint, which personify local malevolent deities. Besides offerings of food to their gods, these people sacrifice fowls, swine, and goats, and when the sacrifice is made to the sun the victim is turned towards the east. They build no temples and fashion no images, but they have an extraordinary custom of setting up carved posts under mowha trees in memory of their dead. These posts are carved on all four sides with representations of the sun and moon, men on horseback, and other figures of common objects.

LONDON: TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1891.

THE RUSSIANS ON THE PAMIR.

ALTHOUGH the stories which pass current from time to time in Vienna about events "far hence in Asia" are not always to be trusted, we must not overlook the significance of the report telegraphed the other day by the Vienna correspondent of the Daily News. It would appear that some perturbation has been caused there by a rumour of actual encounters between Russian and Afghan troops. No particulars are given, and the rumour is said to have come from London. Now it need hardly be said that an item of intelligence reaching us in this way would in ordinary circumstances merit very little attention. Facts which escape the notice of the English Press, are then transmitted to a European capital, and finally redirected to London, will, as a rule, be either exceedingly trivial or more than doubtful. But in this case it is different. Although it may turn out that there has been nothing for some time past which can be construed into a collision between Russians and Afghans, such an occurrence may take place at almost any moment; and as it might entail serious consequences, the Vienna story may serve to remind us that the situation needs to be carefully watched. We have already noticed that in well-informed circles there is a disposition to expect a renewal of activity on the part of the Russians in Central Asia; and the latest news points very clearly to the direction whence the trouble is likely to make itself felt. Once more the Russians seem inclined to bring about a dispute regarding a section of the Afghan boundary which has never yet been demarcated. It will be better for the present to avoid geographical details, which, while familiar enough to those who study the question, only interest the general reader when the danger in Central Asia becomes acute. We need merely explain that whereas there is a more or less vague understanding between England and Russia that the river Oxus is the boundary of Afghanistan, from its source to Khamiab, geographers have not yet decided which of two or more rivers is the main stream of the Oxus from its source to the confines of Balkh, that is, for a considerable distance. The north-eastern boundary of the AMEER'S dominions, therefore, lies in debatable territory. In this region, which may be claimed either by the Afghans or by the Chinese, or by chiefs tributary to the AMEER OF BOKHARA, a Russian "scientific expedition" is at the present moment operating; and if the explorers have not already exchanged shots with the AMEER'S troops it is more than likely that they very soon will. According to the Pioneer the expedition is under the command of the Cossack officer, CAPTAIN GROMCHEVSKY, and consists of five or six hundred men, with two mountain guns. CAPTAIN GROMCHEVSKY'S so-called exploration, the Pioneer observes, is but another sign of Russian activity in the debatable land on the borders of North-Eastern Afghanistan. Except for what the Indian papers tell us about the leader of the expedition, the only recent news we have is that given in the current number of the "Proceedings" of the Royal Geographical Society. We read here:—

Under the leadership of Captain Bachewski an expedition started on May 29 from Samarkand, with the object of exploring routes in the Pamir and the passes over the Hindu Kush into Kafirstan, thus supplementing the work which Captain Gromchevsky has been doing in that region during the last two years. The latter traveller has himself returned to Turkestan from St. Petersburg.

The despatch of CAPTAIN BARCHEVSKY'S expedition was referred to at the time in these columns. If the Pioneer's information is correct, it looks almost as if CAPTAIN GROMCHEVSKY, after getting his orders from St. Petersburg, had hurried to Central Asia to join and take command of the expedition which started in May. In any case, we may safely assume that he is somewhere on the Afghan frontier now, with a strong force at his heels; and the question is, to what lengths he will allow himself to go, should the AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN resent his proceedings.

Judging from what we know of his former expeditions, this Cossack officer will not hesitate to resort to force unless the odds against him are overwhelming. He attempted to reach Kafirstan in 1889, and was only prevented from carrying out his designs by the weakness of the escort with him. On that occasion he had but seven Cossacks, two Turcomans and two Kirghiz as escort, and the Afghan commandant at Kila Panja on the Oxus stopped him and sent him back. With 500 Cossacks at his back he is quite likely to show fight; especially as he may also be able to reckon on the support of the AMEER'S enemies in Shignan and the other States on the Upper Oxus. A collision, therefore, between Russians and Afghans would appear to be well within the bounds of possibility, if it has not taken place already.

It is satisfactory to think that the Government of India is fully aware of the dangers of the situation, and that within the last few years much has been done to secure British interests in this quarter. Thanks to SIR WILLIAM LOCKHART'S mission, and to the arduous explorations of MR. NEY ELIAS and CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND, we no longer work in the dark. We know the country, and there will be no uncertainty as to the line of action which will have to be followed if decisive measures become an imperative necessity. The establishment of a British agency in Chitral, and the steps taken to bring the neighbouring chiefs under British influence, must also be regarded with unmixed satisfaction; and although scientific expeditions like that on which CAPTAIN GROMCHEVSKY is now engaged may lead to trouble and anxiety, the danger will not assume the formidable dimensions it would rapidly have grown to a decade ago. At the same time further and more definite news will be awaited with considerable interest; and it may be hoped that we shall get more trustworthy information than is usually to be found in the Vienna newspapers.

THE Daily News report alluded to above was dated Sept. 10, and stated "that some excitement had been caused in Vienna by rumours, said to have come from London, to the effect that some serious encounters had taken place between Russian troops and those of the Ameer of Afghanistan." In a later despatch the correspondent adds:—

I have tried to verify the rumour to which I referred in my telegram that some Russian troops had crossed the Afghan frontier, and must say that the result of my inquiries is the confirmation of the statement, so far as it is possible to confirm it in this city. The opinion held in diplomatic circles here is that the news of small encounters along the Afghan frontier has repeatedly come from different quarters and from trustworthy sources and cannot be silenced, it can no longer be doubted. There are, of course, those who think that Russia's being employed as far as possible from Austria must be regarded with satisfaction. Still the general impression is that as matters stand at present, and have stood for some time, it will be best for all concerned that there should not be any firing in any part of the world, and especially from Russian muskets.

THE INDIAN FACTORY ACT AGITATION IN ENGLAND.

MR. HOLT HALLETT has not yet been exposed to what will some day have to come—if the Indian mill-owners have the wisdom to see that it is not enough to gnash their teeth at him, or even to answer him effectively on certain points—that is to say, a complete and scientific exposure of his blunders in dealing with Indian factory reports, and of his methods of argument. "An Indian Mill Manager," however, and Dr. Bahadurji have managed to prick him here and there, and he shows his weakness by the increased violence of his language, which, we may point out to him, if it pleases the British working man, jealous of the competition of cheap labour in India, must diminish the effect of his arguments on moderate and sensible men. He and his critics are still at it, hammer and tongs, in the Manchester Guardian. We cannot find room for this wordy controversy. Mr. Hallett declares that "no attempt has been made to answer him except by bluster, sneers, and abuse." We regret to say that, having read the controversy, we cannot admit that this is quite an accurate statement of the position. He evidently fancies that, by reiterating the statements he has so industriously culled from the reports, he is answering the explanations of those statements offered, as we believe in good faith, by those who criticise him, and is strengthening his case. An "Indian Mill Manager" pointed out that Mr. Hallett laid too much stress on the evidence of the Commissions of 1875 and 1884, as if no improvement had taken place since those dates. What is Mr. Hallett's reply?

My contention, proved by the evidence taken before the Indian Factory Commissions of 1875, 1884, and 1890, and from the reports of health officers and factory inspectors, has been that no improvement has occurred in the position and treatment of operatives employed in factories in India since the first Commission was held in 1875. I might even have gone further and proved that the behaviour of the capitalists to the working classes is becoming more disgraceful and cruel as time rolls on.

These are hard words, and we believe them to be quite untrue and unjust. He offers to prove the assertion by a long batch of quotations from the evidence taken before the three Commissions. Well, his quotations show that he relies chiefly on evidence taken before the Commissions of 1875 and 1884, and when he comes to that of 1890, he ekes it out by bringing in evidence taken before the "Bombay and Lancashire Spinning Inquiry" of 1888. We have not room to subject to critical examination Mr. Hallett's "facts" and methods of argument; we can only say that both he and his critics, on some important points, fail to come to an issue. Moreover, in these letters he gives small credit for the changes for the better that have been effected by the new Act, and will, no doubt, be enforced by a more efficient system of inspection. The controversy will only confuse the minds of the British working classes, but it may be taken for granted that their opinions will be pretty much formed on Mr. Hallett's statements, which are put forward with such a show of knowledge of official authorities as must affect the minds of people who have no time to read the blue-books for themselves. If the Indian millowners wish to counteract the unquestionable influence which this controversy is exerting on public opinion in the great manufacturing centres, they must take some more effective method of bringing their case before the constituencies than they have hitherto done.

The alarming reports that have lately been telegraphed to this country from the (Far) East, writes the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, have been somewhat confused in character, and all that has appeared quite clearly is that some recent movements by Russia, or in connection with Russia, are believed by some persons in authority in Corea to portend danger from that country, and that the result is political dismay and confusion. Now I am not able to state exactly what the facts are. I can, however, say on excellent authority what they are believed to be by the representatives of the two Powers chiefly concerned. In place of political parties Corea has political families, who gain and lose power not by hostile votes but by assassination. The family at present in power are the Ming, who destroyed or banished their rivals in 1885. The report is that this family, encouraged by the Russian Minister in Corea, were about to despatch one of their members to St. Petersburg with a draft secret treaty, the chief clause of which was one containing a protectorate over Corea by Russia. The movement was one hostile to China and Japan, and was believed to involve, if successful, the retention of the Ming family in power for ever. The secret, however, was divulged, and the Chinese representative in Corea, who has in past crises shown himself to be an official of quite exceptional daring and resolution, thereupon called on the Korean Prime Minister and told him that if the ambassador started for Russia or if the project were carried any further, he (the Chinese Minister) would order the Chinese force which has been in the Korean capital since 1885 to seize all the Ming Ministers, tie them up, and carry them off to China for trial. The threat was no idle one, for six years ago the same official seized the King's father and sent him into exile in China. And here for the present the intrigue ends. The facts, however, have been made known officially to the representatives in Corea of the various foreign Powers; but in some quarters it is not believed that Russia would, under the present circumstances, have accepted the protectorate.

The committees in the Eastern colonies and in this country who are fighting against the increase of the military contributions have compiled a curious table, which may be capable of easy solution, but which certainly seems to require one. Ceylon, with a garrison of 1,400 men, pays as its military contributions 70,000*l.* or about 50*l.* per soldier; Hong Kong has 3,000 men, and pays 40,000*l.*, or 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* each; the Straits Settlements with 1,500 men pays 100,000*l.* or 66*l.* each; while South Africa with 3,350 men pays 4,000*l.*, or about 12*l.* 3*s.* a man; and the West Indies with 2,900 men pays nothing. This shows a curious discrepancy in the various colonies; but I suspect, says the correspondent of the Glasgow Herald, the Colonial Office, or rather the Treasury and the War Office, which drive the former in this matter, would answer that comparisons of this kind show nothing except which are the wealthiest colonies, for the contributions are levied, not according to the number of men stationed in a colony—which is entirely regulated by imperial considerations—but according to the power of the colony to pay, and in no case does a colony pay more than the cost of the military stationed in it. So, if the Straits pay 100,000*l.*, it is because they can afford it, and if they have only 1,500 men, it is because this number, with the naval force always in the vicinity, is enough for the purpose. The West Indies pay nothing, because they can afford to pay nothing.

Truth says:—An officer, just returned from India, tells me that in a certain native cavalry regiment—for the sake of the exalted individual whose name it bears I will not say which—swords are scarcely ever permitted to be drawn, because these deadly weapons frighten the Colonel's horse. Whether the Colonel's nerves are at all in sympathy with those of the noble animal he bestrides I cannot tell. Judging, however, from statements respecting the figure cut by this regiment on one or two recent occasions, it would seem desirable that either the Colonel should obtain a new charger, or the regiment a new Colonel.

The Maharaja of Travancore has, through his Dewan, forwarded to Mr. S. Digby, the Honorary Secretary for India, the sum of 100*l.* as a contribution to the funds of the recent International Congress of Hygiene and Demography. We understand that a meeting of the Indian Committee will be held at 20 Hanover Square, on Sept. 23. At the Northbrook Club, on Sept. 9, Mr. M. M. Bhowanagregre, C.I.E., gave a luncheon party in honour of Dr. K. N. Bahadurji, the delegate of the Bombay Millowners' Association and the Bombay Medical Union, who will shortly return to India.

Mrs. Grimwood, the heroine of Manipore, who has been staying for some time at Dalgety Castle, Turriff, Aberdeenshire, journeyed to Balmoral yesterday on a visit to the Queen.

The New York Tribune (Reuter telegraphs) reports from San Francisco that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer China has broken the record from Yokohama to San Francisco, making the voyage in twelve days twelve hours. If the proper connections are made the Chinese mails will be landed at Queenstown twenty-two days after leaving China.

According to a Dalziel telegram from Belgrade, the negotiations between the Postal Commissioner from England (Mr. Harvey) and the Serbian Ministry regarding the passage of the Indian mails through Serbia promise to attain a speedy and successful result, the Serbian Government being agreeable to the proposal, and the English Postal Department guaranteeing the necessary outlay.

THE RIOTS IN CHINA.

JUST as we go to press the following telegrams come to hand:—

TIENTSIN, Sept. 15.—The Foreign Ministers in Peking have addressed an urgent remonstrance to the Chinese Government regarding the latest outrage against the foreign residents. It is expected that the Powers concerned will ultimately make a naval demonstration on the north coast. The Chinese Government is despatching explicit instructions to the governors of the central provinces to protect the foreigners in the interior.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—The journal L'Autorité states that according to the latest advices from China, the Powers affected by the recent outrages on foreigners in that empire are understood to be agreed in principle upon joint action, and that it only remains to designate the Power which shall control the projected operations.

Marriage Registrars.—Government has just ruled that it is undesirable that a clergyman or minister of any denomination should hold the appointment of Marriage Registrar, as that official has certain legal duties to perform under the Act, and it is essential that he should be untrammelled by ecclesiastical considerations. The question arose under the following circumstances:—The Rev. J. R. Ellis, Wesleyan Minister at the Mount, was nominated Registrar by the Collector of Chingleput, but Government objected to this on technical grounds. The Rev. C. N. Bazely was then nominated, but this nomination was also objected to because, though Mr. Bazely was not licensed under the Act, he held a license under the Episcopal Seal of the Diocese of Madras.

The Andamans.—In connection with the report made by Sir A. Lyall and Dr. Lethbridge on the Andamans Penal Settlement, the Government have decided that only the life convicts shall be transported, and that the practice of sending the convicts from Port Blair to the Indian gaoles to complete the last two months of their sentences shall be discontinued. The classification of the convicts has been ordered, the habitual criminals being segregated as much as possible. Females are to be absolutely segregated. A number of minor changes will also be made, and a new scheme for the organisation and recruitment of the superior executive service in the settlement is sanctioned. Subject to the reference to the Secretary of State, the Commission will hold that the provision of more women as wives for self-supporting convicts is one of the chief needs of Port Blair. Sanction is accordingly given to the sending of women eligible for marriage, who have been sentenced to seven years' transportation and upwards. They will be allowed to marry on the same conditions as female life convicts after five years' good conduct in the gaoles.

The Reorganisation of the Forest Department.—In connection with the reorganisation of the Forest Department, a scheme is now under consideration for amalgamating the six Provincial lists on which Forest officers under the Government of India are now classified into three. By the new reorganisation officers on the Imperial list will be seconded on the Provincial list from which they are drawn, so that officers below any one seconded may benefit by all promotions, permanent or officiating, which would fall to their lot had they remained on the Provincial list. The carrying out of this scheme would have involved transfers on a large scale, to which great objections have been raised. It is, therefore, proposed to have only three Provincial lists, of strength as follows:—(1) Punjab, the Central Provinces, Berar, and Coorg, 38 officers; (2) Bengal, North-West Provinces, and Oude and Assam, 39 officers; Burma, 33 officers.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, August 24.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on Aug. 20, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 2 per cent.

Below are given the figures of the bank's statement for the week ending Aug. 18:—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 4,44,011	Increase
Do. at Branches	12,29,242	Decrease
Other Deposits	11,59,473	Decrease
Post Bills	79,221	Decrease

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	4,03,230	Increase
Loans	3,06,631	Decrease
Accounts of Credits	1,77,001	Increase
Mercantile Bills	6,66,169	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	8,43,046	Decrease
Do. at Branches	7,01,402	Decrease

The analysis of the above return shows an increase of over 4½ lacs in the public demand, made up as follows:—By a decrease of about 11½ lacs in "Other Deposits," and over ½ lac in "Post Bills," together with an increase of over 1½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits," minus a decrease of about 3 1-16 lacs in "Loans," and 6 11-16 lacs in "Mercantile Bills." The treasury balance at head office stands increased by nearly 4½ lacs, while there is a decrease of over 12½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were increased by over 4 lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of nearly 8½ lacs in cash at head office, and over 7 lacs at the branches, making the exact total 7,28,14,819 rs., equal to 70.4 per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 70.5 per cent. in the previous week.

EXCHANGE.—On France, commercial bills at six months' sight are 1.86 francs, and 1.84½ francs for three months' sight; while on Mauritius, private bills at sixty days' sight are quoted at 1-3/4 per cent. discount. The rate for thirty days' sight mercantile bills on Hong Kong is 219 rs., and on Singapore 222-3/4. On Bombay, telegraphic transfer is quoted at par, and sixty days' sight bank drafts are at ¾ per cent. discount nominal.

TEA.—Fine grades were in strong demand at the sales of Aug. 20, and occasionally some rise in values. Common grades were fairly steady, except small Pekoe sorts, which, in consequence of a temporary diminution in the Bombay demand, were lower. About 14,000 chests were sold.

JUTE.—There has been a constantly advancing market, owing to continued paucity of supplies. Loose jute is eagerly competed for up country and in Calcutta, while baled jute is 1 rs. to 1-8 dearer.

GUNNIES.—The market has been firm, and at the close sellers' ideas show an advance of 8 a. to 1 re. on last rates. Corn sacks are still in request for the Colonies, and further business is reported at 23 rs., and for early delivery 23-12 rs. Business for other foreign markets has been checked by the rise. For the country trade there are keen buyers both for early and forward.

HESSIANS continue firm and scarce. Wheat bags have been done at 10-12 rs. for the season, and 8 oz. 40" cloth for October-December at 6-12 rs. and bran bags for Australia at 18-8 rs.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—Another week has passed without animation, and the position is almost unaltered. If anything, business has been more sluggish, and a dull apathy seems to have infected operators which has not conduced to better the unsatisfactory state of affairs. It is not that stocks are weak, but there is simply no movement one way or the other; everything is at a standstill. There has not been any fluctuation worth mentioning in Sonapat, which is the only Gold Company in which business has been done, with the exception of Dumras, which have registered a small advance owing to their proposed amalgamation with Mount Ophir. A few transactions are reported in press shares at full rates. The following companies have been dealt in—Canals, Chitpore Hydraulics, and Watsons. In miscellaneous stocks, landing and shippings continue to attract attention. Titagur paper mills have been done at 150 rs. and are wanted, and there appears to be a small inquiry springing up for Great Easterns. In tea, Bengals and Hoolungories have been in request, the former has been done at 75 rs. for full shares, the latter at 60 rs.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 per cent.

BOMBAY, August 27.

The increased activity in wheat and seeds has not been sustained, business in the former staple having latterly become small, and in the other moderate, though the late advance in prices has, to a great extent, been maintained. Cotton has continued neglected by shippers, and in but slight demand, on the whole, by the mills, but shows no noticeable change in value. The banks have been closed for a day for another native holiday; but exchange, after drooping a little under the usual influence, left off with a firm feeling at about former quotations. Government paper is unchanged in Four per Cents. Freight rates are still firm, but with not much doing, the higher rates asked by holders of tonnage having latterly restricted business. Native holidays have further reduced transactions in imports, but prices generally are unchanged.

MONEY.—Notwithstanding more activity in a portion of the export trade, which the late holidays only partially stopped, the demand for money fell off sensibly during the week covered by the Presidency Bank's statement of affairs issued on August 24, and the cash balance had increased by Aug. 22 by 3½ lacs, making it stand at 317½ lacs. There had been a diminution of 3½ lacs in private deposits; but, on the other hand, the amount in loans had decreased by 10½ lacs, and that on bills discounted by over 2 lacs, the net falling off in trade requirements being represented by some 9 lacs, so that the increase in the cash balance would have been a good deal more than shown by the return but for considerable Government withdrawals from the Bank's head office. Meantime business has become very quiet again, and the Bank's minimum remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The native holidays which have occurred have interrupted business in grey goods; but prices have remained steady in consequence of the unwillingness of holders to give way in face of the comparatively low exchange ruling. Bleached, Turkey red, dyed, and printed goods have remained in the same position as they were, and prices are all unaltered. Local goods are unchanged. Calcutta buyers have taken chodiers in small quantities, but this is about all that has been done. The clearances for the week have been about 1,500 packages only of imported goods and 900 local.

YARNS.—A small business has been passing in imported twist in a quiet market, and on the basis of last quotations.

METALS.—There has been but little inquiry for copper, and prices have given way 4 a. per cent., but the market is steady at the decline. Yellow metal has been taken to a moderate extent on the basis of previous rates in a steady market. Iron has been in but slight demand, and only a small business has transpired, the feeling having been quiet and prices quite unchanged.

COAL has been quiet, not to say dull, the feeling having been deepened by the holidays. Some sales have been reported of Paull's, Duffryn, Cardiff, and Davison's, West Hartley, for September-October and October-November shipment, at 14½ rs. and 14 rs. per ton respectively. The stock on the Bunder is now estimated at 90,000 tons.

Exports.—COTTON.—There was a moderate business doing for local spinners' account in this staple towards the close of last week, prices remaining as before; but thereafter the feeling became quiet, and only a few hundred bales were taken daily, though still on the bases of previous rates, while, for export, nothing whatever was done on three days in the period under review, and very little on others. The week's purchases by the mills sum up about 4,500 bales, chiefly of Oomrawatee descriptions, Dharwar, and Bhownugger; the purchases by shippers having been under 1,000 bales of Oomra kinds and ginned Compta. The market closes steady, with sales the same as they were a week ago.

WHEAT.—When last mail left, a moderate export business was passing in this market, with a firm feeling, and an advance of one anna per cwt. in pieces, all round; and the week closed with a further advance to the same extent in a strong market, and with a considerable increase in the volume of business. On Aug. 24, however, although prices for perry were again one anna per cwt. higher, and the feeling was still strong, there was a considerable falling-off in demand, and on the following day the tone became steady, and perry declined an anna per cwt., with small business doing, the same state of things continuing thereafter, though prices were quoted generally half an anna per cwt. higher.

SEEDS.—This market is steady, at a decline of one anna per cwt. in rapeseed, and with no increase in demand.

HEAD MASTER: Dr. CHAS. ALCOCK, M.A.
SECOND MASTER: Rev. J. C. ALCOCK, M.A.
 Assisted by Six other Masters.

For many years this School has had the charge of Anglo-Indians, and during the present Head-Master-ship has obtained at the Oxford Local Examinations 214 Passes, 57 Honours, 2 Exhibitions (Balliol and Worcester), and First Classes at Oxford and London. Its Pupils have entered (direct) Woolwich, Sandhurst, and Cooper's Hill, and passed in large numbers the Medical and Legal Preliminaries. Climate dry and bracing, and specially suitable for Anglo-Indians, who find here a home (under the care of the wife of the Head Master) and a high-class School. References given (to Pupils' Parents in India) and required. Terms: 56 to 72 guineas per annum, inclusive of holidays; exclusive of holidays, about one-third less. A Sanatorium, six acres of Recreation Ground, and a Swimming Bath, 70 by 30 feet, have been lately added.
 Address, HEAD MASTER.

"SIMLA," LILLINGTON AVENUE, LEAMINGTON.

THE MISSES MUMFORD desire to fill several VACANCIES which have occurred in their long-established HOME for Indian Children. They offer superior Educational advantages, with every home comfort. Terms on application.

THE DAUGHTERS of a late CLERGYMAN, experienced in Tuition, take the Entire Charge of CHILDREN FROM INDIA. Their arrangements are those of a Family—not a School. They spend a few weeks every summer at the seaside. French Protestant Besses attend on the younger ones. Good references given and required.—"E.A.D.," Messrs. HENRY S. KING & Co., 65 Cornhill, London, E.C.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substance defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHOEA." From Symes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Dec. 5, 1880.

TO J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the J. arm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN OF EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, 64 Russell-st., W.C.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Sept. 1; Madras, Sept. 2; Bombay, Sept. 4.

Lord Lansdowne will leave Simla on Oct. 14, a Calcutta telegram says, and will make a tour in Cashmere, a country which no Viceroy has hitherto visited. He will arrive at Calcutta about the end of November, and will probably visit Burma in January, but this is not absolutely settled.

Lord and Lady Harris, accompanied by Miss Croft, Mr. Lee-Warner, Colonel Rhodes, Mr. Edgerley, and Captain Cox left Poona on Aug. 31 for Simla.

Any important questions pending between the Government of India and the Bombay Government would be discussed with Lord Harris during his Excellency's visit to Simla.

Lieutenant-General Sir George Greaves, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, accompanied by the Adjutant-General (Brigadier-General W. F. Gatacre, D.S.O.) and the Quartermaster-General (Brigadier-General G. C. Hogg), left Poona on Sept. 3 for Deolali on a small tour of inspection.

Mr. Baines, the census commissioner, will proceed to England next year to compile his report. He will issue complete tabular statements before leaving.

A Grand Lodge of Sorrow in memory of the late Sir Henry Morland was held on Aug. 29 at Byculla, when a resolution condoling with Lady Morland was adopted. Brother Pestonji Wadia, in the absence of the Grand Chaplain, read the customary oration.

The Government of India will shortly consider the establishment of an efficient Statistical Bureau, by the combination of the agency now employed in the Financial and Revenue and Agricultural Departments, the main object being to utilise more fully the returns prepared by the latter department.

A despatch on the Assam labour question was before the Viceroy's Executive Council when the mail left. It will be sent home with the reports of the Committees which have dealt with the question, and will probably embody some suggestions for future improvement of the Labour Act.

The provisional proposals of the Government of India regarding the new quinquennial provincial contracts will be sent to local Governments early in October. One important factor in determining these contracts will be the extra expenditure to be incurred in carrying out police reorganisation. In some provinces the sum required will be very considerable.

The Manipore settlement has attracted little attention, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times says. Some Anglo-Indian journals which advocated annexation accept the new arrangement as the next best course. Most of the native papers and the remainder of the Anglo-Indian Press seem satisfied, and little protest is heard except from two or three native papers which supported the restoration of the Maharaja deposed a year ago.

Proposals are before the Government of India for fixing the strength of the permanent garrison of Manipore. The garrison is likely to be a battalion and a-half of infantry belonging to the Assam Goorkha regiments of about 1,300. They will have with them the two 7-pounder guns which are attached to each of the Assam battalions.

It is intended to keep an extra battalion in Assam, the 36th Sikhs now at Shillong being relieved by a Hindustani regiment.

At a recent meeting of the Rajabai Tower Tragedy Committee it was unanimously resolved that a reward of 20,000 rs. should be offered to any person who may give such information as will lead to the discovery of the perpetrators of the supposed outrage, and that a public memorial be forwarded to the Secretary of State for India on the whole subject.

The despatches on the Black Mountain Expedition have at length been issued, and they record the "entire approval" of the Governor-General in Council, in concurrence with the Commander-in-Chief, of the careful and thorough manner in which the work of the Expedition was carried out by Major-General Elles.

It is intended to withdraw the troops from the Black Mountain by the middle of November at latest. It has not yet been decided what detachments are to be left at Darband and other frontier posts, or whether these will be entrusted to the Border Militia.

A despatch was sent to England at the end of July, regarding the rules for the promotion of lieutenant-colonels in the Indian Army to the rank of colonel by a supplementary selection, and the reply is now awaited from the Secretary of State.

The proceedings of the Industrial Conference at Poona were brought to a close on Aug. 27 after five sittings. The next conference of the Western India Industrial Association will be held in September next year.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Sept. 16:—The imperial diamond case is still proceeding at the police-court. Yesterday the High Court directed the release of the defendant on bail, personal security in two lacs and sureties in one lac of rupees. A commission will be sent to Hyderabad to examine the Nizam.

In a later despatch, Sept. 20, the correspondent adds :—The imperial diamond case was before the police-court almost every day last week. Evidence of the negotiations between the Nizam and the defendant was recorded at great length. The scene will now be transferred to Hyderabad, where the Nizam is to be examined on commission.

The eleven new Forest officers who go out to India this year will, it is said, be distributed as follows among the Provinces :—Bengal, Madras, Bombay, and the North-West Provinces and Oude get two men each, and the Central Provinces, Burma, and Assam one each.

It is intended to build a railway from Peshawur to Michoy during the ensuing cold weather. This is the first step towards the Cabul River Railway.

The route for the Attock-Mari line of railway has now been fixed. It will be 104 miles in length, and will cost 164 lacs of rupees.

A good military road is being made through the Gomal Pass. There is no intention of bridging the Indus at present. Sanction to the Mushkaf line is almost certain to be given, turning the Bolan and ensuring direct communication between the Indus valley system and Quetta.

The chief of Mahingyi took the oath of allegiance at Fort White on Aug. 27, an act which has considerably increased British influence in the Chin country.

The Orakzais are, the frontier paper learns from across the frontier, again showing signs of restlessness owing to the presence of Indian garrisons on the Samana range. A virga was held the other day at Tirah, at which representative Hindoos and Mahomedans swore to stand by each other if fighting occurred.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE CHOLERA ON BRITISH WAR SHIPS.

We have received the following from the Admiralty :—

The Lords of the Admiralty have received with regret a report from the Commander-in-Chief, East Indies Station, stating that cholera appeared on board her Majesty's ships Marathon and Redbreast on Sept. 11 at Bombay, and that sixteen deaths resulted therefrom. According to latest information every precaution has been taken. All cases are under treatment on board the Tenasserim, Indian marine trooper, which has been utilised as a cholera hospital ship. No fresh case has occurred on board Marathon since Sept. 12, nor on board Redbreast since morning of Sept. 14, and the Admiral reports that the outbreak seems passing away. There are now twenty-one cases in the hospital ship, and all except three are doing well. The following is the list of deaths from cholera in Redbreast and Marathon advised up to this morning (Tuesday, Sept. 15) :—

A Reuter despatch from Bombay, dated Sept. 16, says :—Up to the present eighteen deaths from cholera and thirty-five cases have occurred on board her Majesty's ships Marathon and Redbreast. The outbreak is confined to these vessels. The town and harbour are free from the disease. There were no fresh cases yesterday.

A further telegram from Bombay, dated Sept. 18, adds :—No fresh outbreak of cholera has taken place on board her Majesty's ships Marathon and Redbreast, and the condition of those suffering from the malady continues satisfactory.

THE DISTRESS IN MADRAS.

We have received the following telegrams from the India Office :—
"From Governor, Madras, Sept. 18.—Since my telegram of Sept. 4 there has been considerable improvement in affected parts of Cuddapah, Chinglepu, and South Arcot, owing to recent rains. No change of any importance in North Arcot. Condition of Bellary, Madras, Salem, and Coimbatore deteriorating. During last four weeks, rainfall good only in three northern districts and South Canara; moderate in Kistna, Kurnool, Bellary, Cuddapah, Nilgiris, and Malabar; seriously deficient elsewhere. Sowing reported to the end of August in Government villages nearly 200,000 acres, or over 26 per cent. deficient on dry lands, and much damaged by drought. In several districts September sowings retarded for want of rain. Number of persons employed on relief works—6,531 in Chingleput, 9,264 in North Arcot, 8,666 in Coimbatore, 3,093 in Nellore. Numbers on gratuitous relief—2,098 in Chingleput, 4,512 in North Arcot, 523 in Coimbatore. Prices rising slowly."

"From Viceroy, Sept. 19, 1891.—Prospects of crops are favourable everywhere except in Madras, Ajmere, Rajputana, Mysore, which are in need of more rain. In Madras affected districts, prospects continue gloomy. Famine relief works started in part of Upper Burma."

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs yesterday :—Reports from Madras show that the distress is increasing, and prices are rising. More rain is urgently wanted. The numbers engaged on the relief works, or receiving gratuitous relief, have risen considerably.

A POONA correspondent writes on Aug. 28 :—Another of those exceedingly pleasant and cheery dances which go a long way to brightening up the season in Poona was given last night at Ganesh Khind by his Excellency the Governor and Lady Harris. The uncertainty of the weather deterred several from undertaking the long drive out to Ganesh Khind and back; but those who were present, about 140 in all, thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The guests began to arrive shortly before 9.30 P.M., and were received at the entrance by the Aides-de-Camp in Waiting. Among the guests were the Hon. Mr. J. G. and Mrs. Moore, the Misses West, Colonel and Miss Wodehouse, Mr. Lee-Warner, Mr. J. K. Spence, Mr. and Mrs. Reid, General and Mrs. Pottinger and the Misses Pottinger, General and Mrs. Budgen, Miss Jervois, General Gatacre, Colonel W. Merriman, C.I.E., R.E., Colonel Firebrace, R.E., Mr. Howard-Warden, Captain Peyton, C.M.G., A.D.C., Captain Le Gallais, A.D.C., Major and Mrs. Macpherson, Mrs. and Miss Howard, Mrs. Kuper, Mrs. Walter Lang, Mrs. Gerald Martin, Colonel and Mrs. Cunningham and Miss Cunningham, Dr. Theodore Cooke, C.I.E., Mrs. and Miss Cooke, Surgeon-Major and Mrs. Ulick-Bourke, Captain and Mrs. Owen, Major and Mrs. Von Donop, Captain and Mrs. Turner-Jones, Captain and Mrs. Beckham, Colonel and Miss Borodale, Mr. and Mrs. Kirkham and the Misses Kirkham, Captain and Mrs. Gott, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher, Miss Merewether, Mr. and Mrs. Hensley, Mrs. Tallents, Mr. and Mrs. Hatch, Captain T. P. Geoghegan, Surgeon-Major Bull, Captain C. H. Welman, Captain C. A. Anderson, R.A., Mr. and Mrs. Dittmas, Dr. Burness, Lieutenant Brownrigg, &c. His Excellency's Band, which was stationed on the gallery at the south end of the ballroom, commenced the first waltz exactly at 9.30 P.M., and the dancing was soon in full swing. The general sitting-out and other arrangements were all that could be desired, and the floor was like glass. At midnight there was a supper, after which the dancing was resumed, and was kept up with unabated vigour till about 1.30 A.M., when the guests took their departure. The programme comprised sixteen dances. It rained heavily at intervals during the night. Colonel and Mrs. Bisset were included in the Government House party, being guests at Ganesh Khind.

"Polo Vista," Queen's Garden Road, Poona, the residence of Lieutenant-General B. H. Pottinger, R.A., Secretary to Government, Military Department, and Mrs. Pottinger, was on Aug. 28 the scene of one of the prettiest gatherings that has been seen in Poona this season, the occasion being a Fancy Dress Ball for Children. In fact, says a correspondent, nothing like it has been witnessed in the station for a very long time. The entertainment was so well organised that it not only gave pleasure to the little boys and girls for whose special benefit it was got up, but it afforded very great amusement to the large number of ladies and gentlemen who assembled to witness it. General and Mrs. Pottinger deserve very great credit indeed for this, and it is almost needless to say that the whole "show" was voted a big success.

A polo match was played on the Poona ground on Aug. 28 between Mr. Lambert's team and a team of the 18th Hussars from Mhow. The former won by five goals to love. They were better mounted than their opponents, and played together in great style. The sides were as follows :—Mr. Lambert's team—Captain Le Gallais, Mr. Ducat, Mr. Sandbach, and Mr. Lambert (back). 18th Hussars—Captain Burch, Mr. Pollack, Mr. Corbett, and Major Moller (back). ■

Another match was played on the same ground on Sept. 1, between a team of the 3rd Bombay Cavalry and a team from the Kirkee Gymkhana. The match resulted in a victory for the cavalry (who were better mounted than their opponents) by five goals to love. The sides were :—3rd Bombay Cavalry—Captain W. J. Peyton 1, Lieutenant Fisher 2, Lieutenant Wogan-Browne 3, Lieutenant F. M. Edwards (back). Kirkee Gymkhana—Lieutenant R. Massie, R.A., 1, Lieutenant Bidgood, R.H.A., 2, Dr. Burnes 3, Captain Brownrigg, R.E. (back).

The Coach and Tandem meet which took place at Poona on Aug. 28, says the same correspondent, was favoured with beautiful weather, and was in every way a success. By 5 P.M. four coaches and eight tandems had arrived at the College of Science, which had been fixed upon as the rendezvous. Three of the drags belonged to the Artillery and one to the Cavalry. Shortly after 5 P.M. a start was made, that master of the ribbons—Captain Foster, R.A.—giving the lead with his smart team of blacks. The procession took the Ganesh Khind Road, went past the Ganesh Khind Lodge and Government House, and turned round by the Body Guard lines, finishing up at the Botanical Gardens to the north of Ganesh Khind, where a local sportsman had provided “afternoon tea” and something stronger for those needing it. The following is a list of the coaches and tandems :—

COACHES.

1. Captain Foster, R.A., with Mrs. Dickenson on the box.
2. Major Lister, R.A., with Mrs. Walter Lang on the box.
3. Lieutenant Edwards, 3rd Bombay Cavalry, with Mrs. Fletcher on the box.
4. Lieutenant Bidgood, R.H.A., with Miss O'Shaughnessy on the box.

TANDEMS.

1. Captain Gott, with Mrs. Gott.
2. Surgeon-Major Bull, with Mrs. Gerald Martin.
3. Captain Brownrigg, R.E., with Mrs. Von Donop.
4. Captain the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, A.D.C., with Miss Jervois.
5. Lieutenant Lyons (2nd Lancashire Fusiliers).
6. Lieutenant Benn (3rd Cavalry).
7. Mrs. Peterkin and Surgeon Peterkin.
8. Doctor Martin, with Miss Wodehouse.

The tandems were indeed a smart lot, and it would be invidious to pick out the best among them, but Captain Gott must be awarded the palm for his bright and well-stepping bays and neat turn-out. One smart team, which has been seen of late on the Poona roads, was missed at the meet. It could not put in an appearance owing to the leader having met with an accident the previous evening. A larger number of tandems has been seen on former occasions, but certainly no meet has ever been graced with more bright faces or prettier gowns.

The final tie in the Ladies' Handicap Doubles at Lawn Tennis, for which Sir Charles Pritchard offered prizes, was played out on Aug. 29 at the Poona Gymkhana. The match was hotly contested, the finish being close and exciting. It resulted in a victory for Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Turner-Jones. Among the spectators were the Governor and Lady Harris. The following are the results of the various matches played :—First Ties—Mrs. Potts and Mrs. Hensley, plus half 15, beat Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Boig, owe 15, by 6-5, 3-6, 6-4. Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Turner-Jones, plus half 15, beat Miss Bernard and Mrs. Newnham-Smith, 6-2, 4-6, 6-0. Mrs. Beckham and Miss Howard, owe 15, beat Miss Hill and Mrs. Walter Lang, scratch 6-3, 5-6, 6-2. Mrs. Bisset and Mrs. Owen, scratch, beat Mrs. Gould and Mrs. Hoskyns, 6-1, 6-0. Second Ties—Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Turner-Jones beat Mrs. Potts and Mrs. Hensley by 6-3, 6-1. Mrs. Bisset and Mrs. Owen beat Mrs. Beckham and Miss Howard, 3-6, 6-5, 6-1. Final Tie—Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Turner-Jones beat Mrs. Bisset and Mrs. Owen, 6-3, 5-6, 6-4.

The Golf Handicap for a Cup, valued at 100 rs., presented by his Excellency Sir George Greaves, was played off at Poona on Sept. 2, on the new links at Yerrowda. The meeting was a most enjoyable one. The Greens were in excellent order, and were true enough for those who, like the winner, putted straight and with judgment. Twenty-four competitors had entered, of whom only one failed to put in an appearance. Seeing how little was known of the form of many of the players, says a correspondent, the handicapping was very successful. The most striking feature of the match was the putting of Captain Legallais, A.D.C., the winner of the Cup, which was simply phenomenal. The results of the best scorers were Captain Legallais, 69 plus 68, equals 137 minus 36, equals 101, wins; Major C. J. Blomfield, 67 plus 60, equals 127 minus 24, equals 103; Captain Newton King, 67 plus 60, equals 127 minus 24, equals 103; and Dr. Harris, 59 plus 74, equals 133 minus 30, equals 103. These three tied for second place. Next came Mr. S. Doig, 76 plus 69, equals 145 minus 40, equals 105; Colonel Merriman, 70 plus 67, equals 137 minus 30, equals 107; and Mr. T. B. Fry, 55 plus 54, equals 109, scratch 109.

The Gymkhana Meeting which came off at Kirkee on Sept. 2 was one of the finest gymkhanas for some time, and the prizes were particularly good. The entries in every race were altogether satisfactory. A large number of spectators assembled to witness the various events, and evinced great interest in the proceedings, especially in “The Affinity Lancers,” which were won in dashing style by Mrs.

Ulick Bourke and Lieutenant Bidgood, R.H.A. The band of the 28th Pioneers was in attendance. The proceedings were brought to a close by Mrs. Pottinger distributing the prizes to the successful competitors.

A Poona correspondent writes on Sept. 3 :—The capital run which we had this morning amply compensated us for the two blank days we had on Monday and Thursday last. We met at six o'clock this morning at the Yerrowda Gaol. The small field out included Brigadier-General Gatacre and Surgeon-Major Bull, two of our keenest huntsmen. The hounds were put through the nullahs behind the gaol, and soon put up a brace of foxes, one of which pointed for the thick cactus hedges about Lohagaon village, while the other made off towards the saddle-backed hill to the north of that village. The hounds stuck to the latter. On reaching the hill it seemed as if the fox were going to run to earth there, but the hounds brought the line round one end underneath the temple, and raced away towards the Indryani river, on nearing which the fox suddenly turned towards the village of Wargaoon. The field had to do all they knew to keep up with the hounds, and several of the horses showed signs of distress. Two other foxes were started during the run, but the hounds stuck to their line. However, when we got near Wargaoon village a chinkara deer jumped up. This proved too much for the pack, who, with the exception of four couple who stuck to their fox, raced away after him, and ran him to ground dead-beat among some rocks near the village alluded to above. Some time was spent in collecting the deer-hunters, after which the hounds were taken home. The run lasted about an hour and ten minutes, the distance from point to point being seven miles, and the hounds ran about ten miles. The weather was fine, the scent excellent, and the hounds went the whole way as hard as they could gallop. This is about the best run we have yet had, and would have been far more enjoyable than it was if a larger field had been present.

The second Cinderella dance given this season by the members of the Bombay Infantry Mess came off on Sept. 2, at the Mess House in Staveley Road, and was as great a success as the one which preceded it. A large number of ladies and gentlemen attended, the guests numbering in all about 250, among the number being Major-General B. H. Blundell, Lieut.-General and Mrs. Pottinger, and the Misses Pottinger, Colonel and Miss Wodehouse, Colonel W. Merriman, C.I.E., R.E., the Hon. Mr. J. G. and Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Budgen, Miss Jervois, Col. and Mrs. Westmacott, Mrs. Quill, Col. and Mrs. Teed and Miss Teed, Major W. J. Lister, R.E., Major and Mrs. Von Donop, &c. The arrangements, which were very similar to those made on the previous occasion, reflected much credit on the Committee who had the management of it. There was ample sitting-out accommodation for the guests, and a stand-up supper was provided. The floor was perfect, and the music, provided by the band of the 25th Bombay Infantry (Rifles), was excellent. The programme consisted of fourteen dances, and included two extras. The bill-room and supper-room looked very pretty, and so also did the tents pitched at both ends, where those who did not dance sat in comfort.

A characteristic story is told in connection with Raja Amar Sing's recent tour in the Kamraj district of Cashmere. When he was hearing petitions at the village of Kulsu, at about midday, a great band of villagers came, all bearing in their hands lighted oil lamps. Asked why they used artificial light when it was broad daylight, they replied : “We cannot see any light at all. All that we see is only the deep darkness of oppression.” Raja Amar Sing at once instituted inquiries into their case, and the alleged oppressor is under trial.

Those who are charged with the Census Report are doubtless well enough acquainted with the literature of the last census; but it can do no harm, observes a contemporary, now that the Provincial Commissioners are busy framing their reports, to recollect some of the blunders made ten years ago, and not, it is to be hoped, to be repeated now. For instance, the Assam authorities sent in no report at all, but merely a table of statistics, whereby their work was deprived of half its interest and value. There were also some serious mistakes made in regard to the classification of religions, but the language tables revealed the worst blunders of all. Over twenty-two millions were entered with no specification of language at all; thirteen thousand were classified as “wild tribes,” though they must have had some language, and the European languages were in the direst confusion. English, Scotch, Gaelic, Celtic, Irish, Welsh, French, Dutch, Flemish, German, Russian, Italian, and Maltese, Greek, Roumanian, Spanish, Portuguese, Danish, Swedish, Norwegian, Finnish, Magyar, Polish, Lapp, and Swiss, all these were mixed up with the alphabetical list of the languages of India; while Scotch, Gaelic, and Celtic were entered as if they were separate tongues. Nine hundred persons in India were said to talk Hebrew as their vernacular, two to converse in Syriac, and two thousand were credited with African, whatever that might be.

PERSONAL.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL DURAND, British Agent in Gilgit, arrived at Simla on Aug. 31.

Consequent on Lieutenant-Colonel Riddell proceeding on leave, Lieutenant-Colonel Baird will take over charge of the Mint at Bombay, Major Buchanan Scott acting as Mintmaster, Calcutta.

Mr. Upcott, now on leave in England, will probably be appointed Engineer-in-Chief of the Gauhati-Lumding section of the Assam-Bengal Railway.

Mr. J. W. Wright, Chief Engineer in Assam, proceeds on two months' leave, owing to ill-health. The officiating vacancy will be filled by the next senior officer on the spot.

Mr. de Courcy Atkins, Acting Postmaster-General, who has recently suffered from a severe attack of cholera, comes home on long leave.

Mr. H. S. Jones, executive engineer, Rajputana-Malwa Railway, has been granted a year's furlough.

The members of the Bombay Municipal Corporation have appointed Surgeon-Major K. R. Kirtikar to act as health officer for two months, during which Dr. Weir will officiate for Mr. Acworth, the municipal commissioner, who shortly proceeds to Europe on leave.

Mr. J. W. Mellis, who has been assistant agent and manager of the Madras Railway for more than fifteen years, has been compelled to retire from the company's service owing to ill-health. His place will be filled by Mr. Ross-Johnson.

The following appointments have been made:—Mr. A. W. Crawley-Boevey, C.S., to do duty as political agent, Jawhar, pending further orders; Mr. E. M. Pratt, C.S., to act as political agent, Jawhar, with effect from the date of assuming charge, in addition to his own duties, until relieved by Mr. Crawley-Boevey.

Miss Jane Claridge, one of the young ladies who lately passed out of the Madras Medical College, will proceed to Kistna to take up her appointment as an apothecary under the district Board. Miss Claridge received her medical education at the expense of that Board.

Dr. W. King, the Director of the Geological Survey of India, left Calcutta on Sept. 3 on tour. He will visit parts of the Madras Presidency (in connection with Dr. Warth's deputation to the Madras Museum, and the continuation of survey work on retirement of Mr. Foote), the Nizam's Dominions, Bombay and Ahmedabad (as to prospects of artesian water-supply), and Central India. It is also understood that Dr. King will, on the part of Government, advise the Punja State as to the development of its diamond mines.

It is believed to be definitely settled that Mr. Lewis, of the Punjab Educational Department, on his return from furlough, will become inspector of schools, Lahore Circle, with which goes the inspectorship of the European schools of the province, succeeding Dr. Stulpnagel, who becomes principal of the Government College.

Sir George White met with an accident recently while playing racquets, a ball striking him full in the eye. Luckily the ball was partially dead, or the consequences would have been serious. The gallant general is doing very well, and the sight of the eye will not be affected.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

The death occurred on the 9th inst. of General W. Q. Pogson, Bengal Infantry. The eldest son of the late Colonel W. R. Pogson, of the 47th Native Infantry, he was descended from the old Scotch family of Cumming and the Earls of Glencairn. At an early age he saw service in Spain, in 1837, as a cornet in the Anglo-Spanish Legion. On Dec. 12, 1838, he obtained his first commission in the Bengal Army, and was soon afterwards (1840) sent on active service into Afghanistan. He served throughout the Sutlej Campaign in 1846, and the Bhootan Expedition, 1865-66, receiving the medal with clasp. On March 6, 1880, he became a regimental colonel, and obtained the rank of general on Oct. 22, 1889. Like his father, the late General Pogson was a great Oriental scholar and linguist, and his kindly, courteous disposition endeared him to all with whom he came in contact. [A brief notice of the general appeared in our last issue.]

Vice-Admiral Arthur Wilmshurst (Retired) died on Sept. 9 at Douglas, Isle of Man, at the age of seventy-three. He became a midshipman in the Royal Navy in 1839, and soon afterwards joined the Spartan, 26, commanded on the North American Station by the present Admiral of the Fleet, the Hon. C. G. J. B. Elliot. Upon his return he was in 1845 promoted to be lieutenant, and was then attached successively to the Excellent, Queen, and St. Vincent on the Home Station, and to the Albatross, 12, on the East India Station. During the Russian War he served in the Trafalgar, 120, and was present at the bombardment of Fort Constantine. He gained his commission as commander in 1854, and in that capacity he joined the London, 86, in the Mediterranean, and was in December 1857 placed in charge of the ships and transports below the barrier in Whampoa Reach, near Canton. In 1861 he was promoted to post-rank, and in 1864 was appointed to the ironclad corvette Research, 4, one of the ships of the Channel Squadron. Two years later he was transferred to the armoured turret ship Prince Albert, and finally became captain of the Flora, 40, at Ascension. He retired in 1872, became a retired rear-admiral in 1877, and reached the rank of retired vice-admiral in 1882. Admiral Wilmshurst received the Crimean and Turkish medals with Sebastopol clasp, and the China medal with Canton clasp. He also possessed the Medjidieh (5th class), and was in 1877 made a C.B.

Staff-Surgeon John Jolliffe, R.N., who died at Thorncliffe, Niton, Isle of Wight, on Sept. 12, in his sixty-ninth year, was the son of Colonel W. Jolliffe, R.M., and joined the Navy as assistant-surgeon in 1845. In the following year, in the Iris, 26, he was the only medical officer present at Sir T. Cochrane's operations against the Malay pirates on the coast of Borneo. In 1847, in the President, 50, he rendered valuable services during the operations against Angosa, Mozambique, and was officially mentioned. He became staff-surgeon in 1850, and in April 1887 was awarded a Greenwich Hospital pension.

Captain Ernest Augustus Travers Stubbs, R.N., whose death has just been reported, saw much service while in the Pluto up the African rivers, and commanded boats in the same in active suppression of the slave trade. He was gunnery mate of the Tribune, in the Black Sea, 1854; assisted at landing the troops in the Crimea; present at the battle of Alma; gunnery officer of the Tribune at the attack on Sebastopol; present at the battle of Inkermann (promoted, Crimean and Turkish medals, Sebastopol and Inkermann clasps); in the Royal George in the Baltic, 1855 (Baltic medal); present at the blockade of Canton river, 1857, assisted in building batteries on Dutch Folly forts, and bombardment of Canton, Dec. 1857; at capture of Peiho forts, May 1858, in command of small-arm men (wounded); served with Lord Elgin's Embassy until signing of the treaty, June 1858; up the Yang-tse-Kiang river in the Cruiser in the action with rebels at Nankin and Gan-Klin; present at attack on Peiho forts, June 1859; served in operations of 1860; commanded small-arm men, with four rocket boats, at attack on Peiho forts; and served in Peiho river until the peace of Peking, 1860 (China medal, Canton and two Taku clasp), &c.; wounded five times, once in the trenches before Sebastopol, four times in China; mentioned in Foreign Office and Commander-in-Chief's despatches.

Mr. William Maxwell Alexander, who died on Sept. 5, at Badenweiler, Germany, was the son of the late Mr. Boyd Alexander, of Ballochmyle, Ayrshire. He was educated at Harrow and Haileybury, and entered the Honourable East India Company's service in 1856. He was one of the small band of civilians who endeavoured to check the progress of the Mutiny before the arrival of troops from England. Mr. Alexander was in the Fort of Agra during the siege, and volunteered to act as a mounted scout. For his services at that time he was awarded the Indian Mutiny medal. He married, in 1871, Emma, daughter of the Rev. William Thorp.

The death has occurred at sea of the Rev. James Lillie, senior chaplain of the Church of Scotland in India, who was on his way home on retirement.

The death is announced at Saharanpore Railway station on Aug. 20 of Lieutenant Edward Cole, Royal Irish Fusiliers. The unfortunate officer was proceeding on a month's leave from Meerut to Mussoorie to join his wife and family. When embarking in the train at Meerut, which is only a couple of hours' run from Saharanpore, he felt unwell and was taken out of the train at Saharanpore in the last stage of cholera, where he soon afterwards expired.

The Siam Gazette of Aug. 1 says:—We regret to have to record the death of W. A. D. Wormby from an attack of cholera on Thursday last. The deceased had formerly been a naval electrical engineer in the English Government service at Hong Kong, and at the time of his death was employed in the Siamese postal department. He was buried yesterday at the Protestant cemetery.

The mail from Japan brings news of the death in Tokio, on Aug. 17, of Viscount Yoshida Kiyonari, a member of the Privy Council and a diplomatist and Minister of considerable note. He was a member of the great Satsuma class, but his family was very poor, and he was therefore forced at a very early age to become a clerk in the local office of his district. Subsequently, at the age of seventeen, he entered an English school established at Kagoshima by the Prince of Satsuma, and his rapid progress here led to his selection by the Prince for further education in England. In 1865, accompanied by the youth who afterwards became Viscount Mori, Minister to London and Minister of Education, and who ended his career two years ago by the hands of an assassin, Yoshida came to this country and studied in University College, London, whence he passed over to American educational establishments. He remained in the United States for four years, and in 1878 was successful in negotiating with the United States a treaty in which the latter accorded to Japan in regard to the tariff and consular jurisdiction all that she is still contending for; but the concession was rendered valueless by the proviso that the treaty was not to come into force until all the other Powers had agreed to it. Subsequently, at a very important time, Viscount Yoshida (as he became when the Mikado founded new orders of nobility) was Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs under Count Inouye; and he was also a member of the Senate and of the Privy Council. His main interest of late years was treaty revision, and his position was one of opposition to all the current schemes. He was forty-six years of age at the time of his death.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

[THE DESPATCHES.]

THE despatches regarding the Black Mountain Expedition are published. The Governor-General in Council, in concurrence with the Commander-in-Chief, desires to record his entire approval of the careful and thorough manner in which the work of the expedition was carried out by Major-General Elles, and of the good discipline and soldierlike conduct displayed by the troops on various occasions in the presence of the enemy. His Excellency in Council has perused with much satisfaction the favourable mention of the various officers whose good services during the campaign have been brought to notice. The Viceroy is glad to have an opportunity of expressing his sense of the valuable services rendered by Mr. Cunningham, as Chief Political Officer to the Force, and his Excellency notices with pleasure the efficiency of the arrangements made by the Medical, Commissariat-Transport, and other Army Departments in connection with the expedition, and by the postal and telegraph services under Mr. Van Someren and Mr. Barker respectively.

The Adjutant-General in a letter to the Military Department says the objects of the expedition were as stated in the second paragraph of General Elles's letter, and, as far as it is possible to judge at present, these objects have been fully accomplished. The submission of the offending tribes has been more complete than on any former occasion. They have assented to the construction of roads and dominating posts upon the frontier, and to the permanent expatriation of their chief, Hashim Ali, who for years has been the moving spirit in all the border outrages; and a small force remains in their country to observe the fulfilment of their pledges. The Adjutant-General adds:—"His Excellency has much pleasure in bringing to notice the good discipline of the troops, and their soldierlike conduct in the presence of the enemy in the affairs of March 23, 25, and 26, at Diliari, Darbandrai, and Sarmal Ferry; and more particularly in the gallant defence of Ghazikot by the Dogra Company of the 4th Sikh Infantry, against a fanatical night attack on March 19." The health of both fighting men and followers throughout the expedition was phenomenal, the average daily sick having been less than 1 per cent. of the force.

General Elles gives a detailed account of the operations. Regarding the gathering at Baio he says:—"The Mada Khel, who were only indirectly concerned in the expedition, as owing allegiance to Hashim Ali Khan, kept quiet, and, offered no opposition; but from March 22 it had become apparent that there was a movement of trans-Indus tribes to the Buner frontier, under the direction of Miyan Guls Akhundzada of Swat. The gathering was visible at and about Baio, a village on the watershed between Chamla and the Indus Valley, and had been gradually increasing in number. In view of this movement, troops were moved up from Nowshera to Mardan, in the Peshawur Valley, but it was the desire of the Government that a collision with the trans-Indus tribes should be avoided. The attitude of the gathering seemed to indicate that the intention of its leaders was to watch the Buner frontier, with which country there was no intention to interfere. Negotiations were entered into with Miyan Gul, under the orders of superior authority, partly through me, and partly through Peshawur, with the result that the Akhundzada disclaimed any intention of making war against the Government, and withdrew his following."

General Elles brings to the special notice of the Commander-in-Chief, Brigadier-Generals Williamson and Hammond, Lieutenant-Colonel Leith, commanding the Royal Artillery, Major Greenstreet, commanding the Royal Engineers, Major Buston, in charge of the pontoon section, Captain Aylmer, Bengal Sappers, Colonel Bromhead and Captain Jameson, 32nd Pioneers, Lieutenant Birdwood, R.E., in charge of the coolie corps, Deputy Surgeon-General Bradshaw, Captain Lyons-Montgomery, chief commissariat officer, Lieutenant Tulloch, transport officer, Veterinary-Surgeon Haggard, Mr. Van Someren, Postal Department, Mr. Barker, Telegraph Department, Captain Hamilton, inspector of army signalling, Major Balfe, provost-marshal, Captain Wahab, Survey Department, Captain Young, in charge of the Field Treasury, Lieutenant-Colonel Gaselee and Lieutenant Harman, 4th Sikhs, Lieutenant Taylor, 3rd Sikhs, Lieutenant Codrington, Corps of Guides, Mr. Cunningham, political officer, Colonel Shakespear, A.A.G., Captain Carter, D.A.A.G., Captain Mason, Intelligence officer, and Captain Leslie Rogers, Volunteer officer attached to the force.

Regarding the latter officer General Elles says:—"He was attached to Captain Mason, and showed great zeal in acquiring information as to the working of troops in the field. The advantage to the Volunteer force in the widening of the experience of its officers cannot but be productive of the best results, and I beg to recommend the extension on future occasions of the privilege here accorded to one of their number."

Captain Sandbach, Royal Engineers, aide-de-camp, and Lieuts. H. W. Wilberforce, 2nd Dragoon Guards, and His Highness Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, King's Royal Rifles, orderly officers, are also mentioned.

The supplementary selected list of officers brought to notice by the Brigadier-Generals and heads of departments is as follows:—Colonel Hilton, Seaforth Highlanders, Colonel Rivaz, 37th Dogras, Lieutenant-Colonel Molloy, 2nd battalion 5th Goorkha Regiment, Lieutenant-Colonel Stead, 11th Bengal Infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel Morgan, No. 1 Mountain battery, Royal Artillery, Lieutenant-Colonel Gaselee, 4th Sikh Infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel Norman, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, Major Battye, Corps of Guides, Lieutenant-Colonel Muhamed Aslam Khan, Khaibar Rifles, Major Bowler, No. 9 Mountain Battery, Major C. Dempster, 4th Sikhs, Captain Brownlow, No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery, Captain Bradshaw, brigade major, 1st Brigade, Captain Sir R. A. W. Colleton, brigade major, 2nd Brigade, Captain Abbott, field engineer, 2nd Brigade, Captain Bond, field engineer, 1st Brigade, Captain —, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, Lieutenant Maconochy, 4th Sikhs, Lieutenant Badcock, brigade transport officer, 2nd Brigade, Lieutenant Beville, Commissariat Department, Lieutenant F. J. H. Barton, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, orderly officer to the general officer commanding 2nd Brigade (commander of the Khaibar Rifles in the actions of March 25 and March 27), Lieutenant Spurrell, 3rd Dragoon Guards, Provost Marshal, 2nd Brigade, Lieutenant Harman, 4th Sikhs, Lieutenant Taylor, 3rd Sikhs, Lieutenant Codrington, attached to 3rd Sikhs, Surgeon-Majors M'Waters, Stokes, M'Gregor, and E. Palmer, and Mr. Thomas, Telegraph Department.

THE REORGANISATION OF ROORKEE COLLEGE.

Indian Engineering says:—We are not a little surprised at the recommendations of the Technical Education Commission of the N.-W.P. in respect to the Roorkee C.E. College. As a technical institution this College is, in our opinion, all the better for being isolated; but at the same time we concede that more use might have been made of the Educational Department in testing the general education of candidates before admission into it by making them pass some educational standard to show they have acquired a proper preliminary training, while the College entrance examination was confined to subjects required in the technical course, and these should be conducted by the College authorities as at present. The Educational Department can have no sympathy with the technical work of the College; the only subject in common is mathematics, and here even, at the College, mathematics branch off into practical grooves not taught in the ordinary schools. The isolation complained of is unquestionably necessary, or otherwise by degrees the technical and practical courses will be impaired and spoilt by the purely academic instincts of unpractical men.

It was some time during the beginning of this year that Sir A. Colvin delivered a speech at the Allahabad University, in which, as far as we can remember, he derided the idea of any of these technical subjects being considered as part of education; and if its technical course, according to such a high authority, is not education, what is the object of putting the Roorkee College under the Educational Department of the N.-W.P.?

The Pioneer says that the professors are military men, but it seems to forget that these military men are the selection of 25 out of 600 in a general competition, and the chances of engineers of their capacity being found to come from England as professors at Roorkee with the pay and prospects that would be opened out to them is very doubtful. The advantage also is, that if any of these military professors are found unsuitable, they can easily be changed, which could not be done with professors from England.

The increase in length of the engineer course at Roorkee from two to three years is much needed, but the introduction of four or five hours a week of tinkering in a play workshop is time thrown away. An engineer is not required to work with his hands; for this he employs the mechanic. What he has to know is good work from bad, and this, practical experience on works can alone give.

The special class for Mechanical Engineering referred to in the Report by the Technical Education Commission, appears to be intended only for men of the Lower Subordinate class stamp. The course is to be for five years, and when they have passed—what pay may they expect? Say, 16 rs. to 20 rs. a month! The men of the Lower Subordinate class now pass in eighteen months, and readily obtain appointments of 25 rs. a month, with T. A. It may be imagined how many men are likely to enter the proposed class.

The Pioneer goes on to say: "The most important reform, however, is the change proposed in the character of the examinations prescribed for competitors for admission to the College." "It is proposed that the final standard examination in the ordinary school should be taken as a test for fitness, &c., &c.," and goes on to explain the desirability of this, and thinks the proposals in every way excellent. Our opinion is that the Commission has just gone a little too far. By all means insist on candidates having to pass certain standards before competing for Roorkee, to show that they have received a liberal education; but the competitive test for admission should be special and held by the College. It is proposed that men should enter according to their standing in the examinations held by the Educational Department. Now, a man may pass brilliantly in languages but be a bad mathematician, and yet standing higher in the list than a good mathematician would have a prior claim to enter the Engineering College. This is absurd on the face of it, and shows the turn that things will take and how the technical education of the College is likely to lose its special character when merged into the general educational system of the country.

THE INDIAN SURVEYS, 1890.

ALTHOUGH the commencement of the survey of India dates as far back as the beginning of the century, it is as yet far from complete. In most countries survey operations were set in hand with scientific instruments of antiquated construction, the plan was more or less rough in conception and execution, and the scale, though sufficient for the needs of the day, was eventually found to be too small for modern requirements. The consequence is that, while European countries have had to go through a process which amounts practically to a remapping of their dominions, India has proved no exception to the rule, and year after year has rolled on without the completion of the survey being appreciably nearer, while from time to time the acquisition of fresh territory has still further enlarged the area of operations. Moreover, a continental Power like India is bound in self-defence not to confine itself to its own possessions, but to examine carefully its neighbouring regions as well. The process is traceable in the last report of the Indian Survey, which has just been received in England, and wherein is recorded not only the routine work of trigonometrical, topographical, forest, cadastral, and traverse surveys, but also a considerable outturn, amounting to 97,792 miles, of geographical surveys and reconnaissances in Beloochistan, Persia, Burma, and adjacent countries.

One of the most important districts brought under survey in Burma was the Kyaukse district, which is separated on the north from the Mandalay district by the Myitnge river, a large volume of beautifully clear water, shaded on both sides by numerous mango groves, among which are studded frequent villages and solidly-built masonry pagodas. From the rivers numerous canals are conducted on every side. These canals are the most remarkable feature of the district and the chief source of its wealth. They are said to have been first excavated in the year 427 Burman era, A.D. 1065, or the year before the Norman Conquest, by King Nawayate, whose capital, Myinzoong, is still traceable in the remains of the fort and numerous ruined pagodas, which may be seen. The inhabitants are almost pure Burmans, with here and there a Shan or half-Shan village. They seem very peaceable, and loud domestic quarrels, so common in Indian villages, are seldom heard. The children seem stout, jolly, and healthy, hop-scotch and kite-flying being with them very common amusements, varied by dancing in imitation of their elders. Gambling on a small scale at odd or even is common, and occasionally a big stroke is made. Toddy is extracted from the palm, rice beer is manufactured for local use, but there is little intoxication, the Chinese retail liquor merchants in Kyaukse and other places being forbidden to sell foreign spirits to Burmans, an order which is rigidly enforced.

A Commission in charge of Mr. Ney Elias was deputed to demarcate the Anglo-Siamese boundary, and a survey party under Captain H. M. Jackson was attached thereto. The Commission was divided into three detachments, spreading over the Trans-Salween, Shan, and Karenni States, dotted about the lower course of that river. The hill-sides produce teak and pine, which are floated down the stream; while rice, with a little sugar and tobacco, is cultivated for home consumption. The ordinary roads of the country are exceedingly primitive, and no baggage animals, except the basket-carrying bullocks of the Shans or the pack-mules of the Panthays could use them. The total area mapped during the expedition amounted to 9,620 miles on the quarter-inch scale.

Another expedition, but of a less pacific character, was despatched into the Chin-Lushai country to chastise the marauding mountaineers in those parts. Two columns advanced from Chittagong on the Bay of Bengal and the Myittha valley in Burma respectively, converging in the wild and mountainous hills south of Manipore. The locality is particularly unhealthy, and order was not re-established among the tribes without the troops being subjected to severe attacks of fever and privations. The country traversed by the western column is a mass of greatly broken-up hills, with steep sides and low narrow valleys, clothed to the height of 5,000 feet with dense jungle. But on reaching the Koladyne river the nature and aspect of the country undergo an entire change. The dense undergrowth disappears, the features are larger and bolder, and the pine, oak, and rhododendron take the place of the massive jungle trees and thick bamboos of the country to the west. A chain of triangles was run through eastwards to Haka on the Burmese side, and an area of 6,000 square miles of topography completed on the $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch scale, while Lieutenant Renny-Tailyour, R.E., who had charge of the survey work of the eastern column, covered about 3,000 square miles of previously unknown tracts, filling up considerable gaps in the map of the country.

Beloochistan is a province which is still very imperfectly known, and triangulation, topography, and geographical surveys on various scales were carried on there in 1889-90 under the general direction of Colonel Holdich, the party being split up into five sections, so as to cover the scattered ground. One of the sections was attached to Sir Robert Sandeman's expedition into the Zhob Valley, and during the halt of one month at Apozai the triangulation was extended northwards and westwards to the banks of the Kundar and Gomul rivers, while for the purposes of the contemplated railway large-scale surveys were run of the line of the rivers between Mina and Apozai. Lieutenant Mackenzie was enabled to reach one of the highest peaks west of the great Takht-i-Suliman, from which he determined the general character and features of the country westwards, sloping up to the crest of the Afghan watershed. A special report by Colonel Holdich on the railway surveys was also completed and submitted to the Government, and we may fairly expect to hear very shortly some definite news regarding this important project, which will doubtless conduce greatly to the security of the North-West frontier. Other sections of the Beloochistan party were engaged in triangulating Lus Beyla, in miscellaneous work about Quetta, Pishin, and the Toba plateau, and in the distant regions about Panjgur and the Perso-Belooch frontier. Although Beloochistan is for the most part exceedingly barren, there are localities which, under decent government, admit of being reclaimed, and old commercial routes which the itinerant leaders of the country, if protected by the strong arm of the suzerain Power, will be encouraged to reopen. Some energetic steps have been recently taken by Captain Temple in planting trees throughout the lower part of the Bolan Pass, where vegetation, under native neglect and misrule, had practically disappeared.

A large out-turn of reconnaissance work in Persia fell to the lot of a distinguished native officer, Yusuf Sharif, Khan Bahadur, who had been deputed to accompany Colonel Sartorius, C.B., on military intelligence duty in Persia during the summer of 1889, and who returned to India in October last. He surveyed about 25,000 square miles of country on the scale of eight miles to one inch, and all without the advantage of trigonometrical basis. A comparison, however, of the results with the best-ascertained values of certain well-known places fixed by Colonel St. John and others tends to prove the general accuracy of the work.

Colonel H. Tanner, whose retirement after an arduous service of twenty-eight years has recently taken place, rendered in 1889-90 a good out-turn of miscellaneous work in the Himalayas, a region which few if any other officers can claim to know so thoroughly. Colonel Tanner's picturesque monochromes of Himalayan scenery of the wildest and grandest character have been on view at the Royal Geographical Society's rooms, and testify equally to his artistic powers and to his endurance as an explorer in a region of exceptional altitude and difficulty. In some of the side valleys between Plach and Bajaura, steep jungle-clad slopes rise precipitously from the very banks of confined torrents, and literally no place seems available on which to set up the plane-table. The Tirtan valley, visited by Colonel Tanner in June 1890, is typical of the rest. In three days' march up the valley he had to make six bridges over the torrent, and from no single position were the ridges on either side visible. There are, however, in these valleys valuable forests, the boundaries of which require surveying, so the four-inch work will have to be carried on whatever the difficulties of the task may be.

Although the last report of the Surveyor-General contains but little of those exciting and picturesque narratives of native explorers who for years past have mapped out the rugged and interesting border lands of India with such courage and fidelity, there is more and more recorded in the way of revenue surveys, which, as a proof of the increasing extent of cultivated ground of sufficient richness to require detailed and large scale survey, may be accepted perhaps as a more substantial and significant token of the gradual pacification and development of the country.

THE SIND AND BELOOCHISTAN FRONTIER FORCE.

It is always a little dangerous to deal with the question of the so-called Beloochistan regiments of the Bombay Army, as the officers serving with them are jealous, and pardonably so, of their good name, though forced to admit that the wild Beloochi is seldom found in the ranks. Thus Captain Yate, of the 2nd Belooch Battalion (29th Regiment of Bombay Infantry), joins issue with Lieutenant Cardew for having stated in his recent prize essay that the Sind regiments are not a distinct frontier force like that of the Punjab; that their officers are transferred and promoted between them and down-country regiments; and that, being accustomed to the docile Hindoostani sepoy, they have not the sympathy with the frontier tribesmen which exists between an officer who has spent his life in a frontier corps and his Pathan soldiers. Captain Yate, in reply to this, states that the "S. and B. F. F.," by which is presumably meant the Sind and Beloochistan Frontier Force, is in point of officers as distinct a corps as the Punjab Frontier Force; that it has this advantage over the latter, that officers found unsuited to serving on the frontier and with frontier men can be transferred to down-country regiments, while no such transfers are possible in the older Frontier Force; that the cases in which outsiders are brought in are rare; and that none of the officers are accustomed to the docile Hindoostani sepoy, as happily he does not exist in the Belooch battalions. Now, we think that its most ardent supporters can hardly contend that the "S. and B. F. F.," which has no recognised existence as a separate force, has the same close-knit ties of esprit de corps and sympathy as exist in the Punjab Frontier Force, with its splendid traditions and grand record of service. Moreover, officers can be and are transferred from among the "Piffers" to regiments on the ordinary Bengal list, if they are found wanting in the qualities needed to keep them in touch with their men. It is not so very unusual for officers of down-country corps to be brought into senior positions in the "Belooch" regiments: the Army List shows one or more such among the commandants, squadron or wing commanders of all the six regiments so named, and when the 7th Bombay Lancers (Belooch Horse) were raised in 1885, not a single one of the senior officers came from a frontier corps. They surely had been accustomed to the docile Hindoostani.

But the question of the actual composition of these Belooch battalions is of more interest than the comparison between the officers serving with them and those of the Punjab Frontier Force. Lieutenant Cardew stated that these regiments are mainly composed of down-country men, and any Beloochi enlisting in them finds himself among men whom he dislikes, and to whom he is as much a stranger as if he had entered any distinctly down-country corps. Captain Yate replies that the last element to be found in the ranks is the down-country men, and here he is probably right, though he himself falls into error, when he states that half the men are Pathans, and that the force is "mainly composed of frontier tribesmen." According to the Caste Return of 1890, the composition of the six regiments is as follows:—

	5th Bombay Cavalry.	6th Bombay Cavalry.	7th Bombay Lancers.	17th Bombay Infantry.	19th Bombay Infantry.	30th Bombay Infantry.	Total.
Bombay Mahomedans	70	23	267	55	89	116	610
Hindustani Mahomedans	162	247	—	1	9	38	457
Punjabi Mahomedans	66	29	138	343	471	366	2,353
Trans-Indus and Border Mahomedans	109	84	29	262	241	183	908
Bombay Hindoos	13	5	22	3	10	54	107
Jat Sikhs	111	—	—	61	—	60	232
Other Sikhs	—	133	156	19	23	2	353
Other Hindoos	69	77	—	44	38	32	360
Beloochis	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Total	600	608	612	788	812	807	4,227

It will be seen from this tabular statement that there are but 908 Pathans, i.e. trans-Indus and border Mahomedans, in the six regiments, or considerably less than one-fourth of the total enlisted strength last year. Punjabi Mahomedans are the most numerous, over 1,100 being in the infantry alone out of a total of about 2,400 sepoys. We have taken the last figures available, and there can scarcely have been very great changes in the class of recruits since last year. But it really matters little whether the regiments are mainly composed of Punjabi, Mahomedans and Sikhs, or Brahmans and Rajpoots, so far as the sympathies of the Beloochis are concerned; they are equally antagonistic to all. It was hoped that an experiment, inaugurated this year, of forming two corps, composed solely of Beloochis, would be successful, but experience has shown that even under these congenial circumstances the tribesmen will not take service. In fact, the problem of securing them as regular soldiers seems no nearer solution now than it was years ago, when Sir Charles Macgregor praised their stern manly courage and advocated their enlistment in the ranks of the Indian Army. Captain Yate sees in the Zhob Levy the nucleus of a real Belooch regiment, and here we agree with him. The question is, when will it be possible to induce the "catch-em-aliveohs" to submit to strict discipline? Not for two or three years perhaps; so that meanwhile renewed efforts should be made to win some recruits at least for the regular battalions.—Pioneer.

AN INTERESTING MANUSCRIPT.

As our readers will doubtless remember, says the Times of India, when Lieutenant Bower returned last autumn from Kashgaria he brought with him an ancient birch-bark manuscript, which had been recovered in somewhat curious circumstances from the ruins of a buried city in the neighbourhood of Kuchar. The MS. was shown to the Asiatic Society of Bengal in November last, and keen interest was manifested in the acquisition. Since that date the book (for the MS. is composed of thirty-three leaves closely written over on both sides) has been examined by Dr. Rudolf Hoernle, who succeeded in translating the major portion of it. At the last meeting of the society, Dr. Hoernle communicated to the members the result of his labours in a paper of singular interest, which has just been published, together with facsimiles of two leaves of the MS. in the Journal of the society. The work is written in Sanskrit verse (Sloka), and in the character known as the Northern Class of the Nagari alphabet, of which three varieties occur in the course of the MS. The work appears to be a compendium of medicine, the "Navanitaka," and is in sixteen chapters. It was written by a Buddhist, but Dr. Hoernle has not succeeded in discovering his name. It begins with the Buddhist salutation to the Tathagatas, and is prefaced by an introduction in which the writer modestly states his purpose. "I am going," he says, "to write an approved compendium (of medicine), called the 'Navanitaka,' based on the excellent system of the Maharshis as composed by them in olden times. Whatever is useful to men and women afflicted with various diseases; whatever is also useful for children, that will all be declared in this book. It will commend itself to those physicians whose minds delight in conciseness; but on account of the multiplicity of its prescriptions, it will also be welcome to those whose minds love many details." He then goes on to enumerate the contents of the various chapters into which his book is divided. "The first chapter will give prescriptions of powders; the second of clarified butter; the third will be concerned with oils. The fourth will be about the mixtures which are used in the treatment of various diseases. The fifth will give prescriptions of clysters; the sixth rules about elixirs. The seventh will be about gruels; the eighth about aphrodisiacs; the ninth about eyewashes; the tenth about hairdyes. The eleventh will be concerned with applications of the yellow myrobalan. The twelfth will be about bitumen; the thirteenth about castor-oil. The fourteenth will be concerned with the treatment of children; the fifteenth will deal with the treatment of barren women. Lastly, the sixteenth will be about the treatment of women who have children. These sixteen chapters will constitute the 'Navanitaka.' It should not be given to any one who has no son, nor to any one who has no brother; nor should it be taught to any one who has no disciple." Each chapter contains in versified form, the learned author's prescriptions, from which we gather that clarified butter (in whose virtues he seems to have singularly generous faith), oil, treacle, vinegar, and ginger are when drunk an instant remedy for lumbago. Gout and rheumatism yield to an ointment composed of thickened goat's milk and wheat flour, and an addition of sesamum may be made with immediate advantage. The second portion of the MS., which is on the reverse of the leaves, traced by this authority, consists mainly of proverbial sayings in Sanskrit verse. A curious feature of this section is the system of enumeration, a set of three sayings for instance being indicated by simply varying the relative position of three figures—443, 434, 344. Six following sayings are indicated by varying the position of the figures 341, thus 134, 413, 314, 143, 431. The numbers are indicated throughout by numeral letters, not figures, nor is the decimal system used. The tens, hundreds, &c., are thus indicated by separate signs, sixteen being illustrated by the symbols for 10 and 6, and twenty-five by those for 20 and 5, which, on the modern system of enumeration, would give us 106 and 205 respectively. There is a third section to the manuscript which consists apparently of prayers and charms, and is not of special interest. The language pretty well all through is the ungrammatical Sanskrit formerly known as the Gāthā dialect, which was used for all literary purposes by the Northern and North-Western Buddhists outside the schools of Brahman learning in the centuries immediately before and after the commencement of the Christian era. The age of the present MS. Dr. Hoernle, after careful study, fixes between 450 and 550 A.D.—certainly not later than that, and it is thus the oldest Indian written book known to exist, and its archaeological value is consequently exceedingly great.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS AND TROOPSHIPS.

By orders just issued from the War Office it is announced that the following movement of infantry battalions will be made during the Indian trooping season, now commenced:—1st Royal West Surrey, Aldershot to Malta; 1st Royal West Kent, Malta to India; 2nd Bedfordshire, India to Grave end; 2nd Royal Fusiliers, Aldershot to Woolwich; 1st Northumberland Fusiliers, Aldershot to Dover; 1st Lincolnshire, Shorncliffe to Aldershot; 2nd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Aldershot to India; 2nd Liverpool, India to Aden; 1st Connaught Rangers, Aden to Pembroke Dock; 2nd Duke of Cornwall's Light Inf., Pembroke Dock to Portsmouth; 1st Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, Portsmouth to Shorncliffe; 2nd Royal West Kent, Shorncliffe to Dublin; 1st Gloucestershire, Dublin to Aldershot; 1st Cameron Highlanders, Edinburgh to Malta; 2nd Royal Scots, Malta to India; 1st Suffolk, India to Colchester; 1st Royal Irish, Colchester to the Curragh; 1st Royal Lancaster, the Curragh to Aldershot; 1st Somerset Light Inf., Aldershot to Gibraltar; 1st South Stafford, Gibraltar to Egypt; 1st Shropshire Light Inf., Egypt to Hong Kong; 1st Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Hong Kong to Edinburgh; 2nd King's Rifles, Dublin to Gibraltar; 3rd King's Rifles, Gibraltar to Parkhurst; 4th Rifle Brigade, Parkhurst to Devonport; 1st Derbyshire, Devonport to Colchester; and 1st Royal Munster Fusiliers, Colchester to Dublin.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Imperial Service Corps.—Looking at the question of the utility of the Imperial Service troops as a whole, it must be admitted, says the Allahabad paper, that the policy of the Government of India has so far been fully justified. Already, it may be said, there are two strong brigades in course of training which could be employed on active service. It is, however, essentially necessary that all the corps should complete their transport, which, in some instances, is below the strength required in the field. The men, as a rule, are of the fighting classes; they are thoroughly well equipped and armed with Snider rifles; they are contented with their lot, and are keen to learn their work; their officers display an equally earnest desire to acquit themselves well; while the chiefs, whose soldiers they are, take a pride in the new regiments. The required standard of efficiency has not yet been gained, for neither drill nor musketry can be learnt in a few months, but there is ample evidence to show that a steady improvement is going on all round. Discipline, which, in its true sense, was almost unknown under the old conditions, is being enforced; the men are regularly paid, and due provision made for their pensions; and the old abuses of peculation and bribery are absent in the reorganised regiments. During the past year, regulations have been adopted in every state, based upon those in force in the Indian Army, but modified to meet local conditions. The system of training is a most practical one, and the experience which the corps gain in their camps of exercise or in British cantonments is of the highest value. Col. Mellis, chief inspecting officer, has under his orders thirteen officers, all carefully selected, and the work which this handful of British officers have undertaken has certainly been well performed. The Government of India can have no reason to regret the step taken by Lord Dufferin in 1888, for it has been demonstrated that the Chiefs were in earnest in their loyal offers, and that they have consistently exerted themselves to make the Imperial Service Corps troops worthy of being brigaded with regular troops in the field.

The Black Mountain Expedition.—The Allahabad paper in reviewing the operations of the late expedition to the Black Mountain says that the question which now remains to be considered is whether the results obtained by this third expedition are likely to be permanent. So long as Brig.-Gen. Hammond remains at Seri and there is a reserve on the frontier no further trouble is likely to take place, but as the winter comes on the troops must be withdrawn from the hills, and it has then to be seen whether the tribesmen will fulfil their latest pledges. It is quite true, as the Commander-in-Chief points out, that the "submission of offending tribes has been more complete than on any former occasion; they have consented to the construction of roads and dominating posts upon the frontier and the permanent expatriation of Hashim Ali Khan," but against this must be put the immunity from punishment which the Chagarzais have enjoyed, the possible ill-effects of negotiating with Miyan Gul instead of sweeping his rabble from Baio, and the leniency displayed throughout towards the enemy. It has been a case of making war with rose-water, and the scent undoubtedly hangs about the despatches. It would be unfair to the troops engaged not to endorse the praise bestowed upon them for their good discipline and soldierly behaviour; but soldiers in the field expect to be more than puppets at the end of a telegraph wire, and it is a pity to keep them from closing with an enemy, however contemptible, when they are within striking distance. Fewer telegrams and more decision upon the spot are what is wanted in frontier expeditions.

Assault-at-Arms at Bangalore.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has issued orders for a Presidential assault-at-arms, to be held at Bangalore during the first week in October next, the object of the military tournament being the encouragement and development of skill in arms of all ranks of her Majesty's British, Native, and Volunteer Forces. Accompanying the Commander-in-Chief's order is a list of the competitions which may be entered for, with the rules governing each competition. Besides the usual military "encounters" with various weapons, there are to be competitions in all manner of sports and gymnastic exercise.

A New Field Service Belt and Equipment.—Major Lovell, of the 21st Hussars, at Bangalore, has invented a very excellent field service belt and equipment, suitable alike for infantry and cavalry. Every article and every strap can be removed without displacing others, and the belt contains money pockets, a waterproof haversack, a water-bottle, which can be drunk out of without removal, and a watch compass and whistle. The weight is evenly distributed, and there is no undue strain or pressure anywhere. This equipment will enable a man without difficulty to carry three days' rations. Major Lovell has taken out a patent for the invention, and we believe it is favourably viewed by the War Office. Major Lovell's invention looks like the thing which has long been wanted by soldiers of every branch.

The Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition at Poona.—The Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition—the twenty-fifth of its kind which has been held in Poona—was formally opened on Sept. 1, by his Excellency Sir George Greaves, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, at the Connaught Institute (Soldiers' Institute), Wanowrie, in the presence of a large and fashionable gathering. His Excellency, who was accompanied by an aide-de-camp, drove up to the entrance precisely at 5.30 P.M., and the Guard of Honour, furnished by the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers (consisting of 100 rank and file, with regimental colour and band) under the command of a captain, presented arms. His Excellency was received on alighting from his carriage by the members of the Exhibition Committee and Major Rainsford, of the Worcester Regiment, the honorary secretary. Taking his stand on the dais, his Excellency declared the Exhibition open.

Shooting of Madras Regiments.—We (Madras Times) are glad to notice that to the Madras Presidency falls the honour this year of having the best shooting British cavalry regiment. The 21st Hussars head the list of the British cavalry in India for the past year with a figure of merit in range practice of 155.62, which comes under the heading of "very good." The 21st are a long way in front of the second regiment, whose figure of merit is 143.36, while the regiment at the bottom of the roll only has 108.35. Among the British infantry regiments in this Presidency the 4th battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps takes pride of place with a figure of merit of 158.47, standing fifth on the list in India. The Oxfordshire Regiment also shot well up. The Madras Sappers and Miners have beaten both Bengal and Bombay. Among the cavalry, the 3rd Madras Cavalry have done best. Among the native infantry armed with the M.-H. rifle the 9th Madras Inf. have done best among the Presidency regiments, taking eighth place, while among the forty-three regiments armed with the Martini, the 25th Madras Inf. also come out fourteenth on the list. Among the regiments armed with the Snider, seventy-eight in number, the 19th Madras Inf. holds the honourable position of fourth place, and the 21st Madras Inf. the sixth, while the 4th Hyderabad Contingent has beaten both by taking second place. Altogether among the Snider-armed infantry, Madras has seven regiments among the first twenty and thirteen in the first forty. The Madras regiments have reason to be well content with their shooting.

An exchange of battalions has been sanctioned between Capts. E. T. Cooper and H. H. Addington, Royal Fusiliers.

Brig.-Surg. W. Graves has been appointed administrative medical officer in the Bengal Presidency, vice Deputy Surg.-Gen. Lithgow, about to be transferred to the Home Establishment.

Capt. C. Sandes, Army Pay Department, attached to the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, has been appointed paymaster of the Deolali Depot, as a temporary measure, vice Major Allan Moss, 1st batt. Worcestershire Regiment, resigned.

On Aug. 27 at the regimental quarters of the Calcutta Volunteer Battalion, Col. Chatterton, on behalf of Sir Frederick Roberts, amid much enthusiasm, presented Capt. Cox, of the Pioneer Company, with a very handsome sword.

The rumour grows in persistence that when Major-General Sir Hugh Gough, V.C., K.C.B., relinquishes command of the Lahore Division next spring on becoming a lieutenant-general, he will be succeeded by Major-General C. E. Nairne, C.B., R.A., the present inspector-general of artillery in India.

Col. T. A. Cooke, assistant adjutant-general, Headquarters, officiates as inspector-general of cavalry during the absence on leave of General Luck; Major W. B. Wilson officiates as assistant adjutant-general, vice Col. Cooke; and Capt. W. C. Pollard, 15th Bengal Cavalry, officiates as deputy-assistant-adjutant-general, vice Major Wilson.

Lieuts. W. M. Southey, 1st batt. Duke of Cornwall's Light Inf., officiating wing officer, 27th Bombay Light Inf., and E. W. Thompson, 2nd batt. Bedfordshire Regt., officiating wing officer, 3rd Bombay Light Inf., have been admitted to the Staff Corps.

Major F. T. N. Spratt, R.E., Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, whose three months' leave expired on Aug. 31, has, it is definitely understood, resigned his appointment, and will be succeeded by Lieut.-Col. H. P. Leach, R.E., commandant of the Bombay Sappers and Miners.

Several cases of cholera having occurred in the Durham Light Infantry at Quetta, the whole regiment is to be removed under canvas to the Hanna pass, as a preventive measure against further inroads of the disease.

Orders in connection with the warrant separating garrison artillery from horse and field batteries will be issued in India shortly. The battery will still be preserved as the unit in India.

Officers serving in Burma infantry regiments will be entitled to the Burma local allowance while present with regiments in Burma, but no portion of that allowance will be passed while on privilege or general leave or on furlough.

There will be a Staff College dinner for officers serving in the Bombay Army at the Poona Gymkhana Club on Sept. 22, the same day as that on which the dinner will be held at Simla for officers of the Bengal Army. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the Quarter-master-General, and the military secretaries to His Excellency the Governor and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief have been invited.

A modification is contemplated of the rule under which officers of the British service in India holding five years' command and staff appointments are restricted to six months' leave on medical certificate and four months' on private affairs. They will be allowed up to eight months' leave to England during their tenure on half their Indian pay and allowances, and staff pay without having to furnish sick certificate.

Two second-class district commands fall vacant shortly in the Madras Presidency, Brig.-Gen. Bengough, commanding Bangalore, completing his five years of tenure on Nov. 8, and Brig.-Gen. Wolsley, commanding Mandalay, on May 20. Both posts fall to officers of the British service. There will be keen competition for them, particularly as no British vacancies will occur on the general staff in Bengal and the Bombay Presidencies for more than two years.

Two men implicated in the cutting up of the harness of H Battery, R.H.A., at Sealkote, have each been sentenced to eighty-four days' imprisonment with hard labour, and to be put under stoppages until they have made good the amount of the damage done. The cause of the crime was that one of the men was ordered to lay out his harness in skeleton order after having once put it up in the usual manner. The commanding officer having taken rather stringent measures to discover the culprits, one of them confessed and implicated the other.

It having been settled to utilise Kurrachee to a small extent the next trooping season, as an experimental measure, says the Civil and Military Gazette, Capt. O'Neill, of the 2nd batt. Royal Dublin Fusiliers, has been deputed to the Pay Examiner's Office, Poona, for a practical instruction in accounts before taking up the duties of Paymaster of the Kurrachee Depot. This officer has only returned from leave to Cashmere, and he was formerly doing duty at Deolali in the Pay Office there at the end of the last trooping season to gain an insight of the modus operandi there. The Government is certainly spending money on travelling expenses in trying to render him fit for the appointment.

BENGAL.

OUR advices from Calcutta are to Sept. 1.

The Lieutenant-Governor on Drainage and Drinking-Water.—Replying to an address at Jessore, recently, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal told the Municipal Committee that he sincerely trusted they would do no such thing as lay out 40,000 rs. on a drainage scheme, for though good drainage in itself was a most excellent thing and highly desirable, still the necessity for really good drinking-water was far more pressing and important. The people of Bengal and of other parts of India show a disposition to accept great engineering works as monuments of the British Government, similar to the magnificent Mahomedan edifices at Delhi, Lucknow, and Agra, but, says the Times of India, they are loth to give up their beloved ditch-water. Certain planters tell of a Doctor Babu who faithfully and energetically carried out his orders during an outbreak of cholera, in compelling the garden-coolies to procure their drinking-water from a spring on the hill, but himself always resorted to the river, which received half the drainage of the country and was further polluted by the floating bodies of dead cattle.

The Sanitary Board, Bengal.—The new Sanitary Board in Bengal which was constituted the year before last, but did not come into working order till the autumn of last year, when the engineer was appointed, seems to have made a fair start. The Board had under its attention schemes for the drainage and water-supply of the town of Howrah, the drainage of the Municipalities on the left bank of the Hooghly, the drainage of Serampore, and the drainage of Poori. In Bengal, as elsewhere of course, the difficulty is to get the Municipalities to put their hands in their pockets.

Calcutta is to have a new daily paper. It will be printed at the office of the Indian Planters' Gazette.

Another gold mining company came to an end on Aug. 29, when an application was made before the Calcutta High Court for an order to wind up the Jut-Put Gold Mining Company.

Mahomedan youths in Lower Bengal are beginning to go in for the Covenanted Civil Service. One of them, Maulvi Abdul Karim Chowdhery, has passed this year, and another, Sheik Kradut Ulla Chowdhery, is about to proceed to England to compete for it. The former is a zemindar of Mymensingh, and the latter an heir to a large estate in the district of Chittagong.

The Bengal Spinning and Weaving Company has been registered under the Indian Companies Act, with the object of erecting and working a spinning and weaving mill at Mahesh, near Serampore, or about ten miles north of Calcutta. The capital of the company, which amounts to 10 lacs of rupees, is divided into 40,000 shares of 25 rs. each, while the directors, who all reside in the neighbourhood of Calcutta, state that the mill will contain 20,000 spindles and 200 looms.

His Highness, the Maharaja of Durbhanga seems to have been more princely in his ideas than many of his brethren, observes a Calcutta paper. He is not slow to recognise merit, and to show appreciation of faithful service in a practical form. Only a short time ago it was notified that his manager, Mr. Gwatkin Williams, died, leaving his family without being so well provided as might be desired. His Highness has done something to mitigate the position of the bereaved family. He has made Mrs. Williams a donation of 10,000 rs., paid her passage home, and arranged to allow her 150*l.* a year for life.

MADRAS.

OUR advices from Madras are to Sept. 2.

Lord Wenlock in the Distressed Districts.—Lord Wenlock was still touring in the distressed districts of Madras when the mail left. Replying to an address at Periapoliem, in the North Arcot district, his Excellency said: "I can assure you that, whatever inconveniences I may have been put to in coming here, I feel amply repaid by being able to see for myself what the condition of the people is, and what means are being taken by district officers for the relief of the distress. I am glad to see that the scarcity is not so deep and severe as was represented to me in several quarters. I am perfectly satisfied that the measures taken by Government are sufficient to provide work for those that require it, and that the kitchens are able to feed those that are not able to work and take part in the relief work, from infirmity or youth. I am also glad to find that the late fall of rain must be of considerable benefit to this particular part of the country. I am sorry to find beyond doubt that there is a widespread failure of the crops here, and that no doubt must cause a greater or less amount of distress." Later on in the speech, referring to the water-supply, his Excellency added: "Wherever I go I am marvellously struck by the appearances of prosperity which exist in a country well supplied with wells as compared with places that have a fewer number of wells."

Official Competition with Private Trade.—The Madras press is again taking up the subject of official interference with private trade as experienced in the Lawrence Asylum Press, which is again adding machinery to its plant. The Mail points out that no reply has yet been received by the local printers, who memorialised the Madras Government fifteen months ago, backed by a protest of the Trades Association.

Tea and Coffee Culture.—Official returns of tea and coffee cultivation in the Madras Presidency last year are published. The latter is the more important industry, and the number of coffee plantations in the year amounted to as many as 16,478. The total area occupied by these plantations aggregated 192,729 acres, out of which 76,076 acres represent the area actually planted out. The total output of the year was 7,792,882 lbs. As many as 10,562 plantations are found in the Malabar district; Madras has 4,755; the Nilgiris 679; Salem 368; and Travancore 29. Tea cultivation is not carried on to anything approaching the same extent. There were only 151 plantations during the year, which occupied between them an area of 22,214 acres, of which, however, only 10,868 acres represent the area actually planted out. The total yield of the year was 1,836,983 lbs., all of which was "black" tea.

CEYLON.

The Management of the Ceylon Railway.—Mr. W. T. Pearce, the general manager of the Ceylon Railway, being about to go on leave, the question of a successor during his absence has arisen. We (Indian Engineering) are glad to learn that there is some likelihood of Mr. MacBride being made acting railway manager, in addition to his other duties, and a better selection could not be made. Mr. MacBride has an excellent record. As chief of the P.W.D. he has been a distinct success, and if any outsider is to be placed in charge of the railway for a time no better man than he could well be found. Besides, the appointment of Mr. MacBride to the post would pave the way towards the amalgamation of the Railway and Public Works Departments in a colony which can ill afford the luxury of number and variety in its administrative services.

BOMBAY.

OUR advices from Bombay are to Sept. 4.

Departure of Lord Harris for Simla.—The Governor of Bombay and Lady Harris, accompanied by Miss Croft, Mr. Lee-Warner, C.S., Colonel Rhodes, D.S.O., Mr. Edgerley, C.S., and Captain E. H. Cox, A.D.C., left Poona on Aug. 31 by rail for Dhond and Munmar en route to Simla. The following were on the platform to see their Excellencies off:—H.E. Sir George Greaves, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., the Hon. Sir Charles Pritchard, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., the Hon. Sir Raymond West, K.C.I.E., the Hon. Mr. J. G. and Mrs. Moore, the Hon. Mr. J. R. Naylor, C.S.I., General and Mrs. Pottinger, Mr. W. W. Loch, C.S., Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher, Mr. Wenden, Mr. Howard Warden, Captain the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, A.D.C., Mr. T. B. Kirkham, Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., C.S.I., Captain W. J. Peyton, C.M.G., A.D.C., Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, C.S., Mr. E. L. Cappel, C.S., Dr. Cowasjee Hormasjee, Major T. Macpherson, Dr. Dustoor, Hoshang Jamsapjee, Mr. A. J. D. Pollen, C.S., and Rao Bahadur Barve. Mr. Laidlaw, Traffic Superintendent, proceeded in charge of the train as far as Dhond, where Mr. Carreras relieved him of this duty. Inspector Jeffries, of the G. I. P. Railway Police, accompanied the train to Bhusawal.

The Anti-Opium Question.—A crowded, well-sustained, and enthusiastic public meeting on the Anti-Opium Question, and attended by hundreds of the leading Hindoos, was held in the Joshi Hall, at Poona, on Sept. 1, and it was unanimously decided to form a branch of the Bombay Anti-Opium Alliance. Rao Bahadur Gopal Hari Deshmukh presided.

The Rajabai Tower Tragedy.—At a meeting of the Rajabai Tower Tragedy Committee, held on Aug. 31, it was unanimously resolved that a reward of 20,000 rs., of which 10,000 rs. are to be contributed by the Jame-Jamshed press, should be offered to any person who may give such information as will lead to the discovery of the perpetrators of the supposed outrage; and that a public memorial be forwarded to the Secretary of State for India on the whole subject. The meeting was further of opinion that the House of Commons should also be interested in considering the matter. This question was, however, reserved for another meeting.

Strange Story of Swindling a Cashier.—Another story has, says the Times of India, come to light about the gang of swindlers in Bombay. According to the story, a man called on a certain cashier in question, and informed him that a friend of his had a large amount of jewellery, the property of a chief at Kolapore, who was in temporary difficulties, and was anxious to dispose of the said jewellery at a low price. The jewellery was shown to the cashier, who took the bait, and agreed to purchase the articles either for his firm or for himself for the sum of 15,000 rs. On Saturday evening, according to prearrangement, the cashier went to a bungalow in Parel, taking with him some 15,000 rs. belonging to his firm. He was met by the man who had first offered him the jewellery for sale, and was then introduced to a second party, who was represented as having the articles in his custody. A servant was called, who dug up the box containing the jewellery from under the floor of the room, and, after paying the money, the box was handed over to the cashier. Shortly after leaving the bungalow with his prize, the latter was pursued by someone shouting, "Thief, thief, puckaro, puckaro," whereupon he became frightened, threw away the box, and ran off to avoid arrest. Next morning he again visited the bungalow, only to find it empty. The story runs that the unfortunate cashier on informing his employers of the loss has been threatened with proceedings for criminal breach of trust and misappropriation in respect to the 15,000 rs. It has been stated that owing to the absence of some necessary provision in the Penal Code, the police have no power to prosecute this gang of swindlers.

During the month of July 2,148,663 cwt. of wheat, worth 91,01,090 rs., were shipped from Bombay.

A police escort taking a band of life-convicts from Ahmedabad to Thanna Gaol were overpowered by their prisoners in the train on Aug. 31. A desperate struggle ensued, in which three of the convicts were wounded, two policemen severely injured, and several of the prisoners escaped with arms and ammunition.

Indian Engineering says:—We have often suggested in these columns the creation of the appointment of City Architect for Calcutta, and other large centres of wealth and population in India. There should be a City Architect just as much as a City Engineer, as is the case in almost every city in Europe, which has been found to be necessary from an experience of many years. The idea has been revived in Bombay in connection with the proposed Municipal Building By-laws; and we consider the period opportune to press for legislative action in the matter, as much from considerations of public safety as those of public health and public taste.

Imperial Institute.—The Committee of Management of the School of Modern Oriental Studies which, under the presidency of the Prince of Wales, was founded by the Imperial Institute in union with University College and King's College, London, announce that they are able to offer considerable encouragement to students in Oriental languages in the form of three competitive scholarships of 50% per annum, to be held for three years each. These scholarships, which will be competed for triennially, have been founded by the Misses Ouseley in memory of their father, the late Colonel Joseph W. J. Ouseley, of the Bengal Army. Colonel Ouseley was for upwards of sixty years connected with the teaching of Oriental languages, especially Persian and Arabic; first in the Government service at Calcutta, then as a professor at Haileybury College, and finally as examiner for the Indian Civil Service in London. The examination for the first scholarship will probably take place before the end of the present year.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Sept. 15:—

An important minute by the Chief Commissioner on the famine in certain districts of Upper Burma is published. Sir A. Mackenzie gives the result of his personal observations during his recent tour, and his minute shows how serious the situation was and still is. The condition of the central district, comprising Yemethin and Meiktila, is shown to be very bad. The people are not only suffering from food famine, but have narrowly escaped a terrible water famine. Sir A. Mackenzie says that had rain held off much longer thousands of men and cattle must have perished from actual thirst. The town of Yemethin was on the verge of extinction from want of water. The immediate danger of water famine is now greatly lessened if not removed. He states that in many villages people have eaten their seed grain, and are eking out a subsistence with jungle roots and grass seeds and other forest produce. In some districts the people are reduced to this diet without any admixture of grain. The people are, however, wonderfully cheerful.

The relief works were not commenced a day too soon, as the people were selling their plough bullocks, for which they could hardly find purchasers at even nominal rates. Sir A. Mackenzie considers the works already opened inadequate. Recognising the gravity of the situation, he has adopted prompt measures to relieve distress. The relief funds at the disposal of the Deputy Commissioners being exhausted, they are directed to continue the advances without specific provision. To enable the district officers to devote themselves exclusively to supervising the relief of distress, they are relieved of all routine work. Finally, the payment of the Thathameda tax is suspended. Sir A. Mackenzie states that, if the Yemethin and Meiktila districts are to be saved from the risk of constantly recurring scarcity and are to pay a revenue, we must restore the irrigation works, which have been allowed to fall into disrepair; otherwise it would be better to encourage the people to leave and let the district run into jungle. Nothing will do more to make the people content with our rule than constructing irrigation works, and nothing in the end will pay better financially.

Sir A. Mackenzie is employing the fund at his disposal in excavating tanks and repairing a large number of petty irrigation works once in working order.

It is much to be regretted that the Government of India have not yet given the necessary authority to construct the Meiktila-Myingyan Railway, for which sanction was recently solicited by the local Government. This is not the time to allow considerations of red tape to delay the commencement of necessary works.

Telegraphing again on Sept. 20 the correspondent says:—

The Viceroy will probably visit Rangoon about January 15, and will visit Mandalay, going by rail and returning by river.

The works for the relief of distress caused by the failure of the crops are being vigorously carried on. On the 18th the Chief Commissioner held a conference at Government House, which was attended by the Financial Commissioner, the Chief Engineer, the Comptroller, and the Director of Agriculture. The programme of relief works and agricultural advances was settled for the following districts, all of which have been more or less severely affected:—Meiktila, Yemethin, Myingyan, Mandalay, Minba, Magwe, Sagaing, Pocomo, Lower Chindwin, and Thayetmyo. The relief works sanctioned will cost about 6½ lacs. This amount will certainly have to be largely increased. Special agricultural advances to the extent of four lacs are also sanctioned. By reappropriation and savings under the different heads of the Budget a further sum of about four lacs will be made available for relief purposes. About 12,000 men are now employed on relief works in Meiktila, and the number is daily increasing. Employment for 7,000 men will be found on the earthworks on the Myingyan-Meiktila Railway line. The Government of India still delay their sanction to this work being immediately commenced. In December 3,000 labourers from the distressed districts will be employed on the river embankments in Lower Burma.

The scarcity of food supplies in Lower Burma is also engaging Sir A. Mackenzie's attention. Yesterday he held a meeting of the principal millers and rice merchants to ascertain the amount of available food stocks. The general opinion is that about 50,000 tons will be available, a portion of which will be shipped from Singapore.

Great excitement has been caused in the bazaar by an unfounded report that a Government official at Mandalay had fixed a price above which rice must not be sold, and the figure named was below that at which rice could now be purchased. The dealers immediately ceased sending rice to Upper Burma, and telegraphed to their agents not to sell. The existing distress in Mandalay would have been seriously aggravated but for the prompt steps taken by the local Government. Sir A. Mackenzie published an announcement that the Government would not interfere with the trade in rice, and ordered a notification of the fact to be made in Mandalay bazaar. It has also been arranged to publish in Calcutta the information possessed by the Government as to the present depleted condition of the rice market in Burma, with the object of attracting supplies.

The distress in Upper Burma will probably continue for the next six months in the affected districts. In other districts prospects are improving.

Mr. G. J. S. Hodgkinson, C.S.I., Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma, goes on furlough early next year. On the expiration of his furlough it is understood that he will retire from the service. Mr. G. D. Burgess, Commissioner in Mandalay, succeeds Mr. Hodgkinson. During his tenure of office Mr. Hodgkinson has done excellent work in Upper Burma.

The recent durbar at Bhamo (already briefly referred to by telegram) was attended by Burmans, Shans, and Kachins. Commenting on the absence of the Chinese community, Sir Alexander Mackenzie said that though duly invited and expected they had neither the good manners nor the good sense to attend. The state of things in the Kachin hills, he said, was already much better than it was a year or two back. There are still occasional raids by turbulent and lawless bodies of Kachins, but the certainty that every such outrage will in time be severely punished has gone far to render the attacks less frequent, and many chiefs who have hitherto held aloof have last season placed themselves in communication with our officers. He proceeded:—"I am quite determined that every Kachin tribe on this side of the Chinese border, and every Kachin village within the jurisdiction of Mogaung and Katha shall be made to keep the peace, to protect and not injure traders, to obey the district officer's orders, and behave in every way as orderly subjects of the Government. The sooner the Kachin chiefs realise that this is bound to be, the better will it be for them. I have no desire to tax them or their villages heavily, for I know that most of them are poor, but every chief and every Kachin household within our border will have to pay some small amount in token of their position as British subjects. This tribute will be settled next season in communication with the Tsawbwas. Columns strong enough to overcome all resistance will next season visit those parts of the hills that are still keeping aloof from our civil officers. Strong posts of military police will permanently occupy those posts which command the trade routes, and we intend that all caravans shall travel unmolested throughout our territory, and up to the Chinese frontier. Beyond that I have no doubt our friendly ally the Emperor of China will see that trade is duly protected, and I am glad to hear that the Chinese posts have, at our request, already occupied certain stations along the border."

The Chief Commissioner then went on to say that each Tsawbwa would be held responsible for the good conduct of his people. Quarrels must be settled by the district officers, not by raids. Tribal customs, dues, and the Tsawbwas' authority will not be interfered with. With regard to the Chinese community, Sir A. Mackenzie spoke very decisively:—"I must plainly tell the Chinese residents they would have little trouble from the district administration if they confined their attentions to legitimate trade. It is because there is constant and organised smuggling of opium, arms, and liquor from across the border that the Chinese community are harassed by domiciliary visits, and their caravans stopped for examination. I am just as determined to stop, if possible, this illicit trade as I am to stop Kachin raids. We mean to place our police posts where they will be able to check every caravan that comes in, and neither arms nor armed men will be allowed to percolate through or infest the north of Mogaung, as they have done during the past season."

CASHMERE.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Sept. 16:—The Resident's guard at Gilgit will be strengthened shortly by 200 Goorkhas. Several officers are also likely to be sent on service to Gilgit.

Telegraphing again on Sept. 20 the correspondent adds:—With reference to the recently sanctioned increase of the escort of the British Agent at Gilgit by 200 Goorkhas and two mountain guns, and the appointment of several British officers for duty in that country, it may be explained that this is merely carrying out the policy determined on after Colonel Lockhart's mission to Chitral in 1885. With a strengthened escort, and 2,000 Cashmere Imperial service troops, there will be sufficient garrison in Gilgit to keep down the turbulent Hunza and Naga tribes, and to secure the frontier in that quarter. It is understood that the telegraph will be extended thither next year. Two Lushai chiefs—Lienpuanza and Kalkhan, who were concerned in the murder of British officers a year ago, and had been prisoners for some months past—committed suicide by hanging themselves in Hazaribagh Gaol.

Dr. Stein, the Principal of the Punjab Oriental College, is continuing his archaeological researches in Cashmere. He has undertaken a tour of inspection of all the places mentioned in the Rajatarangini, which he has been zealously studying for the last four years, and the Pandits say that there exists another copy of the book more reliable than that which Dr. Stein possesses. The object of his research is to complete the annotations of the Rajatāran.

HYDERABAD.

THE Hyderabad correspondent of the Bombay Gazette telegraphed on Wednesday, Sept. 2:—Sir James Dormer, Commander-in-Chief of Madras, with his staff, which includes Major Grant, the Manipore hero, arrived here on Monday night. Yesterday afternoon his Excellency distributed the prizes won at the Annual Rifle Meeting, and in the evening the Resident gave a dinner party in his honour, at which the Nizam and the Minister were present. To-day there is a sham fight and parade of the troops of the Secunderabad Division, and a dance at the Bolarum Residency in the evening. To-morrow there will be a garden party at the Residency. On Friday morning Sir James Dormer visits the city and Golconda Fort, inspecting the Golconda Brigade under Major Afsur Jung, afterwards breakfasting with the Minister at Busheer Bagh. He dines with the 7th Hussars on Friday night, leaving on Saturday, so as to reach Ooty for his daughter's wedding.

THE QUESTION of an extension of railways in Hyderabad is now before the Government of India. The company that works the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway are anxious to build the line surveyed some years ago from Warangal to Warora, about 180 miles, which would open out the eastern part of the State, and give direct communication with the Central Provinces. This extension would, the Pioneer says, except for thirty miles, be entirely in the Nizam's territory. There is an old project for linking the Bengal-Nagpore and Hyderabad systems by a line from Warangal to Raj Nandgaon or Raipore, but the Hyderabad Company do not favour this, as only sixty miles would be within the boundaries of the State. If the Warangal-Warora scheme were sanctioned, the Wun coalfield would probably be opened out near the latter place.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

CHOLERA HAS ENTIRELY DISAPPEARED from the Karnal district and Lahore. There have been very few cases in the Rawul Pindi district. The European troops had been moved into the cholera camp owing to two fatal cases in the Lahore Fort.

A LAHORE CORRESPONDENT writes on Aug. 26:—The Warburton defamation case comes again before the Court on Sept. 5, having been postponed one day at the request of the defence, who propose to call two hundred witnesses. Sirdar Dyal Singh will have to attend on the date fixed.

THE PUNJAB GOVERNMENT has expressed concurrence in the revised scheme for the extension of the Simla waterworks submitted by the municipality. The question now is one of ways and means. The Local Government is willing, the Times of India believes, to grant a loan covering half the estimated expenditure. The Government of India presumably will have to come to the assistance of the municipality with a similar loan, as the extension is most urgently needed.

THE LAST ANNUAL RETURN of the number of persons for whom work is provided in the programme of famine relief works in the Punjab puts the total number at 45,857. This number is distributed between the districts of Hissar, Rohtak, Delhi, Gurgaon, Karnal, Umballa, Ferozepore, Lahore, and Hazara, which are the districts most liable to prolonged drought and famine. The works are chiefly roads, tanks, bunds, wells, and levelling of ravine.

A COUPLE of NATIVES have been detected in a novel attempt to defraud the East Indian Railway Company. On the arrival at Katni of the mail train from Jubbulpore, when the carriage examiner went beneath the train to gauge the wheels, two natives were found in an hammock-like contrivance slung to the bottom of an intermediate class carriage. They were taken into custody.

A PLUCKY CASE OF RESCUE is reported to have occurred in Anarkalli the other day, says the Lahore paper. It appears that a native attacked with cholera felt thirsty, and as his relatives refused to give him water, he ran out of the house and threw himself into a well. A constable who was standing close by jumped in after him and rescued him. The man was sent to the hospital, and is said to be doing well.

THERE IS SOME LIKELIHOOD, says the Lahore paper, of a reconciliation being brought about between his Highness the Raja of Faridkot and the heir-apparent, who is residing at Patiala as a guest of his Highness the Maharaja of Patiala. Rumour has it that his Highness the Nawab of Bhawalpore is playing the part of peace-maker between the father and son, and it is to be hoped that the efforts of his Highness will be successful. It is very satisfactory that a Mahomedan chief should thus intercede to make peace in the house of a neighbouring Hindoo chief.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

IN reference to the alleged fighting between Russian and Afghan troops on the frontier, the Daily News correspondent telegraphed on Sept. 16:—The confirmation of the news of serious encounters in the frontier districts of Afghanistan has now been received in diplomatic circles here. The encounters, which resulted in the Ameer's troops being defeated, took place in the locality of the Hindu Kush, to the north of Cabul. The opinion is held here that the fighting was the result of disputes about the frontier line in the Bokhara districts.

The St. James's Gazette of Sept. 17, however, said:—We understand that no information has reached the India Office which would in any way confirm the sensational rumours of a collision between Russian and Afghan troops. The only fighting that has taken place in Afghanistan for some time past has been between the Ameer's troops and his own subjects, the Hazaras. Possibly some report of hostilities in this direction has been distorted into a rumour of a fight with the Russians on the frontier. Another explanation is that the Cossack officer, Captain Gromchevsky, who is exploring on the Pamir, has again been stopped, as he was in 1889, by the Ameer's frontier guards.

A telegram from the Berlin correspondent of the Times on Sept. 18 said:—Nothing has been heard here in confirmation of the report of an encounter between Russians and Afghan troops on the Russo-Afghan frontier, and the news, which at first made a slight sensation on the Exchange, is not credited.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily News telegraphed yesterday:—Authentic information received here contradicts the report of encounters between Russian and Afghan troops. On the contrary, all is perfectly quiet on the Russo-Afghan frontier.

Reuter's correspondent at Bombay telegraphs:—The Russian expedition to the Pamir Plateau has retired from the Alichar Pamir valley to Allai.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times writes on Sept. 20:—The proposed reading of a short report from Prince Galitsin, the leader of the great Russian expedition in the Pamir, which will take place at the reopening of the autumnal sessions of the Imperial Geographical Society, is looked forward to here with very great interest. Prince Galitsin is a very highly-educated and wealthy landed proprietor, and a comparatively young man. He must not be confounded with the former Ataman of the Ural Cossacks of the same name. There are hundreds of Princes Galitsin in Russia, and the one now in question has not been otherwise known. Many ominous rumours have been spread in Europe about this expedition in the Pamir, and fears have been expressed that ill accord with the flippant contempt with which a Bombay journal, followed by some London contemporaries, treated the idea of Russia's desire to capture the "roof of the world." The British authorities seem to have been disturbed by the news of the expedition, which is all the more remarkable when it is known that an English official, who was also a friend of the Prince, accompanied the party into Central Asia when it started. However this may be, the sinister reports in the press which seem to have taken their rise from the fear caused by this expedition are not in any way confirmed in Russia.

A noteworthy article on the relations of Russia and Great Britain is published by the Novosti. It observes that the Empire of Russia is already too extensive for her to desire an addition to it by the conquest of India, and that if she should, nevertheless, undertake some enterprise at some future date against the British in Asia, it could only be as a retaliation for hostility shown by Great Britain to the Czar's Government in Europe. On the other hand, by renouncing an anti-Russian policy, Great Britain would have nothing to fear from Russia as regards India, and the Novosti therefore urges the British Government to enter into a definite agreement with Russia at the present moment, when this could be done under more favourable circumstances than might perhaps be available at a later conjuncture.

The Novoe Vremya mentions the rumour of a Russian capitalist intending to ask the Minister of Finance for a concession to cut a canal between the Caspian Sea and the Amu Darya. This, says the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times, is, of course, the old project of uniting the waters of the great Central Asian river with those of the Caspian through the arid waste now traversed by the Transcaspian Railway. A Russian capitalist is a rare apparition, and especially in connection with such a gigantic and risky undertaking as this. But this is the way in which the Russian Press keeps up the idea of the existence of a suppressed spirit of private enterprise among its countrymen.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says:—The Minister of War will this autumn lay before the Council of the Empire the long-talked-of project of constructing the branch railway line from Krasnovodsk to join the Transcaspian Railway at Molla Kari, and thus do away with the port of Oozoon Ada, the famous creation of General Annenkoff. The surveys and estimates are now all completed. General Annenkoff is no longer in any way officially connected with the celebrated railway to Samarcand, and has presumably ceased his indomitable opposition to the supersession of Oozoon Ada by Krasnovodsk.

The Russian Government will shortly commence the construction of the Siberian Railway at the Ural Mountains and the Amur river, the two extremities of the projected line. It is likewise proposed to extend the Transcaspian Railway to the frontiers of Persia and Afghanistan. The project is also attributed to the Government of extending the line from Samarcand to Tashkend, although this conjecture is regarded in well-informed circles as premature.

"If what I hear is true," says "Atlas" in the World, "(and my information comes from an unusually reliable source), the public attention is likely to be very soon diverted from Iquique to Ispahan, for a revolution is at the present moment slowly but surely brewing in Persia, and the breaking of the political storm is not likely to be long delayed. The revolutionary movement is national in its character; the priests and students are to a man in the camp of the Progressists, and the prevailing discontent is being industriously fanned by the paper called the Kanun, or 'Law,' which is printed in Europe and widely disseminated throughout every part of the Shah's dominions. The personal unpopularity of the Shah grows apace, and his sons are watching events with no small anxiety. His present youthful Grand Vizier is the child of a nurse, and Nasr-ed-Din is now anxious to make the obnoxious boy who figured so prominently in the pageants of 1889 Minister of War. The rising is likely to be general, and the 'Young Persia' Party is confident of achieving complete and signal success. The Shah's eldest son is a man of considerable ability, and his second son (who, on account of the royal birth of his mother, is the heir-apparent) is popular and amenable to reason."

The Persian Consul-General in Hamburg, on the other hand, has been authorised to deny all rumours of revolutionary movements in Persia. Both the Shah and the Grand Vizier, Eminah Sultan, are very popular, owing to the reforms they have effected.

The Russian Minister Extraordinary to the Persian Court, M. Butsoff, has received instructions to negotiate a new commercial treaty between his Government and Persia. The recent alteration of the Russian Customs tariff is said to be the cause of this new move. In reality, however, the Odessa correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says, M. Butsoff's efforts will be directed to the prohibition of English goods with Persian trade marks crossing the frontier of Persia into Russia. During last year over 1,000,000 roubles' worth of English cotton textures bearing Persian trade marks was exported from Persia to Russia.

A correspondent of the Daily News at Tabriz writes on Aug. 23:—The drama commenced by the abduction of Miss Kate Greenfield is closed. She has declared in a private meeting as well as in a general assembly that she loved Aziz, her captor, and is a Mussulman. This declaration, heard from her own lips in the presence of all interested, is decisive. The English and Persian Governments had agreed to abide by the girl's profession. If she said she was a convert to Islamism, she was to be given up to the Kurds; but if she adhered to her original faith, she was then to be restored to her mother. The result of the inquiry has proved adverse to her mother's expectation.

There is no appeal against Miss Greenfield's own declaration, be it feigned or sincere, and so she has been resigned to the Kurds.

According to transfrontier correspondents, the Khan of Lalpura, who is under the Ameer, is commencing hostilities against the Mohmands of Michni, because the latter declined to assist him in any expedition against Bajaur, on account of their vicinity to the British border. They dwell indeed under the guns of Fort Michni, and it seems to us, says an Indian contemporary, that the Ameer's henchman must be uncommonly near infringing upon our legitimate sphere of frontier influence. The real reason of the Mohmands refusing to assist the Khan with men is said to be some quarrel about khillats. When we last heard, the advance guard of the Khan's forces had already arrived in the Michni district.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

WE publish the following telegrams, which have been received since our last issue:—

SHANGHAI, Sept. 15.—The Customs have seized a large quantity of arms and ammunition intended for a secret society in Chinkiang. Some foreigners are implicated.—Times.

SINGAPORE, Sept. 15.—Ichang advices up to Sept. 4 report that the British Consulate and the Customs, being Chinese buildings, are intact. All European buildings are destroyed. The Chinese authorities with difficulty protected the French nuns. The apparent cause of the riot was a stolen child brought to the convent by an unknown person. The Customs officers are forming a military guard, and the troubles seem over.—Times.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 17.—The internal situation in China is assuming a very disquieting character, so much so that an outbreak of rebellion in the Valley of the Yangtsekiang is believed to be imminent. To add to the uneasiness of the Government, important seizures of arms and dynamite, consigned to various secret societies, have been made at Shanghai and Chinkiang respectively. The discovery, coupled with the prevalent rumours, has caused considerable excitement and alarm.—Standard.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The passive attitude of Russia in reference to the massacres of Christians in China arises, it is said, from the fact that Russia fears that if it were to take the initiative in action the Western Powers would leave it alone to run all the risks of the enterprise. But if any one of the Western Powers possessing a strong fleet were only actively to intervene in the matter the Czar would most likely follow suit and despatch one of the cruisers of his fleet in the Pacific as well as order the advance eastward of his troops stationed in Central Asia.—Times.

ROME, Sept. 20.—The Tribuna announces that England, Italy, Germany, and the United States have decided to make a naval demonstration in Chinese waters. It adds that the command-in-general of the combined fleet will be given to the Duke of Genoa. This, according to the same authority, will result in the non-intervention of France and Russia. In official circles it is stated that the visit of the Duke of Genoa to England is made for the purpose of obtaining a conference with the British Government on the subject of the demonstration.—Dalsiel.

The Times contends that with regard to the riots in China speedy and sharp measures are indispensable, or the whole of the maritime districts of the empire may be in flames. All classes of foreigners feel themselves equally in danger, though the missions alone are apparently menaced. The real fear is that the malcontents are manifestly assured of virtual impunity. The proclamation professing to be issued by the public community of the whole Wuhu breathes throughout defiance of legality, and a sense that there is a sovereign rabble prepared to act, not to reason. Its authors probably themselves have no sort of belief in the monstrous fables they publish against Roman Catholic and Protestant missionaries. Any stick does to beat a dog with. The spirit which declares war upon churches and missionaries will not be content unless all alien influences be expelled. The growing sense of the Imperial Government that the mass of lawlessness which has been hurled against Christian missions contains the germs of ruin to itself, unless it can be trampled down, constitutes some set-off from the painfulness of the present crisis. It cannot but perceive that a challenge is thrown down by the elements of disorder, which, with its own forces, it is incapable of accepting. The West would greatly prefer that the Emperor should himself insure its citizens the protection of his laws than that it should have itself to defend them. Its interest is that his throne should be strong instead of weak. But that it never will be until he borrows frankly the assistance of Western civilisation, and is as little suspicious of the telegraph and the steam-engine as he says he is of the genius of Christianity.

The Tientsin correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury writes:— "The German Catholic Bishop of Shantung has returned from Peking, and he brings with him a despatch from the Tsung-li-Yamen to his Excellency Chang Yao. The Bishop also has a despatch from his Excellency Li Hung-Chang. It is rumoured that when Li handed the Bishop the despatch, the Viceroy remarked that the late riots in the Yangtze were only forerunners of more serious riots that were expected to follow, and he hinted to the Bishop that he hoped he would be moderate in his demands when he got back to Shantung. The Bishop left to-day, and travels by the Grand Canal to Chi Nan Fu. It will be interesting to know how he gets on during his journey.

The recent riots have led to a good deal of discussion as to methods which might be adopted by members of the various missionary bodies to dispel the prejudices of the natives with regard to what goes on in the mission hospitals, schools, &c. In connection with this subject, some remarks by Mr. C. C. de Burgh Daly, M.B., surgeon of the Hao-meng-fong Hospital at Ningpo, in the annual report of that institution, are, the North China Daily News says, worth quoting. He writes:—"The popular belief all over China is that foreigners extract the eyes and other organs from the dead to make medicine of. Two years ago I myself was accused of this, and for months afterwards the report was prevalent over a large district that I had extracted the liver and other organs from a patient who died in hospital, and the post-mortem staining on the back was produced as proof of this. It was added that with miraculous medicine I had healed up the flesh, so as to leave no marks of an incision. As a means to lessen the danger of, and excuse for, anti-foreign riots, I would suggest that all foreign missionaries, especially those in charge of schools and foundling institutions, and all foreign doctors in charge of hospitals in China, should, through their ministers or consuls, adopt some scheme enabling properly-appointed Chinese officials to inspect all such institutions. I know the C.M.S. and other Protestant missions here would gladly open their schools, &c., for such inspection, and I should think that such a scheme would be welcomed all over China. It would, I believe, help on mission work, and be one more blow to the deep-rooted prejudices of the natives against foreigners."

At a late meeting of the Legislative Council of Hong Kong a member gave some figures with regard to the salaries of the officers of the Public Works Department and the work done—figures which appear at first sight to prove that the capacity for work of the department has decreased as the staff has increased. But, says Indian Engineering, figures are very dangerous things to handle. Unless great care is exercised in duly noting all the circumstances of a case they may be made to prove the reverse of the truth. The Councillor drew from his figures the conclusion that the actual amount of work done by the department varies directly as the amount of money expended. To a certain extent the inference is correct, but it requires a great deal of qualification. The important proviso, other things being equal, must be made to render the comparison of any value.

An old China hand, Captain Peters, who was recently in command of the Sin Nanning, has left Shanghai in the Gleneagles for home. He went out to Hong Kong in 1859, but was trading to the Australian Colonies in 1844, his first command being a vessel of 400 tons in 1855. He commanded the Palmerston and Portland on the China coast many years ago, and in 1865 took back to Taku 1,200 Chinese soldiers who had surrendered at Taku on the capture of the forts. These soldiers were rowdies, and on board the vessel had no respect for their mandarins and took the allowance of drinking water from the crew. Captain Peters was equal to the occasion, and arming himself with a knuckle-duster, and his crew with sticks, he went to the fresh-water pump. The soldiers thought they could repeat their conduct, but Captain Peters pushed away the first man, who thereupon called upon his comrades to mob the captain, who was standing alone on the deck. At a given signal, however, the crew rushed out, and in seven minutes, all the soldiers, except those who were lying on the deck, were below and the ladders hauled up, so that they remained prisoners till the end of the voyage. Many years ago, Captain Peters rescued a ship's crew and received a diploma from the Board of Trade in consideration of his services.

The report of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, presented at the half-yearly meeting held in Hong Kong on Aug. 22, stated that the net profits, including 120,377 dols. brought forward, after paying all charges, deducting interest paid and due, and making provision for bad and doubtful accounts (except those referred to below), amounted to 1,027,646 dols. They regretted to have to recommend the withdrawal of 1,290,901 dols. from the reserve fund to credit of profit account. This sum was required to make up a total of 1,470,000 dols. to be placed to contingent account, in order to provide fully for bad and doubtful accounts sustained through the many failures and the depression of trade during the half-year. After making these transfers, and deducting remuneration to directors, there remains for appropriation 838,547 dols., of which the directors recommended a dividend of 1*l.* 10*s.* per share on the old shares, and 1*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* per share on the new shares, which at 4*s.* 6*d.* would absorb 516,666 dols. The difference in exchange between 4*s.* 6*d.*, the rate at which the dividend was declared, and 3*s.* 2*d.*, the current rate of the day, amounted to 208,008 dols. The balance, 113,872 dols., was carried over. The increase of the bank's capital had been successfully completed, and it now stands at 10,000,000 dols. The calls have been fully paid up, and the net premium on the new shares, amounting to 2,490,901 dols., has been placed to the reserve fund, which stands at 6,300,000 dols.

Following the extensive improvements made in the Japanese navy, and the building of many new cruisers, Japan is now turning her attention to the army, and Viscount Takashima, the Minister of War, has demanded an increase in the next year's budget for his department. The amount asked for is 4,000,000 yen (dollars) over the budget of the current year, part of which sum will be devoted to the improvement of coast defences. The Minister stated that he made the demand on the ground that implicit faith ought not to be placed in the appearance of security, which might be only the calm before the storm. The 4,000,000 yen demanded will be divided into two sums—2,000,000 yen for constructing fortifications at the chief points of defence in Japan, and the remaining 2,000,000 yen for strengthening and defending other places, the manufacture of repeating rifles, gun-cotton, and other necessities, and for military manœuvres. The Japanese navy now consists of about thirty vessels, some of which are old and on the eve of being condemned.

A curious return has been published in Japan by the Finance Department. It contains a summary of the expenditure incurred by the State in connection with the recent attack on the Czarevitch. The total is 24,412 dols. 35*s.* 4 cents, or, roughly, nearly 5,000*l.* It is distributed, in round figures, in this way:—Foreign Office, 9,811 dols.; Home Office, 7,000 dols.; the Legations abroad, 4,252 dols.; the Cabinet, 1,775 dols.; and the local prefectures, 1,571 dols.

The Japan Gazette, commenting on the Sunday Labour petition, says:—We certainly agree with the complaint against the unfair way in which the Legislative Council appears to have gained its point, and there are good grounds for the remonstrance of the petitioners; but we cannot think that Hong Kong or any other port would suffer in any way by observing an institution which is supported by all the arguments of hygienic science and common sense. We cannot help thinking that were the signers in the places of the persons who they consider are safest loading and unloading cargo they might think differently; but we see from the list of names published they are, with few exceptions, men whose duties, if not ending at twelve or two on Saturday, do not call them to forego either devotion, pleasure, or rest on Sundays, and it is surely a very regrettable sign of the deteriorating influence of their surroundings to find Englishmen—which the body of them are—deliberately petitioning their Government to discountenance an institution which has proverbially followed the English flag wherever it has flown. We may draw our countrymen's attention to Japan; to her closed Custom House—only open for Sunday labour under exceptional circumstances—Government offices, schools, and public institutions, showing her appreciation of the benefits accruing to an abstinence from labour. We do not by any means uphold ourselves in Yokohama as a pattern of all that is desirable as a Sunday-observing community, but we do at least put up the shutters and give our employes their full liberty for the day, and we think there are few in the settlement who begrudge the short respite from the excitement or worry of "filthy lucre," or who would tell us that they suffer in pocket through a day which the richest and busiest cities of the world have found it to their profit and their honour, through all the race and bustle of this competitive age, to maintain as a Day of Rest.

According to Japanese vernacular journals, leprosy has spread in the Japanese villages to an alarming extent during the past few years. In one village near Ibimachi, in the Gifu Ken province, every inhabitant is a leper. From time immemorial, it is said, the villagers have intermarried entirely among themselves, and now there is not a person in the settlement, man, woman, or child, who is not afflicted. In Yokohama, Kobe, and Nagasaki leper mendicants, it is stated, are becoming more and more numerous, while the Leper Hospital at Tokio is never without patients. The Japanese Government is being moved to look after these afflicted people, who get their living now either by mendicancy or such light agricultural labour as their condition permits. In one of the leper villages the chief industry is said to be toy-making, which suggests reflections the reverse of pleasant.

Corea, like the world of the ancient, has its "seven wonders." Briefly stated in the North China Herald, they are as follows:—First, a hot mineral spring near Kin-Shantao, the healing properties of which are believed by the people to be miraculous. No matter what disease may afflict the patient a dip in the water proves efficacious. The second wonder is two springs situated at a considerable distance from each other; in fact, they have the breadth of the entire peninsula between them. They have two peculiarities. When one is full the other is always empty, and notwithstanding the obvious fact that they are connected by a subterranean passage, one is of the bitterest and the other pure and sweet. The third wonder is a cold wave cave, a cavern from which a wintry wind perpetually blows. The force of the wind from the cave is such that a strong man cannot stand before it. A forest that cannot be eradicated is the fourth wonder. No matter what injury is done to the roots of the trees, which are large pines, they will sprout up again directly, like the phoenix from her ashes. The fifth is the most wonderful of all. It is the famous "floating stone." It stands, or seems to stand, in front of the palace erected in its honour. It is an irregular cube of great bulk. It appears to be resting on the ground free from supports on all sides; but, strange to say, two men at opposite ends of a rope may pass it under the stone without encountering any obstacle whatever. The sixth wonder is the "hot stone," which from remote ages has lain glowing with heat on the top of a high hill. The seventh and last Korean wonder is a drop of the sweat of Buddha. For thirty paces around the large temple in which it is enshrined not a blade of grass will grow. There are no trees or flowers inside the sacred square. Even the animals decline to profane a spot so holy.

We take the following items from the Singapore Free Press of Aug. 25:—

Sir Frederick Dickson goes home on three months' vacation leave, which may be possibly extended.

Lady Clementi Smith, with Miss Smith, who is happily now greatly recovered from her recent severe illness, will proceed per P. and O. steamship Peninsular to Penang en route for Taiping, where they will make a short stay.

Sir Charles Warren has been installed District Grand Master of Freemasonry in the Eastern Archipelago.

Mr. Presgrave, Municipal Secretary, has left for home on twelve months' leave, his work being undertaken by Mr. Polglase.

A banquet has been given at Sambas to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Sultan's accession, European officials being invited to participate in the festive proceedings.

A conference to take into consideration the existing telegraphic rates in Penang, and the advisability of cheapening the same wherever practicable, on the lines of the sixpenny telegraph system in England, which has proved so advantageous, is being held. Captain M. A. Cameron, R.E., presides, and Mr. D. W. Gott, Superintendent of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Co., Mr. A. S. Baxendale, Superintendent of Posts and Telegraphs, Selangor, and Mr. T. F. Toft, Superintendent of Posts and Telegraphs, Perak, participate in the discussion.

According to intelligence received at Cape Town, smallpox is raging at Mauritius, and it is stated that all the hospitals are full. Cholera has also made its appearance in the port on board a coolie ship, and one death is reported.

FACTORY LEGISLATION FOR INDIA.

THE Times, in reference to the correspondence which has been taking place in its columns on this subject, says:—

The subject of factory legislation for India, which was recently brought before the House of Commons by Mr. Provand, and afterwards before the Congress of Hygiene and Demography by Mr. Holt Hallett, whose former efforts in the same direction are well known, appears to excite, both in this country and in India itself, differences of opinion which can only be described as irreconcilable, and which have lately found energetic expression in our columns. A letter from a gentleman whom it is difficult to regard as other than a competent authority, Dr. Bahadurji, of Bombay, so far as its statements can be accepted as trustworthy, seems almost to dispose of Mr. Holt Hallett's chief contentions. Dr. Bahadurji was selected by the Government of Bombay to represent it officially at the Congress; and when, at the eleventh hour, the Government decided not to send representatives, Dr. Bahadurji, whose arrangements for the visit to this country had been made, determined that he would nevertheless come in his private capacity, or as the representative of certain scientific societies of the city in which he resides. In these circumstances he was appealed to by Bombay mill-owners to inspect their factories, to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the conditions of labour and with the state of the operatives, and thus to qualify himself to take part in any discussions on the factory question which might arise. He accepted the invitation, and now claims to speak upon the questions at issue with full knowledge of the facts, as well as with the additional authority conferred by his professional position and experience. Dr. Bahadurji agrees with another correspondent, "An Indian Mill Manager," in the general assertion that the conditions of factory work in Bombay are not unduly arduous, and that they are far better than those of the alternative industries, to which, in default of such work, the operatives would be compelled to resort. His testimony is objected to by the supporters of more stringent legislation, on the ground that he is, in truth, the representative or advocate of the mill-owning interest, and desirous, in that capacity, of putting the existing state of things in the most favourable light before the public. The question thus raised seems to be insoluble, except by the aid of such local knowledge as the Government of India should be able to command; and its final decision should therefore rest with the Indian authorities, rather than with either the Home Government or the imperial Parliament.

Dr. Bahadurji makes a strong point of the incredible character of many of the assertions which have been made in the interests of protective legislation. He quotes from Mr. Holt Hallett the statement that, in some of the ginning factories, the women work for twenty-three-and-a-half hours at a stretch, day after day, and says that this can only be true, if at all, of factories and workers in the moon. The statement does, indeed, appear to be incredible, but it is confirmed by the report of the Bombay Factory Commission of 1884, a document which is appealed to by both parties to the present controversy. That Commission is described as "a thoroughly representative one," and it comprised persons nominated by the Chamber of Commerce as well as by the Governor in Council. With reference to the ginning factories, which are mostly comparatively small places, liable to sudden demands for increased labour, the Commission quotes with approval the evidence of Mr. Rastamji Framji Wadia, the manager of a press and ginning factory at Khandesh, and states that it is corroborated "in every detail" by three other competent witnesses. Mr. Wadia said that in the busy times, in March and April, the same set of hands worked both night and day, with half an hour's rest in the evening. He said that this might be continued for about eight days; and that, when it was impossible to go on any longer, other sets of hands were procured from Bombay if they could be found. In one of his factories he had forty gins, with forty women attending them, and only eight spare women. He never allowed these women off the gins, and he was not alone in this respect; it was the general system. There was no change of hands except at meal times. In these factories children were not employed, because the rate of wages for adults was so low that no advantage would accrue from the introduction of juvenile labour. Mr. Wadia concluded his evidence by saying, "When we see that the hands (women) are absolutely tired out we are obliged to get others from Bombay. The hands who work these long hours frequently die." It is, perhaps, not unreasonable to hope that this evidence, if we must assume that it is trustworthy for a small number of ginning factories, would yet be either wholly untrue or greatly exaggerated with regard to the factory work of the Bombay Presidency in general; although, by Mr. Holt Hallett and others, it has been quoted as a fair description of the conditions, for the abatement of which they appeal to public opinion to bring about changes in the law. On the question of the working of small children, concerning which again Dr. Bahadurji treats the assertions of Mr. Holt Hallett as too incredible to need refutation, the report of the Commission may be appealed to. It cites the evidence of Mr. Drewet, "consulting engineer," who has had much practical experience of ginning work, and who said: "The season lasts about eight months, about five of which the hands work from 5 A.M. to 10 P.M., and the remaining three months they work day and night. The hands are mostly women." Gins and presses never stopped for meals; as a rule, the hands took their meals at the gins, and Mr. Drewet has often seen them taking their food and supplying the gins at the same time. He has often seen them thus supplying the gins mechanically when three parts asleep, "and a child at the breast sucking one minute and throwing cotton into the machine the next." This hardly carries more meaning than to say that a female mill-hand cannot leave her work even to suckle her child, and that the child itself, being suckled up to a later age than can be desirable either for itself or its parent, will sometimes imitate the act of the mother, in feeding the gin on which she is in attendance. The idea of an infant being engaged in work is rightly condemned by Dr. Bahadurji as preposterous; and we have already quoted the statement of Mr. Wadia to the effect that it would not be profitable to employ children in ginning, and that, as a matter of fact, they are not employed.

When we come to consider the remaining allegations on either side of the controversy, the difficulty of distinguishing between fact and fiction is only intensified. Dr. Bahadurji intimates that the factory operatives of Bombay—whether males, females, or children—are engaged in an easy and healthy occupation, in which the shifts of work are so divided among members of a family or similar groups that no one is unduly taxed by continuous labour. He says that the hours are a necessary consequence of the way in which the natives set about their work, and that with them long hours and slow labour are equivalent to the shorter time and more rapid pace of the European. He indicates a system of substitution, under which the supposed presence of a given woman in the mill means only that if she is not there somebody else is there in her place. In the case of children, he tells us that if not in the mill they would be idling and picking up evil in the bazaars, there being no compulsory education to fill up their vacant time. In the interests of these children themselves, physical as well as moral, he deprecates any further interference with their hours of work; and tells us that even the shadows of the Indian Factory Act have "chased away the children from the mills into the streets, and have retransformed them into their original nude, skinny skeletons." Moreover, and this is perhaps the most important of his assertions, he tells us that factory work is undertaken for short periods by people whose ordinary employment is in agriculture, and that their earnings in their secondary occupation are sufficient materially to improve their homes, and to add to the comforts of their lives. To whatever extent this may be the case, it is certain that it must remove from the factory work most of the ill consequences, on the score of bodily health, which have from time to time been attributed to its influence. It is difficult to resist the impression that Mr. Holt Hallett has overstated his case, by selecting chance incidents, and by holding them forth as ordinary occurrences. It is equally difficult to read Dr. Bahadurji's description of "the present well-fed, well-clad, and healthy women of the Indian mills, with bright ornaments on their persons," without a suspicion that he, however unconsciously, is making the best of the truth, and is presenting a picture the precise accuracy of which may be doubted. It must not be forgotten that the first promoters of factory legislation in England were met by the assertion that everything was for the best in this best of all possible worlds. It must be regarded as fortunate that we, in this country, are not at present called upon to decide between the conflicting views which are presented to us. The new Factory Act, which will come into operation in India on Jan. 1, will before long permit both its supporters and its opponents to appeal to experience of its effects; and the Governor-General in Council ought not to find it difficult to ascertain the truth, and may perhaps even see Mr. Holt Hallett and Dr. Bahadurji agree in the recommendation of some middle course, in which due regard to the health and safety of the workers may be combined with provisions calculated to meet the special circumstances of Indian industry.

Messrs. Macmillan and Co. have issued a new three-and-sixpenny edition of Ralph Boldrewood's now famous Australian novel Robbery Under Arms, one of the most exciting, interesting, and clever stories which any colonist has as yet contributed to our literature. Indeed, in these four hundred closely-written pages, there is not one which the most blasé novel-reader will care to skip. The book is published uniformly with other series we have noticed favourably.

THE INDIAN TROOPING SEASON.

REFERRING to the commencement of the trooping season, the Englishman says:—The tendency is to send out the reliefs too early in the season. They arrive about the end of September, and after a not too pleasant stay at Deolali are sent on to some of the most trying parts of India at what is often the most trying time of the year. The result, too often, is disastrous. Every year a large number of promising young soldiers are sacrificed in this way. At one time the notion prevailed that the solution of the difficulty was the adoption of a system by which the drafts would be sent instantly on arrival from England to the Hills; there spend a preparatory period of a year or so before being subjected to the strain of life in the plains. But several obstacles stood in the way of this seemingly humane proposal. In the first place, the men would have to be conveyed across the whole Northern plain of India before the Hills could be reached, and to young men fresh from England such an experience in the hot season would be a very serious matter. Secondly, strange as it may seem, no place has yet been found in the Himalayan range which would suit the requirements of a large military depot. High hopes were at one time entertained of the chor near Simla, but, apart from the enormous cost of the scheme, it was found that even there the available accommodation was circumscribed, and that there were difficulties in connection with the water and other matters. Even supposing, however, that a suitable and convenient depot were found, there is yet a third obstacle to be faced. Life in the hills is not essentially and invariably healthy; on the contrary, it is subject to a long train of ailments which are incidental to the climatic and other local conditions. Unfortunately, these ailments are precisely those to which the young recruit is most susceptible, so that to convey him to the hills on his arrival would in all probability be to alter the present conditions of his existence from bad to worse. As a cheap and practical alternative, it might be advisable to delay the recruiting season for a month or so, and thus land the drafts in India at a time of the year when the climate is almost perfect. Starting with good health and spirits, and with the confidence induced by four months of splendid weather, the recruit would pass gradually into his first hot season under more hopeful conditions than in the past, and the results, we venture to say, would be a saving of life and treasure on a scale quite worthy of the Government's attention.

LONDON: MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1891.

CHINA AND THE POWERS.

AFFAIRS in China have at last reached a crisis. Even if no other information were available, we might safely infer as much from a leading article on the riots in last Friday's Times. The agitation which prevails throughout the Chinese empire has a more serious import, the Times points out, for English statesmen than anything that has happened of late in Europe. Their eyes, in fact, are turned not towards the Dardanelles or the Danube, but to the Yangtse Kiang. Nor is their attitude merely one of expectancy. With a view, we are told, to the likelihood of further attacks on foreigners, and provoked beyond bearing by the neglect of the Imperial Government at Peking to punish the instigators of outrages already committed, Europe and America, by which we may understand England and Germany—if not France and Russia—and the United States, have at length determined to take action on their own account. "Speedy and sharp measures are indispensable." At the same time, the Western Powers are quite alive to the risk that their interference may precipitate a revolution, in which the Manchus might entirely lose their hold on the country. This cannot be helped. The Peking Emperor is the Sick Man of the Far East, and his only chance of recovery will lie in his willingness, or rather in the willingness of his advisers, to accept the intervention of outer barbarians. It would have been still better, the Times might have added, both in the interests of the Manchu rulers and of foreigners as well, had the imperative necessity for speedy and sharp measures been recognised by the Western Powers somewhat earlier in the day. Each has been waiting for the others to begin with far more patience than was justified by the circumstances.

If we can believe even half the rumours that find their way into the English newspapers in China, the expulsion of the Manchus from the Middle Kingdom is extremely likely to be the sequel of the present discontent. It only needs a leader of ability to organise and direct a revolutionary movement. Perhaps LI-HUNG-CHANG will be the coming man. He has an army of Chinese soldiers under his command, equipped with foreign weapons and drilled by European officers. MR. SPENCER PERCIVAL, in "The Land of the Dragon," anticipates that in the event of a successful rebellion against the reigning dynasty, some descendant of the Mings would be restored to the throne ; in which case the VICEROY LI would have to be satisfied with the position of king-maker. It appears tolerably certain, however, that he is waiting for a chance, even if he has not as yet actually encouraged the malcontents in the provinces on the Yangtse. The Times, we see, is of opinion that LI-HUNG-CHANG has a good deal to do with the recent riots, and that these riots in turn were part of a wide-spread conspiracy against Tartar rule.

But whatever may be the exact position of parties in China, and the precise line which ambitious Chinamen may take, it is beyond doubt that the Imperial Government has to deal with wide-spread internal disorder. At the same time it has to reckon with the justly incensed foreigner. Not too soon three powerful nations, if not more, have resolved that the lives and property of foreigners permitted by treaty to reside in China must be adequately protected ; and we shall look with interest to see how this resolution will be carried into execution, and what influence it will have on the stability of the régime now in power. If the supporters of the Imperial house accept the inevitable, we may do them a signal service by helping them once more to suppress an internal revolt. If they prefer a policy of obstruction, or try to play off rebels against intruders, they must take the consequences. Russia, on the borders of Manchuria to the north and of Kashgar to the west, is eagerly watching for an opportunity to extend her territory ; while, to the south, France also has an old score to pay off. Chinamen themselves say that the Russians will some day take Mongolia, and the French Sze-chuen, the richest province of the Empire. English travellers have likewise expressed their conviction that Russia will devour China piece-meal. It is this prospect, indeed, that makes the situation so complicated. It is to the interest of Great Britain that China should be strong enough to resist her neighbours on the north and west. On the other hand, it is our duty as a civilised nation to enforce the observance of treaties and to protect our subjects. In carrying out this duty we may unwillingly play into the hands of Russia.

THE Times correspondent at Calcutta says that "the controversy between LORD WENLOCK and MR. CAINE" has been attracting much attention, and that the Madras Press has "supported the Governor." LORD WENLOCK need not have shown any susceptibility in the matter. MR. CAINE, as we have had occasion to observe, is neither a correct thinker nor an accurate reporter, and the class of people likely to be influenced by his opinions are not those to whom any Indian official need pay an anxious regard. It is time enough to notice MR. CAINE when the respectable journals begin to discuss any of his lucubrations.

THE Trades Union Congress had wasted so much time over the discussion of theoretic questions and points of order or organisation, that, on the last day a long list of topics, more or less pressing, had to be remitted to the charge of the Parliamentary Committee. Hence the draft resolution on the Indian Factory Question was not discussed. The Lancashire operatives, however, will take care that it is brought prominently before the Parliamentary Committee, and as Lancashire disagrees with the Socialistic wing of the Labour Party on the Eight-Hours Question, it is not unlikely that there will be a disposition to appease the cotton operatives by assisting them in the agitation for further legislation in India. A judicial summary of the discussion between MR. HOLT HALLETT and his critics appears in the Times, which will interest the Indian mill-owners, but they will see from the manner in which the subject is handled that they are only at the beginning of the controversy, and that there is not much enthusiasm in the defence of their position.

A CORRESPONDENT at St. Sebastian sends the Standard an interesting note on M. CAMBON, the new French Ambassador to the Porte, who has just paid a visit to the Spanish watering-place in order to present his letters of recall from his post at Madrid. M. CAMBON was the first French Viceroy in Tunis; as Préfet at Lille he carried out the FERRY decrees against the Jesuits and other religious orders who were expelled from France. At Madrid he was socially and diplomatically a great success. His age is forty-eight, and he is described as cold and reserved in his manners, slightly affected in speaking, but gifted with great conversational powers. He is painstaking, hard-working, fond of mastering and grappling with questions, has quick powers of assimilating information, and likes to investigate matters personally. He is at once wary and adroit, and his career as Préfet proved him to be a man of energy as well as of ability. Evidently his selection for the post at Constantinople is due to a belief on the part of his Government that his qualities will be required at what has more than ever become one of the most important centres of international interest, and where, before long, he will probably find an opportunity of gaining distinction at least with his own countrymen.

The paragraph which we copied from a Madras paper in our issue of Sept. 8, under the head of "Military," p. 1127, relating to Major Jas. R. Hobday was inaccurate. It stated that he had been recalled and ordered to proceed to Mandalay to attend a Court-Martial in relation to the Card Scandal case. On p. 1129, however, on the authority of an Indian paper, it was stated that a general Court-Martial on the officer concerned was to be held in Madras. As a fact Major Hobday is now in England, and we are informed that he has not been asked to give evidence before any Court of Inquiry, or been recalled; nor has he received any official intimation or orders on the subject.

In reference to this matter, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed yesterday:—

"It has been finally decided that the general court-martial on Lieutenant Lowry, of the 8th Madras Infantry, on a charge of alleged cheating at cards, will be held at Rangoon instead of at Madras. It is understood that the change of venue has been made at the request of the accused officer."

Prince Christian Victor, of Schleswig-Holstein, whose leave has expired, left the Victoria Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway on Sept. 18, by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's Brindisi express, on his return to India.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

THE Englishman says:—The Gazette of India contained an announcement the other day which is of wide interest to a large number of people. It informs us that on August 1, 1892, an examination will be held for the Civil Service of India, and that no fewer than thirty-two persons will be selected if so many shall be found duly qualified, and that no person will be competent to compete who is not a natural born subject of her Majesty, and whose age is not above twenty-one years and under twenty-three years on April 1, 1892. It is the irony of destiny that a Secretary of State belonging to the Ministry of Lord Salisbury should increase the limit of age, as it was Lord Salisbury, when he was Secretary of State for India, who, contrary to the opinion of the Indian Government, Lord Northbrook, and the Master of Balliol, reduced the maximum limit of age from twenty-one to nineteen, and made the minimum twenty-one. The object was to check cram, but the result of the change was not to destroy cram, but to introduce it among boys of fifteen or sixteen whose ordinary school education was sacrificed to preparation for the Civil Service. The strain of overstudy at an early age injured their health, and lads came to India with a ruined constitution and soon broke down. The result of the change was to preclude public school men and University men from competing—the two classes from which it is most desirable to recruit our public servants. The famous committee, over which Macaulay presided, that was appointed to frame a scheme for opening the Indian Civil Service to competition, declared that "we think it desirable that a considerable number of the Civil servants of the Company should be men who have taken their first degrees in Arts at Oxford and Cambridge." The majority of men who first came out were men who had reached the age of two-and-twenty or three-and-twenty, and had taken honour degrees at one of the Universities. Their brilliant careers justified the recommendation of Lord Macaulay's committee. Lord Salisbury, in order that India should not entirely lose touch of the ancient Universities, encouraged the men who had passed by pecuniary rewards to go to them during their two probationary years. But a young man who went to the University, after he had passed the competitive examination, reaped but little advantage from the intellectual life of the place. There was no stimulus for him to engage in the University curriculum of studies, for he had already won his position in life. It is true that he had to work for certain professional examinations, but they were held outside of the University. There is a vast gulf between a man who has spent only a few terms at the University and gained some of its social advantages and a man who has received a University training. The University course is considered the best training for all the learned professions and for a public career in England, and the success of the University men who have joined the Civil Service proved that it is a good training for India. It is to be hoped that now the limit of age is increased University men will, in spite of the depreciated value of the rupee, be again attracted to the Indian Civil Service. The change in the maximum of the limit of age is also a considerable boon to our Indian graduates. An Indian takes his Bachelor of Arts degree about the age of twenty-one, and then he will be able to spend two years in England preparing for the competitive examination.

Not only has the maximum of age been increased, but a new curriculum of studies has been framed which is most favourable to University men at home and to the graduates of our Indian Universities. The Regulations, we are informed, have been framed with a view to the principle regarded by Lord Macaulay's Committee in 1854 as essential—viz., that the object of the competition should be to secure for the Indian Civil Service officers who "have received the best, the most liberal, the most finished education that their country affords." The scheme of examination has accordingly been made to embrace most of the subjects of the Honour Schools in the Universities of Great Britain and Ireland, and it might be added in India. We are further informed that "in administering the scheme the Civil Service Commissioners, concurring with Lord Macaulay's Committee in the opinion that no candidate who may fail should, to whatever calling he may betake himself, have any reason to regret the time and labour which he has spent in preparing himself to be examined, desire to avoid all disturbance of the general course of University studies, and to render it possible with due regard for the principle of open competition, for those who have graduated with honours at the Universities, to attend the examinations for the Indian Civil Service with good prospects of success." As much misery is caused in many native homes by students who have not the slightest chance of being successful rushing to England to compete for the Civil Service, Indian parents ought to take to heart the following remark of the Commissioners:—"The examiners will be instructed to keep the standard in each subject up to the level of the highest course of study pursued in the Universities." The syllabus of the examination printed in the Gazette shows that not only the Public School man and the University man, but even those who have had a sound modern education will have a fair chance of success. The Public School man will have the advantage of taking as his subjects Greek Language and Literature and Latin Language and Literature, to each of which is assigned 750 marks. The man who has studied for the Mathematical Tripos would hope to win a place by his knowledge of Mathematics (Pure and Applied), Advanced Mathematics (Pure and Applied), each of which is worth 900 marks. The student who has passed his days on the modern side of a great school would select for his subjects—French Language and Literature, German Language and Literature, English Language and Literature, English Composition, to each of which is assigned 400 marks, and English History, which carries 500 marks. The student studying for the History Tripos would also choose as his subject English History and General Modern History (period to be selected by candidates from list in the syllabus issued by the Commissioners, one period at least to include Indian History), each carrying 500 marks, Greek History and Roman History each worth 400 marks. He would also, in all probability, take Political Economy, worth 400 marks, as one of his subjects. The classical student would supplement his languages with Logic and Mental Philosophy, Moral Philosophy, each worth 400 marks. The student studying for the Law Tripos would select Roman Law, English Law, Political Science (including Analytical Jurisprudence, the Early History of Institutions and Theory of Legislation) each worth 500 marks. The graduate of an Indian University has the choice between Sanscrit or Arabic (500 marks), and he has also the advantage over the public school man of being taught from his earliest years English History, English Literature, and English Composition. The Civil Commissioners are to be congratulated on having drawn up a curriculum which will give all men, who know thoroughly any branch of knowledge, a fair chance of success.

Selected candidates will, under the new rules, be on probation only for one year, and at the end of that time will be examined in the following compulsory subjects:—Indian Penal Code and Criminal Procedure Code 1882, the Principal Vernacular Language of the province to which the candidate is assigned, and the History of British India. As optional subjects he may take two from the following:—The Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and the Indian Law of Contract, 1872, Hindoo and Mahomedan Law, Sanscrit, Arabic, Persian and Political Economy. He must not, however, choose any subject in which he had been examined in the competitive examination. As the limit of age has been raised to twenty-three it would be better to send the men out straight to India. In the year 1857 twelve members of the Civil Service were sent straight out to this country without going through the probationary course. They did not prove less successful or less useful servants than others who did. As for the vernaculars, no man can possibly have any real knowledge of them until he has resided in India. The Indian Codes can also be best learnt when a man is studying for his first departmental examination. The smattering of Sanscrit and Persian which a man could acquire in a year would not be of much value to him in his Indian career. It is to be hoped that the Supreme Government will move the Secretary of State regarding this matter, and will persuade him to send out the men as soon as they have passed the competitive examination.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, August 31.

THE Bank of Bengal minimum was unchanged at 2 per cent. at the meeting of the directors held on Aug. 27.

The following are the figures of the Bank's statement for the week ending Aug. 24 :—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 84,82,094	Decrease	18,71,316
Do. at Branches.....	1,32,01,185	Decrease	6,13,450
Other Deposits	7,35,77,522	Decrease	20,65,000
Post Bills	5,47,006	Decrease	75,868

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	2,05,51,795	Increase	1,55,771
Loans.....	74,80,218	Decrease	4,72,196
Accounts of Credits.....	53,61,493	Decrease	4,52,636
Mercantile Bills	1,47,24,942	Decrease	11,24,235
Cash at Head Office.....	4,26,94,406	Decrease	13,65,636
Do. at Branches	2,74,41,630	Decrease	13,13,145

The analysis of the above figures shows an increase of over $\frac{1}{2}$ of a lac in public demand, made up as follows :—By a decrease of over 20½ lacs in "Other Deposits," and $\frac{3}{4}$ of a lac in "Post Bills," minus a decrease of about 4½ lacs in "Loans" and over 4½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits," and 11½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills." The Treasury balance stands diminished by nearly 18½ lacs at head office and 6½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were increased by over 1½ lacs. The final result of these changes is a falling off of over 13½ lacs in the cash at head office and 13½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 7,01,36,037 rs., equal to 70 per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 70¼ per cent. last week.

STERLING EXCHANGE.—Cash on demand, 1-5 7-32; credits, 1-5 9-16 for near delivery. Very little business reported.

TEA.—At the sales held on Aug. 27 about 15,000 chests were offered and sold. Fine grades again were in demand and sold at good prices, all other descriptions were a shade lower. Pekoes showed some considerable decline owing to a reported fall on this class in London.

JUTE.—The market remains in the same unsatisfactory state, advancing daily in Calcutta and up-country, owing to short supplies, poor quality and falling rivers, while the home buyers show no disposition to follow the upward movement. The small shipments for August may have some effect, although buyers may argue that these simply denote a late crop, meanwhile shippers are idle, balers wanting 29 rs. for good marks, while the equivalent of 28 rs. is barely obtainable at home.

GUNNIES.—Prices show a further rise, though the volume of business has not been large. Corn sacks are still wanted for the colonies. For export generally the rise has effectually stopped business.

HESSIANS have been in request, and prices of these also show an advance. Wheat bags have been taken for November-December at 11, and 8-40" cloth at 7-4, the latter for Bazar.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—The feature of the market has been the heavy fall sustained by Sonapets. Fully twenty-four hours before the issue of the fortnightly progress report, shares were being freely sold in the market to the extent of many thousands, and the information contained in the report justified the acuteness of these bear operations, for it only helped to give the market a further downward impetus. In fact, shares changed hands as low as 1-3 rs. Jute mill scrip has ruled decidedly firmer, and though no very great advance has to be recorded, the feeling is better, and there are more buyers, and holders are not so ready to part with their shares at present low rates. The shares of these mills that have wisely laid in a large stock of jute are firmer and in better request than the others. In miscellaneous stocks the transactions have been below the average. Bengal Paper Mills have hardened somewhat, and Great Easterns have an upward tendency. The transactions in tea shares are unimportant.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 per cent.

BOMBAY, September 3.

Trade in all its branches continues dull, only a small or very moderate demand having been felt for wheat and seeds; while in cotton there is absolutely nothing doing for export, and very little for local spinners' account. Exchange has fluctuated but slightly, and closing rates are 1-16d. lower for Bank Bills, but unchanged for Credits. Money is as abnormally easy as ever. Government Paper has advanced 1-16 per cent., and now stands at the high rate of 108 for Fours for cash. Freight rates have been quiet, with takers of tonnage holding back; and the market is weaker, with some relets offering at a concession of 3d. to 6d. per ton. The import market is very slow both for ready business and in the indent branch; but bazaar dealers in staple goods decline to lower their pretensions, in view of the improvement in Manchester.

MONEY.—The position of this market, induced by the dulness of trade, and by a plethora of unemployed capital which has not of late found its way into those channels that sometimes absorb it when the course of ordinary trade is slack, was emphasised by the Presidency bank's statement of affairs issued on Aug. 31, which, with the minimum rate of interest and discount ruling at 2 per cent., showed an increase in the cash balance during the week covered by the return of some 39½ lacs, bringing the balance up to 365½ lacs. A portion of the increase in balance was due to an accession to Government deposits; but in all the items which go to indicate the state of ordinary trade requirements a diminution of demand was shown, the actual falling off having been represented by some 23½ lacs since the close of the previous week. Meanwhile the position is unchanged, and the Bank of Bombay rate remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been hardly half the amount of business doing in staple grey goods compared with what is usual at this time of the year, owing to the slackness of demand, and stocks are consequently increasing; but sellers refuse to make any concession in rates, owing to the hardening tendency of prices in Manchester following the advance in cotton. Rates, however, are much about the same as they were, and the same remark applies to bleached, dyed, Turkey red, and printed goods, as well as to local-made cloths. The clearances for the week are put down as only 1,600 packages of imported goods, and 1,000 of local.

YARNS.—The market for imported twist has been dull, and only a small business has transpired.

YARN MARKET.—Dull; little or nothing doing.

METALS.—Copper has been taken to a moderate extent only, but prices have advanced 8 as. per cwt., the tone of the market having been steady at the rise. Yellow metal has also been steady at an advance of 4 as. per cwt., but only a small business has been done. Iron has been quiet and unchanged in value, with but little doing in any description.

COAL.—Large vessels of Powell's Duffryn Cardiff for August-September shipment have been made at 14 rs. per ton; and some sales of the same description (float) for September-October shipment at 14½ rs. per ton. A cargo of 5,000 tons of Davison's West Hartley ex Minna Craigs has been sold at from 12½ rs. to 13 rs. per ton.

Exports.—COTTON.—The improvement in the position of this staple in Liverpool and New York has had no effect on this market, which has been duller than ever. No business whatever has transpired for export; while the local mills have taken, in the aggregate, only some 4,000 bales, consisting of Dhollera and Bhownuggur, Oomra descriptions, Dharwar, and Bengals. The tone of the market has been quiet, with latterly a steadier feeling, and prices show no change, but close quiet.

WHEAT.—The tone of the market remained firm, though with only a moderate export business passing, to nearly the end of the week; but thereafter demand from shippers became very slack, and only a small business was done from day to day, the feeling, however, being steady and prices unchanged, with the exception of a decline of half an anna per cwt. all round on Aug. 31.

SEEDS.—Prices of rapeseed gave way to the extent of an anna per cent. at the close of last week; but otherwise the market has been steady on the whole, though no more than a moderate business has been passing on any day.
